A New Pathe Director

Frank Reicher has been placed under contract by Pathe to act and direct. Reicher, once associated with Reinhardt in Germany, was recently with the New York Theatre Guild.

Fox May Grab Vera

Vera Reynolds is negotiating with Fox and probably be placed under a long-term contract by that company. She has been free-lancing.

English Co. Signs Lya de Putti

Lya de Putti has been signed by British International Films, Ltd., to be starred in a series of pictures to be made in their Elstree Studios outside of London. The first will be "The Informer," played on the English dramatic stage and adapted from an Irish novel by Liam O'Flaherty. Miss de Putti sails on the Majestic from New York on February 9th.

Messrs Glazer and Revnes

Benjamin Glazer and Maurice Revnes are en route to New York, due to arrive the latter part of this week. Glazer is going to sign some new faces and also line up Pathe stories for coming year.

Pathe Recalls Carol for Lead

Carol Lombard, borrowed from Pathe by Cecil B. De Mille for the feminine lead in "Dynamite," has been recalled by Pathe for the girl part opposite William Boyd in "High Voltage," Howard Higgins to direct. Miss Lombard has been at M-G-M waiting for work to be started for six weeks without a scene having been shot.

Monroe Salisbury Returns

Monroe Salisbury, retired for several years, returns to the screen in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." He was signed for a talking role last week, capitalizing on his long stage career. Salisbury was a Universal star for several years.

Sedgwick to Megaphone Haines

Ed Sedgwick will direct "The Gob," starring Billie Haines, for M-G-M.

Howes Starts Second Series

Reed Howes starts work on the second series of air pictures for Educational release. They are being produced by Charles R. Rogers, with Joe Brown directing.

Seitz to Handle "Fatal Wedding"

George Seitz will direct "The Fatal Wedding" for Fox, and will also provide his own adaptation of the story.

Walter May Write for Pathe

Engene Walter, Broadway playwright, who came to the Coast for Fox, and recently left the latter organization, is reported negotiating with Pathe to write a series of talkfilms.

Sid Granman Show

Sid Grauman will stage the cabaret floor show for the gala reopening of the Roosevelt Hotel. Grauman is one of the major stockholders in the hotel company.

F. N. Takes Up Mulhall Option

First National has taken up option on contract of Jack Mulhall for the next 12 months. Present plans call for starring Mulhall in six or more Vitaphone productions, which will include both singing and dancing by Mulhall.

F. N. Borrows Anthony

Walter Anthony has been borrowed by First National from Universal to write titles for "Love and the Devil," formerly titled "Comedy of Life." Milton Sills and Maria Corda are featured.

Adamson Adapting Dove Story

Ewart Adamson is writing the adaptation for the next Billie Dove starring picture for First National. No title set.

Dawson to Direct Mackaill

Ralph Dawson, former film cutter and editor at Warner Studios, has been assigned to direct Dorothy Mackail in "The Girl in the Glass Cage" for First National.

Freddie Schader's Story

"The Unholy Family, an original story by Freddie Schader, of the editorial staff of Motion Picture News, will be scenarized for Fox by Scott Darling, whom Fox signed recently to collaborate on a story with Beaulah Marie Dix. But he has been held over to do the other story, which was originally called "The Fourth Offense."

Signed by FBO

Winifred Dunn and Jane Murfin have been placed under contract for one picture each by F B O. Winifred Dunn will do the scenario of "The Viennese Charmer," which is to star Betty Compson. Jane Murfin will adapt "Companionate" from George Kibbe Turner's novel.

Warners Will Star Horton

Edward Everett Horton will be starred in "The Sap" by Warners. Archie Mayo will direct the screen version of William Grew's play, which Robert Lord is adapting.

"Sleepy Valley" Begun

With the sound stages at the Metropolitan studio in Hollywood all set for work, the Sono-Art unit making "Sleepy Valley," first of a series of feature talkies, has started production. It is expected that actual work will take about six weeks and editing and titling two weeks more.

Rayart Signs Irene Rich

Rayart has secured the services of Irene Rich for the title role in "Shanghai Rose," one of the DeLuxe specials. Other players in the cast will be Richard Walling, William Conklin, Ruth Hiatt, Sid Saylor and Robert Dudley. Scott Pembroke is directing.

More Players Signed

Julanne Johnston, Martha Franklin and Julia Swayne Gordon have been added to the cast of Columbia's "The Younger Generation."

"The Veiled Woman"

Emmett Flynn is directing "The Veiled Woman" for Fox.

A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your "talkie" prints are on Eastman film — famous for uniformity — your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

Exhibitors DAILY REVIEW

OPINIONS

By W. R. WILKERSON

SHORT REELS

Paramount has three short subjects now running at the Criterion that far surpass any other sound shorts yet made. They are "Two Little Chinese Maids", "Highlowbrow" and "The False Alarm Fire Company." These subjects run the gamut of subject matter for pictures of the short reel variety in sound. "Two Little Chinese Maids" presents music, song and a bit of a dance, done in a set and with lighting that stamps it as unusual. "Highlowbrow" is a short for the better type audiences in cities and towns where the crow of a chicken is an unusual noise. "The False Alarm Fire Company" is sound comedy in its "nth" and will be a riot wherever shown. The three of them will relieve any exhibitor of a lot of worry, for after seeing them he will be in a position to say to himself—"if a company can make them so good in such a variety as I have seen, I need not have any worry where I am going to get the short reels I want in sound."

You're absolutely right Mr. Wilkerson and it's the opinion of every thinking exhibitor:

In SOUND SHORT FEATURES too, there's only one REAL LEADER—

JUST as Paramount's great talking feature pictures, like "Interference", "The Wolf of Wall Street" and "The Doctor's Secret", are the talk of the screen world—so Paramount Sound Short Features are being hailed as the class of market! The only singing, talking, dancing shorts of the ONE AND ONLY PARAMOUNT QUALITY! Starring the most famous artists of stage and films. Breezy, of dazzling variety, entertainment gems! Produced with the same lavish care and talent as Paramount features. And perfectly recorded! Broadway is raving about them. Your people will too.

7 Great PARAMOUNT Sound Shorts playing Broadway now!

CRITERION. Smith and Dale in "FALSE ALARM FIRE COMPANY"; "TWO LITTLE CHINESE MAIDS"; "HIGH-LOWBROW".

RIALTO. Octavus Roy Cohen laugh riot, "THE MELANCHOLY DAME"; Christie Talking Play and RUTH ETTING, Ziegfeld Blues Singer.

FACTS: ABOUT PACENT REPRODUCER SYSTEMS

And the organization behind them

It's not good business to buy sound equipment with your eyes shut, without the full facts before you. Pacent Reproducer Corporation wants every exhibitor throughout the country to know the facts about Pacent Reproducer Systems. That is why we publish this advertisement, a plain statement of their merits and advantages in your theatre.

Pacent Reproducer Systems are being

SERVED

By These Leading Producers:

PARAMOUNT
M-G-M
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
VITAPHONE
UNITED ARTISTS
FIRST NATIONAL WARNER BROTHERS

All complete equipment is designed by Pacent engineers and manufactured in our own factories. No makeshift or substitute material used.

Every Exhibitor Wants These Facts About Pacent Reproducer Systems Before Buying Sound Equipment

1 ALL ELECTRIC OPERATION: Batteries have no place in any Pacent Reproducer System. Our equipment operates direct from any 110 volt 60 cycle alternating current commercial outlet. No batteries of any kind used.

2 HIGHEST QUALITY REPRODUCTION: We want exhibitors to hear our systems in operation and judge the quality of reproduction for themselves. You will agree with us that Pacent Reproducer Systems set a new standard of quality performance.

3 COMPACT AND EFFICIENT: All amplifying equipment housed in a single steel cabinet, conveniently small in size, that fits in almost anywhere.

Pacent Amplifiers combine compactness with special design features which make them, weight for weight, 25% more efficient than other amplifiers for theatre use.

4 LOW PRICE: Pacent Reproducer Systems stand in a price class by themselves. Never before have synchronous full double channel reproducer systems been available at such low prices.

$2,500 buys the Model 2MDA Pacent System, for houses with seating capacity not over 2,000 seats.

$3,500 for Model 4MDA Pacent System for theatres from 2,000 to 4,000 seats.

5 FILM ATTACHMENT SOON READY: Pacent Reproducer Systems are now built for the disc method of reproduction. The Pacent Film attachment will soon be available for sound-on-film method of reproduction.

6 INSTALLATION AND SERVICE: Complete service department now functioning at top efficiency. Trained engineers in charge of every installation. Dozens of telegrams from exhibitors tell of wonderful job done by our men.

30 service depots now being established throughout the country to supervise installation and upkeep of Pacent Reproducer Systems.

"INTERCHANGEABILITY"

A Statement of Policy

The success of Vitaphone subjects, both features and shorts, their proven box office value and the general enthusiastic approval with which they have been and are being received, has been due to two major factors:

1. The unremitting care exercised in their production —the constant effort, without regard to production cost, to improve the product in all its aspects,— technically, artistically and as entertainment.
2. The excellence of the studio recording equipment and theatre reproducing equipment manufactured by Western Electric and its subsidiary company, Electric Research Products, Inc.,—of which The Vitaphone Corporation is the original licensee— backed up by exhaustive and continuous research of the engineering staffs of those companies and of Bell Telephone Laboratories.

It would not be in the interests of the public, the exhibitors or The Vitaphone Corporation to lower the standards of quality which have created the present widespread demand for Vitaphone product and for equipment by means of which it may be reproduced.

Inadequate reproduction of Vitaphone product, by means of inferior equipment, while it might yield temporary gain to exhibitors and to the Vitaphone Corporation, would in the long run be damaging to the individual exhibitors, to The Vitaphone Corporation and to the industry.

The Vitaphone Corporation, therefore, will require reproduction of its product by means of equipment which operates properly, reliably and efficiently to reproduce the same with adequate volume and quality equal to that obtained by the use of equipment supplied by Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Where such satisfactory equipment is installed, The Vitaphone Corporation will, subject to its regular sales policies and then existing commitments, enter into negotiations with the exhibitor for its product.

Needed: Manpower

The Merger Industry Has Been Working Overtime

By William A. Johnston

I ASKED a banker the other day about a certain listed stock in the commodity field. "It's no good," said he. "But," I ventured, "There is talk of a merger."

He laughed. "It was a merger that killed the company," said he. "The merger was brought about a few years ago by a serious situation of overproduction. I, myself, helped to put the merged factories together. The merger was an economic readjustment, and necessary, and correctly done. But then they threw out the former executives, put in efficiency engineers and in two years went to pot. Another merger won't save the business. What it now needs is manpower."

And, curiously enough, all business the country over is awakening to identically the same feeling toward mergers.

The merger industry has been working over time, the past year.

And people are now asking: What do mergers accomplish? They will continue to ask.

Well, one answer is already plain: they accomplish nothing if they don't accomplish manpower.

Wall Street likes mergers because bankers make profits on new securities; also they re-dress the investment shop window. But how the merged properties will fare is altogether another matter.

Products and business are reflections of the men who build and run them. It is unwise to destroy these individualities. There is already a revolt against standardization by the buying public; and it will continue.

In a vital speech the other day Frank Gannett, who, I believe, will some day have the greatest chain of newspapers in the world, said that his basic policy was to preserve the policies, politics and personality of each newspaper acquired, even to increase, if possible, its individuality.

Picture theatres have a good deal in common with newspapers.

Grocery stores have little in common; they sell bargains and service.

But a picture theatre, like a newspaper, is part and parcel of a community's mental, moral and social life.

I do not say that theatre chains cannot be successfully operated, as successfully as were the independently owned theatres. But I do say that it will prove to be the hardest job facing any man in this business today.

The merger is easy; the operation is a super-problem.

The theatre chain must have ideals—at the top; and somehow, someway, their ideals must be transmuted into the operation of each theatre so that it has a personality in its community.

That means manpower.

Years ago I asked E. V. Richards, a pioneer in chain theatre operation, just how far the chains would go.

"As far," said he, "as the managers will go."

And that statement holds good to-day. The chain theatre manager's job is one of the most vital in this business. It will be he who makes his theatre recognized as an intimate part of the community life or just an entertainment machine run by robots.

Get Out of the Rut

BERT ADLER writes us that our editorial last week, "Profitable Warfare," hits the situation at the box office right in the bull's eye. He continues:

"Industry interest has been focused in mergers and competitor-elimination and reduction of overhead—including advertising overhead, which ought never to be reduced. Last week I played a picture I own in a theatre that had cut its advertising bill in half due to recent elimination of competition. I made them go back to their former appropriation and then add 60 per cent.

"This theatre had been doing poorly ever since before the holidays; but with this splendid advertising campaign, the exhibitor did well over normal business and paid for the increased advertising many times over.

"As a business, we have gotten into a rut on the advertising side and I am sure that every motion picture advertising man must heartily agree with you that if there were an advertising revival in this business today, it would do more good to the box office than sound pictures and Wall Street combined."

Great Work!

CONGRATULATIONS to our contemporary, The Film Daily, on its Year Book for 1929. Eleven hundred pages of indispensable information, assembled with fine judgment and care, and, beyond all doubt, the highwater mark of this enterprise to date. Great work!

Pictures and Prosperity

THE importance of the picture theatre in community prosperity is brought out forcefully in a recent article in the Portland Oregonian, which we call to the attention of all exhibitors.

Robert M. Mount, manager of the Better Business Bureau of that city, is quoted as saying: "Portland theatre buildings represent an investment of $8,000,000. The weekly payroll of the theatres in Portland amounts to more than $42,000.

"For the weekly upkeep of one first-run house, such as West Coast Broadway, over $15,000 a week is expended. This amount includes taxes, rental, payroll, insurance carried locally, licenses and general upkeep.

"It took the English and the French to show us what our movies are doing for us. They saw, long before we did, that trade was following the film, and that unless they were careful American goods were going to fill the market. English shoe manufacturers began to complain because their customers asked for American-made shoes. Sewing machine companies began to receive orders from Sumatra. As one of the British trade leaders said at the time, people were going to the movies as to animated catalogues.

"It thus became apparent that if films were helping American business abroad, they must be doing considerably more at home, where the wares shown in pictures were easily acquired. Surveys and investigations have proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that this is true. There is hardly a business in the country today which does not benefit in sales because of the movies.

"The people of Portland need to realize the importance of the motion picture theatre as a commercial asset to this city," Mr. Mount concluded. "They need to recognize in the motion picture theatre not only a place where one may go for an hour or two of much needed recreation and pleasure, but a source of added revenue in business enterprises which, on the face of them, have no earthly connection with the moving picture screen. They need to recognize that the screen is working for them day after day without charging a fee in return."

Myers Charges Indie Exhibitors Discriminated Against By Producers

Brown in Hollywood Makes Sweeping Denial of Merger Rumors

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.—Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO arrived here today and took occasion immediately to deny a number of rumors when verification of them was sought from him. Asked if there was a contemplated merger with Paramount-Publix, Mr. Brown answered with an emphatic "No." He said there was to be no merger with any other company.

Mr. Brown will be here for three weeks to start production with William Le Baron, who is due to arrive next Tuesday with completed plans. As exclusively reported in Motion Picture News some weeks ago RKO is getting away from making program features only and will splurge on big specials of road-show type, such as "Rio Rita," "Hit the Deck" and others.

Drastic Shakeup at Stanley Co. Philly Office

Many Dropped; Exploitation, Billing Depts. Suspended; Finkelstein Over Bookers

The general shake up in the offices of the Stanley Company in Philadelphia has been marked by wholesale removals of employees and drastic reductions in salaries. Spyrous and Charles Skouras and William Goldman have been in Philadelphia looking over the situation and making changes in the interests of economy. Meetings have been held daily in the Earle Building, and frequent conferences have been held with the new management. Managers of downtown and neighborhood houses, many of them veterans, have been removed, at least temporarily, and whether they will be reinstated later remains to be seen. It is stated that the new management favors the elimination of assistant managers, and there has been a general cutting down of many minor employees.

Suspend Departments

Spyrous Skouras, it is announced, will divide his time between New York and Philadelphia, and William Goldman, his personal representative, will spend the greater part f his time in Philly. The exploitation and bill-posting departments have been temporarily suspended, and there will be a general change in advertising policy, the tendency being toward a more dignified form of publicity. It is announced that all printing will be done in New York.

The booking offices will remain in Philadelphia under the supervision of Daniel Finkelstein, with the former Stanley bookers, William Herkenreider, William Clark and Jack Delmar as assistants. Si Fabian, who has been doing the film buying for the Stanley Company, will continue to purchase pictures for the Warner chain in New York. H. C. Hodgens, of the firm of Hodgens & Hill, local architects, has been made supervising architect, assisting I. Silverman. Jules Catsiff, former Stanley purchasing agent, is now acting as chief purchasing agent for Warner Theatres in New York. Irving D. Rossheim, president of the Stanley Company, has been in Florida during this period of readjustment.

Wesco's Ritz Fast Becoming a "White Elephant"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—West Coast's Ritz theatre, a 2,000-seater on the southern border of Hollywood, is apparently finding it tough sledding to keep out of the red. Although wired several months ago, the talking picture, widely advertised, failed to show any appreciable improvement in business. Studio previews are held out as special inducements to patrons at least twice weekly.

About six weeks ago, the name of William Fox was inserted in large electric letters on top of the roof, with West Coast officials experimenting with the idea to determine whether the Fox name would help the draw. Topping all of these efforts to put the house across, an amateur dramatic stock company puts on one act sketches every Friday and Saturday night. Unfortunately, the players are decidedly amateurish with the audience declaring their intention of keeping away on dramatic sketch nights.

Rogell Said to Have Signed to Do Series in England

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Al Rogell, director of the Ken Maynard series for First National, is reported to have signed with Trafalgar Film Company, Ltd., British producer, to direct a series of features in England.

SPEAKS AT MINNEAPOLIS

Alleges Service Refused On Sound Films; Claims Other Unfair Tactics

MINNEAPOLIS, February 5. — Sensational charges against producers were made in a speech today before 250 independent exhibitors from Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin assembled here in open conference, by Abram F. Myers, former Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and now President and General Counsel of the Allied States Association.

The conference was held under the auspices of the Northwest Theatre Owners Association, of which W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis, is President.

The principal discussion at the convention was the situation said to be confronting independent theatre owners as a result of the sound revolution.

Speaking on this point, Myers declared: "Under the system now in vogue the independent owners are virtually unable to obtain any of the talking or sound motion pictures. The producers have the last say in approving the machine used and unless the independents have installed the machine manufactured by these producers instead of others that are cheaper and equally good they withhold their sanction, with resultant hardship on the exhibitor."

An injunction to restrain these alleged practices, with a view to compel the producers to service the exhibitors regardless of the equipment employed is now being sought by Myers from the Department of Justice.

No Instances Cited

The Allied head did not cite any specific instances of service refusal to exhibitors by producers.

Taking up the subject of block booking, Myers said the exhibitor has no chance to discriminate in the choice of films.

The entrance of the producer into the exhibition field has, said he, "brought about the instability and unrest which characterizes the motion picture industry today. Such competition, declared Myers, has produced "a more critical situation than is presented by chain store competition in other lines. The producer represents the

Thomson, As A. B. C. Head, Seeks, in Sales Talk, To Swell A. B. C. Memberships

In Speech to Large A.M.P.A. Meeting, Recommends Classification of Circulation

P. L. THOMSON, Director of Public Relations for Western Electric and President of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, made a sales talk Thursday, February 7, for increased publisher memberships in the A. B. C.. It was one of the biggest meetings ever held by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

Mr. Thomson strongly urged the A. M. P. A. to start a movement for bringing about membership in the A. B. C. by all the picture trade papers. P. A. Parsons, of Pathe, pointed out that several years ago the A. M. P. A. had taken the lead in such a plan, as a result of which most of the papers joined the A. B. C., but after some time, he added, most of them had ceased to be members.

In his speech, Mr. Thomson made it very clear "that what I have said is in no respect intended as a reflection upon the honesty of trade papers in this industry that do not have an A. B. C. audit."

Says "Hunches" Guide Buyers

In his sales talk, the Western Electric executive alleged that advertising was bought in this field for the most part on hunches and guesswork. "You would be helping yourselves and the press," he said to the advertising men present, "if you would set up, as a matter of common interest, a yard stick for measuring circulation (meaning the A. B. C.)."

One of the highlights of his talk was a suggestion that trade paper circulation be classified in two parts: Film Users and Non-Film Users. This classification would be worked out, "if the motion picture industry desires to avail itself of the services of the A. B. C.," he said.

Under Film Users, he would group the following: officials of theatre chains; independent theatre operators; and theatre managers who do not do film buying for their houses.

Non-Users would be grouped thus: producers, distributors and exchanges; newsstand.

This classification, by the way, was made by Motion Picture News of its own circulation several years ago on its own initiative, and at considerable expense, and it has been available to advertisers since that time, with constant revisions being made to keep up with the changes in the industry.

"U" Leases Globe in N. Y. for "Showboat"

UNIVERSAL has concluded an extended lease with Charles B. Dillingham for the use of the Globe Theatre in New York City, where the super-Movietone production of "Showboat" will be shown. The New York premiere will be held late in March or early in April.

The Globe now houses the stage success, "Three Cheers," with Will Rogers and Dorothy Stone. It is not wired for Movietone, but Western Electric equipment will be installed in the theatre late this month.

March 1 Will See Finish of Fox N. Y. Deals

Detail Work For Absorbing Independents Will Have Been Ended by Then

Much detail work remains to be cleared up before the owners of the 200 odd independent theatres in the New York zone will finally leave the reins of control to William Fox and receive their cash and turn their holdings over to Fox Metropolitan Theatres, Inc. From 200 to 300 accountants and auditors are now balancing books, checking land fees, mortgages and doing similar work preparatory to the final consumation of the deal which will probably be over by the end of the month.

It appears that the deals, as announced, will go through.

Northwest Pa. Unit Endorses M. P. T. O. A.

The M. P. T. O. A. was endorsed at a recent meeting of the theatre owners of Northwest Pennsylvania. The gathering also voted a pledge of continued support to the national exhibitor organization. John J. Galvin, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., chairman of the board of the Pennsylvania unit, notified President R. F. Woodhull of the Pennsylvania unit's action.

Warner Deal For Taking Over Equity Chain Set

Negotiations Completed For Operating Independent Firm in the East

A deal to operate the 35 houses of the Equity chain, the independent group of theatres in opposition to the Stanley circuit in the Pennsylvania-New Jersey area, has been completed by Warner Brothers. The houses will be under the control of Warner-Equity Theatres, a new firm capitalized at $2,000,000. The Equity holdings in Philadelphia, comprising 16 theatres, was formed about a year ago by Green and Altman through pooling a number of independent houses. Warner-Equity will carry out an expansion program. Its incorporators include: J. J. Newman, of Warner-Stanley, A. M. Cohen and Jacob M. Cohen.

Sax Lines Up 12 Pictures for The New Season

A definite schedule of 12 sound pictures, eleven of them to have dialogue has been announced by Sam Sax, president of Gotham. The dozen will be known under the Gotham slogan of "The Talking Twelve."

Two of the total have been completed, "Times Square" and "The River Woman." The latter picture is the only one of the group that will not have dialogue. It has been synchronized with sound effects and a musical accompaniment; Lionel Barrymore and Jacqueline Logan are the co-stars.

German Device Reproduces American Sound-on-Films

A new unified device, sponsored by the German Toblid Syndicate Company (Tobias), recently was given demonstration at the Berlin Westend Theatre. The machine can be attached to any usual German projector, together with amplifying and loud speakers. The device runs the normal width film, and has the sound tract inside the sprocket holes. Toblid claims interchangeability with any English, American or German sound-on-film system for the apparatus.

Ohio Unit Defers Move on Allied Affiliation

THE board of trustees of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio at their annual meeting held recently in Columbus, O., deferred action on the proposed affiliation with Allied States. The proposition was freely discussed, but it was decided to watch the progress of the Allied organizations before taking any definite steps in the matter.

Industry Fights Admission Tax Bills In 15 States; Censorship War Rages

OHIO IS BATTLEGROUND

Repeal of All Censor Laws Sought; Similar Bills Introduced In New York

THE fight for screen freedom, and against the oppressions and injustice of political censorship, went forward on several fronts this week.

Bills have been introduced in both houses of the Ohio Legislature providing for censorship of talkies. On February 5, however, Senator George H. Bender of Cleveland offered a bill providing complete repeal of all picture censorship laws in that State.

In New York, measures which would kill film censorship were introduced at Albany by Assemblymen Steingut and Cuvillier. The latter's bill declares that sound censorship is a violation of the free speech provisions of the Constitution.

Meanwhile, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court rendered a decision that the state board had the right, under the Act of 1915, which was adopted before talkies were heard of, to pass upon the spoken part of sound pictures.

Additionally, censorship bills have been introduced in Connecticut and Nebraska.

Changes in the Massachusetts censorship law are sought in a bill introduced in the Legislatnre by the Massachusetts Library Club. While the main object of the measure is to alter censorship of books, the bill also affects the entire matter of censorship and is receiving much attention from the motion picture industry.

A determined battle against the Johnson talkie censorship bill in Ohio is being made by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the state under the leadership of P. J. Wood, business manager of the organization. He has appealed to the Ohio newspapers to aid editorially in the fight for free speech on the screen.

Would Increase Fees

The Ohio bill provides for an increase of $150,000 a year in fees charged producers for censoring films by raising the rate from $1 per reel to $4. Film censorship fees at the old rate amounted to more than $50,000 annually. Under the new bill they would total well above $200,000 a year.

The bill also provides that the Director of Education may appoint an unlimited

THEATRE admission taxes have been proposed in the following fifteen states:

Colorado	10%
Connecticut	2%	on gross
Idaho	10%
Indiana	10%
Michigan	5%	on gross
Missouri	10%
No. Carolina, $10 per reel and	5%	admission
Iowa	$2	per reel
Kansas	5%
Ohio	$4	per reel
Oregon	2%	on gross
Tennessee	10%
Vermont	10%
West Virginia	10%
South Dakota	10%

In addition to the above, bills have been drawn for presentation in Mississippi, Nebraska and Utah, and tax bills are expected later in Oklahoma, Montana, Minnesota and South Carolina.

Dan R. Hanna, Ohio Publisher, Hits Censorship

Sees Attack Threatened on All Forms of Free Speech

Dan R. Hanna, President of "The Cleveland News," and one of the leading newspaper publishers in the country, has sent "Motion Picture News" a strong expression of opinion against censorship of talking pictures. Mr. Hanna writes:

"It is my opinion that legal censorship of dialogue in motion pictures is a wedge which threatens our constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

"Censorship of spoken drama, censorship of speech and censorship of the printed word is a natural consequence following censorship of dialogue. As a publisher, therefore, I am opposed to any legal limitation to our constitutional rights, especially that which affects free expression of thought."

New Puzzle for Courts

"The Tulsa Daily World" editorializes as follows:

"Inasmuch as seven states and 30 cities were given censorious powers over the movies before the 'talkie' made its advent, it is reasonable to suppose that the courts soon will be asked to pass on this new puzzle. It is interesting to recall that the Bill

TAX SITUATION SERIOUS

Millions Would Be Added to Exhibitors' Burdens If Measures Are Adopted

A SERIOUS situation confronts exhibitors and the industry in twenty-two states as a result of admission tax legislation, pending or threatened.

Bills which, if they became laws, would put a burden of millions of dollars annually on picture theatres, have been introduced in Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, Iowa, Kansas, Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee, Vermont, West Virginia and South Dakota.

In addition bills have been drawn or are expected later in seven other states.

The most serious admission tax situations are in Michigan, Ohio, Colorado, North Carolina, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas.

As an instance of the seriousness of these, Speaker Ming, of the Michigan House, has made the amusement tax bill an "administrative matter." He estimates the revenue to be derived in Michigan to be between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 a year.

Serious Situation

In Indiana, the ten per cent admission tax was proposed to the Legislature by the Indiana Farm Bureau Federation. William H. Settle, president, announced the farm bloc will seek the amusement tax to raise $2,000,000 annually.

In addition to the tax situation, other adverse measures of several kinds have been introduced. There are bills to regulate the attendance of children in theatres in Colorado, Maryland, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York and Oregon, and similar measures will probably appear in Texas, North Carolina and Iowa.

Other laws, such as daylight saving, Sunday closing, tax on foreign corporations aimed at chain theatres, and labor measures, 55 in number, may be added to the above which brings the total to 156 bills pending.

Idaho exhibitors have won the first round of their battle against a state admission tax. Assisted by Jim Hone, secretary of the Allied Amusements of the Northwest, they waged a wordy battle before the gathering of Idaho State Chamber Commerce, since which time the Cham-

Bruce Gallup United Artists Publicity Chief

Resignations are Accepted From Shapiro, Lazarus Beach and Moyer

Bruce Gallup, well known publicity and advertising man, has been appointed Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation for United Artists to succeed Victor M. Shapiro, resigned.

Resignations have also been accepted from Paul N. Lazarus, sales promotion manager; Frank Beach, assistant secretary, and Charles E. Moyer, foreign publicity.

The Executive Committee of United Artists, consisting of Al Lichtman, Harry Buckley and Arthur Kelly, issued a statement denying flatly reports printed in another paper to the effect that any employee of the company had severed relations because of "Mr. Schenck's dissatisfaction with the way things were going."

The resignations were accepted, the Committee said, as part of a reorganization plan in the interests of economy.

Streimer and Thompson Remain

The committee also denied that Moe Streimer of the New York Exchange and Nathaniel Thompson, sales comptroller, were leaving. As to the four men whose resignations were accepted, the statement said: "These men have been loyal, efficient and faithful in their work. Letters in which their work was commended have been given all of them, and these letters noted Mr. Schenck's appreciation of their competence and industry."

Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution, denied that any changes in the field force were planned at this time.

Warren Nolan continues to handle publicity, as before. Victor Shapiro plans a vacation, his first in three years, after which he will probably enter production on the Coast or join a Wall Street brokerage house.

George Abbott Will Direct "Children" for Paramount

"The Children," a filmization of Edith Wharton's novel as a 100 per cent talkie and also in silent form, will be directed for Paramount by George Abbott, stage director who leaves late this week for Hollywood, where preparatory work is in progress.

Lionel Barrymore May Retire from Acting

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, January 7.—Lionel Barrymore may possibly retire completely from acting with the completion of his first feature directorial effort. This is "Madame X," which the famous actor is making for M-G-M. Barrymore has proved his ability to direct to M-G-M's satisfaction with a dramatic screenlet called "Confession."

Films Ranked in Same Class With Steel

MOTION pictures are raised to the same level with the steel, foodstuffs, textiles and motor industries by the U. S. Government inasmuch as officials of the Department of Commerce will have the Motion Picture Section made into a division on July 1 next, when the Government's fiscal year begins.

Laemmle Lets Out 20 On Coast In New Shakeup

Employees Drawing Salary Waiting Equipment Are Dismissed

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Deadwood has been eliminated from Universal City in a shakeup made by Carl Laemmle. The president of Universal left Hollywood Wednesday for New York, and just before doing so he ordered all of those taken off the payroll who are not absolutely needed and who are not under contract to Universal.

The eliminations become effective Saturday of this week and include about twenty employees.

Most of those who have been given notice of dismissal have been drawing salaries while awaiting the arrival of more sound equipment.

This equipment has been expected from time to time, but it has not yet been installed, and will not be for a month or more. Meantime, those who have been let out, and will be needed with the arrival and installation of the new equipment, will again be signed as their services are required.

Schlesinger Is Appointed to European Post

Seven years ago Gus Schlesinger established the foreign department for Warner Bros. when he was appointed general manager of the Warners interests in Europe. Last week he climbed another rung of the ladder when the announcement of his appointment to the advanced post of Warners European ambassador extraordinary was made by H. M. Warner, president of Warner Bros.

He will be general manager of all the Warner enterprises on the Continent. Under his jurisdiction will come the distribution of all pictures released by Warners in Europe, First National and Vitaphone, as well as supervision of National Films A. G. of Berlin and the Vitaphone studio opening soon in the German capital. His position in the foreign field will be second to none in executive responsibility, Warner Bros. announces.

New Skouras Class B. Stock For Holders

Will Have Opportunity to Secure Position of Voting and Controlling Issue

Holders of Skouras A will have the opportunity of converting their stock into Skouras B, the voting issue, and controlling the Skouras Brothers' Enterprise of St. Louis. The A stock is now on an annual dividend base of $3 a share, and if the stock earns more than $3 a share the A stock will share with the B stock the surplus earnings. The Skouras B was recently purchased by the Warner Brothers at about $3,000,000 for the entire issue.

The Skouras Brothers, Spyros, Charley and George, are on the Warner payroll for combined salaries reported to aggregate something like $250,000 a year or less. Harry Koplar is thought to have quietly passed out of the picture with much coin of the realm. He was formerly the principal partner of the Skouras Brothers in the St. Louis Amusement Co., which the Skouras Brothers control, and it is rumored that he sold his stock for cash, whereas other holders of the St. Louis Amusement and Skouras B stock who sold to Warners are said to have traded in for Warner stock.

Sales Staff of RKO Productions Discusses Plans

RKO Productions, Inc., held a regional sales meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York last Sunday with leading executives and branch managers from many cities in attendance. Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager presided, and Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of RKO Productions, and Lee Marcus, vice-president addressed the assemblage. The session was devoted to a discussion of sales and distribution problems.

Dorothy Fields, Jimmy Mc Hugh Signed by RKO

Jimmy Mc Hugh and Dorothy Fields, song writers have been signed by William Le Baron, vice-president of RKO Productions in charge of production. They will write songs of new productions.

"Iron Mask" to Follow "Sins" Into Rivoli

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' "The Iron Mask," his first talking picture, will have its first world premiere showing at the New York Rivoli where it will follow "The Sins of the Fathers," now playing. A gala first night is planned and the star is expected to be present as the guest of honor. All seats will be reserved and sold at advanced prices. As yet no date has been set.

Jolson Piles Up $42,000 in Five Day S. F. Record

Personal Appearance Will Smash All His Marks With $59,000

The box-office magnetism of Al Jolson whether in a picture or personal appearance is again attested at San Franciseo, where the musical comedy and picture star is smashing house records by his personal appearance without the aid of anything in the way of a feature picture.

Jolson is appearing at the West Coast's Warfield theatre in the Bay City and in his first five days he smashed all records for that house by attracting a gross of $42,000. Indications, according to a wire from San Franciseo, are that he will do between $58,000 and $59,000 by the end of the week.

The $42,000 which Jolson piled up in the first five days was but $2,000 short of the previous week's record made by Gilbert and Garbo with "A Woman of Affairs." And the latter played an extra midnight show.

The previous high personal appearance record made by Jolson was $57,800 made at the Metropolitan in Los Angeles last year. The management of the Warfield in San Franciseo expresses every confidence that he will break that before the expiration of the current week.

More remarkable is the present record in that Jolson is practically the entire drawing card. He has nothing to support him in the way of a feature picture. The only picture attractions at the Warfield are two Fox shorts, "Napoleon's Barber" and "The Diplomats."

Believes Bureau for Synopsizing Stories Is Need

The belief that a central bureau for the synopsizing of the world's story material is urgently needed and that the principal film companies will ultimately find it necessary to establish such a bureau, is held by Edwin Gelsey, newly appointed head of the story department at the Pathe Culver City studio. "A bureau in connection with the Hays organization would seem the best for this work which demands world combing of published fiction and dramatic literature," says Mr. Gelsey.

There are several companies now engaged in synopsizing stories and this work could just as well be done by one company, he argues.

Eve Southern Signed to Star for Tiffany-Stahl

A long-term stella contract has been signed by Eve Southern with Tiffany-Stahl for whom she has been appearing in current productions. Her contralto voice will be heard from the screen for the first time in "Whispering Winds," a Tiffany-Stahl singing and talking production.

William Wrigley Reported Behind $5,000,000 Film Schedule of Short Subjects

This Minister Okays Sunday Shows

DR. CLINTON WUNDER, pastor of the Baptist Temple in Rochester, N. Y., declared in an address before the Kiwanis Club in Trenton, N. J., that Sunday motion pictures had played an important part in improving moral conditions in that city. Dr. Wunder further stated that the clergy is coming to realize more and more the vital part which motion pictures occupy in the community.

Columbia Ties Up With Victor For Short Series

Will Produce Talking and Sound Subjects At Camden Plant

Columbia Pictures Corporation has entered into an agreement with the Victor Talking Machine Company whereby they will combine in the making of a series of talking and sound short subjects. Columbia will have at its disposal all of the recording facilities, resources and technical experience of the Victor Company's studios and laboratories at Camden, New Jersey. Production is to start immediately.

While these shorts are in the process of production Columbia will continue with its regular program of features at the company studios on the West Coast. Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, and H. L. Sommerer, of the Victor Company, worked out the details of the plan for the making of sound pictures in the Camden plant.

Draw on Victor Artists

According to the announcement from Columbia that company not only will have the advantage of Victor's technical experts and studio facilities, but also the tremendous array of talking and singing talent, which includes the most prominent names in the legitimate, vaudeville and operatic fields.

In discussing the arrangement, Joe Brandt, of Columbia, said:

"We intend among our short subjects to issue a series of musical features that will be a credit to any program. These will present outstanding musicians, singers and dancers in elaborate settings. We are going out after the biggest names before the public today and are prepared to pay for their services on a scale that will amply compensate them for their performances before the camera."

Chewing Gum Manufacturer Said to Be Negotiating For Services of Big Stage Stars

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR., millionaire chewing gum manufacturer, is backing a $5,000,000 plan for short length talkies, according to authoritative information received this week. The pictures will be one or two reelers and will feature some of the biggest names in the amusement world, including John Barrymore, Paul Whiteman, Eddie Cantor, Rosa Ponselle, and Amelita Galli-Curci.

The only advertising angle to be incorporated will be a caption at the end of the pictures, naming Wrigley as the producer, and identifying him as the well-known manufacturer of Spearmint, etc.

The idea back of the Wrigley talkies is reported to be the securing of star names of such magnitude that box office drawing power will automatically be insured to the theatre.

Distribution Arranged

According to report, distribution has already been arranged with a prominent film concern.

As an instance of the marketability of the product, it is said one of the biggest circuits has already booked the films to play its entire chain of theatres.

The plan is to make Wrigley talkies in every way fully up to the highest standards in entertainment value. John Barrymore, it is said, will receive $100,000 for a picture, while Eddie Cantor will get about $250,000 for series. Other famous stars, including a number from the operatic stage, are being signed up, it is said.

Producers Ban Mailing Stars' Photos To Fans

All members of the Association of Motion Pieture Producers have decided to discontinue mailing free autographed photos to fans, thus following the lead of Paramount, which inaugurated the system months ago.

Charge of ten cents will be made for five by seven inch photos and twenty-five cents for eight by tens. The tremendous cost of mailing and printing is responsible for the decision, since millions of such photos are sent monthly from all studios.

Westinghouse Plans Larger Ad Program

Company Will Be Publicized in Trade, Technical and Business Fields

An advertising program that will be greatly increased over previous campaigns is planned for the current year by Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, a statement issued by J. C. McQuiston, general advertising manager of Westinghouse, asserts.

The increase in the number of products manufactured by the concern makes it advisable to change technical advertising to keep step, declares Mr. McQuiston. In addition to the usual Westinghouse advertising covering a single product, it is planned to make extensive use of group advertisements calling attention to the line of goods that Westinghouse is equipped to offer various industries.

It is one aim of the campaign to expand the electrical industry, it is announced, by informing the public of the importance of electricity and it is also the company's intention, according to Mr. McQuiston's statement, to be of direct service to the distributors of electrical products by direct advertising cooperation with such distributors.

Says Producer Methods Are Not Fair to Indies

only source of supply. It is necessarily limited and self-interest dictates that the producer owned theatre be given every preference in the amount and quality of films, in protection and in every other way and since each producer chain affords a profitable outlet for the product of other producers, it follows that they often discriminate in favor of each other as against the independent exhibitor."

Praises Exhibitors

The independent exhibitors' efforts are at present being unfairly minimized, as is the part they have played in the development of the industry, Myers declared.

"Those who marvel at the great accomplishments of the producers, from which I do not detract one whit, may still pause and inquire whether they have not been building largely upon the intelligence, energy, resources and good will of exhibitors," he added. "We do not believe that the elimination of the independent exhibitor is required by any inexorable economic law, such law often being confused with unfair and discriminatory practices. We do not believe that there is any principle of economics which calls for the elimination of the alert, intelligent exhibitor who is playing his part better than any one can play it for him."

Paramount Earnings Figured at $8,500,000

FOR the year ended Dec. 31 last, Paramount will probably show between $8,500,000 and $9,000,000 or about $4.35 per share on 2,063,517 shares, estimates the New York Telegram. Taking into account income from new properties and from films now released and just getting into their full earning power, provisional estimates for the present year indicate a net of around $11,000,000 to $13,000,000, the newspaper states. The figures are equivalent to $5.50 or $6.50 a share on the present capital.

M-G-M to Make "Trader Horn" in East Africa

Will Establish Headquarters at Narobi, About 200 Miles Inland

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—M-G-M has definitely decided to produce "Trader Horn" in Africa. Company and staff are scheduled to leave here March 11th, with British East Africa as their destination.

George E. Kann, who will act as supervisor of the picture, left here Wednesday for New York; and departs from New York within a few weeks for Africa with the advance guard of the producing unit. The first group will consist of Clyde De Vinna, first cameraman; one second cameraman; two laboratory experts, one electrician and one grip.

The regular group is scheduled to depart from here March 11th, and will include W. S. Van Dyke, director; Red Golden, assistant; and staff of about 25; in addition to the three principal players in the picture. Mary Nolan has been borrowed from Universal and will play the featured girl part.

Plans call for establishment of a complete developing and printing laboratory, semi-portable; so that negative and positive films can be processed every day.

It is expected that the company will remain in Africa until late Fall. Headquarters will be established in Narobi, about two hundred miles inland; and locations will be spotted from that point.

Bill Barring Sex Film Traffic Up at Wash., D. C.

A prohibition upon the importation or interstate transportation of motion picture or other films showing directly or by implication, by pictorial representation or by title, any sex crime, is contemplated under a bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Cannon of Missouri. The legislation was introduced by request, it is stated in the measure.

Violation of the provisions of the bill would entail a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment at hard labor for not more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

AMPA Lists Program for Masque Ball

Many Highlights Planned to Make Evening a Memorable Affair

The A. M. P. A. Hollywood Masque Ball, to be held Saturday evening, March 2, at the Hotel Astor in New York City, should by every sign be an entirely successful affair. The reader himself can judge by glancing at the attractions which will mark the evening.

Screen and stage celebrities—six jazz orchestras—continuous dancing—a grand march—broadcasting over the Columbia system—a 100-page souvenir program—the A. M. P. A. newsreel—a Midnight show—the unmasking and awarding of prizes at midnight—full course dinner at 1:30 A. M. —most beautiful chorus girl contest (winner to be given contract for $200 weekly by George Le Maire for appearance in talkies)—bathing beauty parade—contest for best talkie prospect (winner to receive RCA contract)—Cinderella contest—costume contest—prettiest non-theatrical girl contest (winner to get contract with Broadway producer)—prize for best chorus figures—prize for best dancing girl—Chester Hale's ballet troupe—NTG as master of ceremonies—breakfast show at 5 o'clock, with Texas Guinan as queen of revels—Harry Richman, Clayton, Jackson and Durant, of "Rendesvous"; Will Oakland, The Parody Revue with Jimmy Carr's band and many other items of interest.

Plan 2 Separate Versions of "Man I Love"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Two separate and distinct versions of "The Man I Love" will be produced by Paramount; with a different scenario for each version. The talking adaptation will be made from scenario by Herman Mankiwiecz; while the silent film will be produced from script by Percy Heath. The innovation is credited to B. P. Fineman, assigned to produce the picture.

Although carrying the same title and general basic story theme, the two adaptations will be made as separate productions. In no case will scenes from one version be interent into the other. Where certain sets are used in both versions, the talker scenes will be entirely completed in that set, and then necessary scenes for the silent version will be made. The tempo of the silent version will be much faster than that of the talker.

Barbara Kent Is Selected for Girl Lead in "TNT"

Harold Lloyd's leading lady in his new comedy for Paramount, labeled "TNT," will be Barbara Kent, the young player borrowed from Universal for the occasion. The picture is now in production under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair.

W. B. Earned $2,917,724 In '28 Quarter

Realized Profit of $5.30 Per Share, Exceeding Entire Previous Year's Figures

Net profits of $2,917,724, equivalent to $5.30 a share on the 550,000 combined class A and common stocks outstanding on December 1, 1928, are reported for Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., for the quarter ended last December 1. This total exceeds by $872,883 the entire profits of the last year.

The figures compare with a net profit of $102,687, or 18 cents a share, on the combined stock for the corresponding quarter of 1927 and with $920,894, or $1.67 a share, for the previous quarter ended August 31, 1928. These earnings do not take into effect the profits of the Stanley Company of America or other recent acquisitions; neither do they reflect the recent increase in the capitalization of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.

A detailer report follows:

	Quarter ending 12-1-28	Quarter ending 11-26-27

Mike O'Toole Made Honorary AMPA Member

An honorary membership in the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers has been accepted by Michael O'Toole, past president and executive secretary of the M. P. T. O. A. At the last meeting of the A. M. P. A., he was presented with the illuminated certificate by Arthur James, acting for the association. R. R. Woodhull and Clinton K. Myer were present to see O'Toole receive the honor. President George Harvey complimented Mr. O'Toole in his speech of introduction.

M-G-M Official on Coast To Go Over Season's Plans

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—J. Robert Rubin, of M-GM, arrived here Wednesday and will remain for two weeks, during which he will go over tentative production layouts for next season's releases. Felix Feist is to follow Mr. Rubin here within the next three weeks, and Howard Dietz shortly after.

Production Costs One-Third Less on All-Talkers Than on Same Picture in Silent Form

Penn. Bills Provide for Sunday Local Option

LEGALIZING Sunday sports and amusements would be passed up to communities by a bill presented to the Pennsylvania legislature by Assemblyman Pusmanno. It would permit each municipality in the state to decide for itself by a referendum vote at the next general election whether it is lawful to engage in Sunday sports and amusements after 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

A provision of the measure is that 15 per cent of the registered voters of a municipality must petition before the question can be submitted at the polls. Assemblyman Valtz has submitted a similar bill, which, however, provides that Sunday amusements could not be put on before 7 o'clock in the evening, though sports would be permitted in daylight.

Will Prosecute Unlicensed Use of Phonofilm

General Talking Pict. Warns Against Unauthorized De Forest Apparatus

General Talking Pictures Corporation warns exhibitors that immediate prosecution will follow any unauthorized use of the De Forest Phonofilm equipment. Reports that salesmen other than those permitted by General Talking Pictures are offering devices claimed to be the De Forest Phonofilm, or said to be licensed under licenses of patents of Dr. Le De Forest, have aroused the company, which declares that no company aside from General Talking Pictures can deliver the De Forest Phonofilm equipment.

Fox West Coast Theatres Official Name of Circuit

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Confirming a story exclusively published in Motion Picture News several weeks ago all West Coast Theatres are to take over the name of Fox, which will be figured prominently in all signs and announcements. The official announcement has been made that beginning immediately the name will be Fox West Coast Theatres.

This means the spending of over a half million dollars on electric signs alone. The same move will be made with all chains added by Fox to the circuit during the past year.

Reduced Script Scenes And Long Talking Sequences Given as Reasons for Expense Reduction

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.—Production costs of all-talkers are at least one-third less than the same grade of production done in silent form, according to reports on three all-dialoguers during the past few months. The three pictures were made as talkers only, without silent versions accompanying.

Even though cost of recording and license fees for electrical apparatus runs into heavy figures on each production, negative costs have been materially reduced over those of all-silent films. Reasons advanced for the cut in costs claim that the talker contains a smaller number of script scenes, and talking sequences run for a longer period of time than those shot for a silent production. The number of sets and locations are greatly reduced in making an all-talker, and rehearsals are held for each scene, thereby eliminating a large number of takes for each scene before the latter is passed by the director.

The reduction in production cost applies only to a picture that is made as an all-talker, without a silent version made separately or intercut with scenes from both versions. When a picture is made in both the silent and talker version, production costs for the two averages about one-fourth more than the estimated cost of the silent version.

Fox and Sheehan in Secret Visit to Movie Capital

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, February 6.—William Fox and Winfield R. Sheehan arrived secretly in Hollywood last week. When they left New York information was given out that they intended attending the opening of the new Fox St. Louis house on January 31. Instead, they arrived in Hollywood that night.

Their arrival gave rise to several reports, none of which could be verified.

It is understood they will return to New York this week.

George Walsh Returning to Fox; Out of Films 2 Years

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—George Walsh is returning to motion pictures after an absence of two years. He has been signed by Fox, and will be seen in Raoul Walsh's next production, the title of which has not yet been set. Walsh has not been with Fox for the past eight years.

RCA Officially Enters The Motion Picture Industry With Radio Pictures As Trade Name

Recently Merged Companies Will Distribute Product to All Corners of World

RADIO this week made its actual entrance into the motion picture industry.

Official announcement was made by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of RKO Productions, Inc., that "Radio Pictures" had been selected as the trade name for RKO Productions, which is the motion picture producing and distributing unit of the recently formed Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation.

"Radio Pictures," dialogue motion pictures, will be produced, distributed and exhibited through the resources of the Radio Corporation of America, the RCA Photophone Company, the General Electric Company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, National Broadcasting Company, the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit of theatres and RKO Productions, Inc.

In commenting on the entrance of radio into the picture industry, David Sarnoff, executive vice-president and general manager of Radio Corporation of America, said:

"Beyond our function in the field of international and other telegraphic wireless communication, it is our business to develop sound reproduction through the latest of the arts of electric communication. Thus the electrical group has established a great nation wide service of broadcasting in the United States; it has cooperated with the phonograph industry in the creation of new sound reproducing instruments; it has now come to the motion picture industry to cooperate in the development of the new art of sound motion pictures."

Paramount Observes Industry's Birthday

THE Southern California motion picture industry celebrated its 21st birthday on last Monday, February 4 and that fact was given cognizance of when the Paramount studio in Hollywood ceased operations for two minutes at eleven o'clock in the morning. It was in 1908 that Francis Person and Thomas Bogg turned the first crank in the first California studio.

Changes in Universal's Sales Ranks

Earl Kramer Appointed Mgr. Eastern Div.; Other Shifts in Selling Force

Several important changes in the ranks of the Universal selling force were made last week by M. Van Praag, general sales manager for Universal.

Earl Kramer, for some time general manager of the New York exchange, has been elevated to the post of Eastern Division manager with supervision over Buffalo, Albany, Pittsburgh, Washington and the New Haven branches.

Dave Miller, Universal manager in Buffalo, fills the position vacated by Mr. Kramer. Al Herman, Universal salesman, takes over Mr. Miller's post, C. P. Lester, manager in Jacksonville, has also been promoted to the management of the Atlanta exchange, a vacancy caused by the resignation of Ben Y. Cammeek. His post will be filled by Cowan Bain.

Canadian Music Rights Society Case Dismissed

Privy Council Rules Against Toronto Firm; Exhibitors Benefit by Judgment

An important decision, by means of which Canadian exhibitors will save a considerable outlay in musical copyright fees, was recently handed down in the highest tribunal of the British Empire on February 1, when the Privy Council dismissed the appeal of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Ltd., Toronto, with costs.

This judgment, issued at London, found that the Canadian Society had not observed the clauses of the Canadian Copyright Act requiring registration of all copyright assignments at Ottawa, the Canadian capital, before imposing any royalties in the Dominion. The Society questioned the interpretation of the clause, but the Privy Council ruled that there could be only one meaning and dismissed the appeal.

If the result had been otherwise, the Canadian Rights Society had arranged to impose an annual license fee for every theatre in the country on a seat tax basis to cover royalties on musical compositions controlled by the Society.

Interest in Picqua Co. Acquired by F. M. Zimmerman

Fred M. Zimmerman, president of Associated Theatres of Buffalo and treasurer of Affiliated Theatres of Pittsburgh, controlling a group of some 70 theatres, has purchased an interest in the Piequa Amusement Company which owns and operates the Bijou and May's theatres in Picqua. At the annual organization meeting of the Picqua Amusement Company, Zimmerman was elected vice-president and director. William Erk was re-elected president and R. V. Erk secretary-treasurer. Directors are William and R. V. Erk, F. M. Zimmerman, Walter Henne and George M. Peffer.

Paula Gould Leaves RKO; Warshawsky Publicity Chief

Paula Gould, associated for the past seven years with RKO Productions (formerly FBO), resigned this week. She leaves for Hollywood next week to take one of two production offers made her on the Coast.

Succeeding Miss Gould as general press representative of RKO, in charge of trade paper and daily publicity, is Sam Warshawsky. Ken Hallam will have charge of exploitation, tie-ups, etc., while John Moynihan will supervise press books.

Walthall in "Bridge" Cast

One of the leading roles in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film that Charles Brabin is making, has been given to Henry B. Walthall. He will play Father Juniper.

Two Films in a Fortnight on B'way Attract a Total Gross of $413,953

"Wolf of Wall St." Smashes Rialto Record at $57,992

NEW YORK.—A few years ago one would have been pointed out as "nuts" if they made the prediction that two pictures could come on Broadway, stay two weeks and turn in a box office gross of almost a half million dollars. Yet that is exactly what happened in the two weeks ending last Friday at the Roxy and Capitol Theatres. Those two houses turned in a combined gross of $413,953.15 on the two weeks in which the attractions that they played were "In Old Arizona" and "A Woman of Affairs." Another wallop to hit the street last week was "The Wolf of Wall Street," the first talker in which George Bancroft is starred. This picture came into the Rialto without any particular advertising campaign and succeeded in smashing the house record to bits by turning in $57,992, almost $5,000 better than the previous record of the theatre, which was held by Harold Lloyd in "Speedy."

It is quite possible that "The Wolf of Wall Street" was helped by the Capitol, Roxy, and Strand, all holding over their attractions last week, but even so those three houses did what they would normally do without extraordinary strong attractions.

Of the two big money pictures over the two-week period "In Old Arizona" at the Roxy got the top. The first week that the feature was shown it came within a few dollars of creating a new house record by getting $142,673.50. Last week the returns were $108,728.50, making a total for the two weeks of $251,402. The picture is said to have cost in the neighborhood of $125,000 to make. If the Fox exchange played it at the Roxy on a 50-50 split over the house net, which is around $70,000 a week, the film rental for the two weeks is almost half the cost of production.

At the Capitol "A Woman of Affairs" showed even a more remarkable record, for where the Roxy fell off more than $30,000 on its second week, the Capitol went off only around $13,000. The first week at this house was $87,795.05 and the second $74,757.10, a total of $162,552.15 on the fortnight.

The Strand, which held over "On Trial" for a second week, rolled up a total of $72,100 on the two weeks, the first week being $41,276 and the second $30,824. This total added to the other two holdovers shows a gross in three houses over the two weeks of $486,053.15, which is mighty close to the half million dollar mark.

The Paramount, while not exactly in the hold-over class, played "Interference" for the week, the picture coming to the house directly from its nine week $2 run at the Criterion directly across the street, and at the same time also playing the Paramount Theatre, Brooklyn, which is also a part of New York. In the Broadway house it got $80,187 on the week, while in Brooklyn the business showed $66,547, a total of $146,734 for the two dates.

Emil Jannings in "The Sins of the Fathers" which vied with "The Wolf" as a new arrival on the street, played the Rivoli to a return of $38,681 for the week. This bore out the prediction that was made early the week before that Bancroft in a talker would outdraw Jannings almost two to one.

"Sal of Singapore," Pathe's much discussed talking release, over which the censorship battle has been waged, failed to show anything startling at the box office for the engagement at the Colony, where the statement showed $12,127. The little Cameo also had a holdover in "U Boat 9," which on its second week got $6,150.

The three new features that came in for a run at their respective theatres all showed fairly well at the box office. Richard Barthelmess in at the Central showed the strongest, "Weary River" getting $21,318. This being due to the fact that the scale has been stiffened for all performances. The matinees are very stiff, $1 top, and the nights, $2. Over the week-end on Saturday and Sunday three shows are given with a $2.50 scale in effect. This makes it possible for the 922-seat house to turn in the big figures it is getting. At the Criterion, where Richard Dix in "Redskin" is in for six weeks only, the returns last week were $14,507. "The Letter," a Paramount all-talk feature with Jeanne Eagles starred, is the next attraction due at the house, with "The Canary Murder Case" due to follow "The Bellamy Trial" at the Embassy when that one finishes. Last week, its first full week, showed $9,805.75 for the latter picture.

The two features that are hanging on and still grinding out big money are Al. Jolson in "The Singing Fool" at the Winter Garden, where $33,835.75 was hung up last week. This was the biggest money in any of the two-a-day showings. Fannie Brice in "My Man" at Warner's returned $18,679.75 last week, while "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at the Astor finished its run with $13,123.25. "Broadway Melody" came into the Astor on Friday of this week.

"The River," which is still at the Gaiety with the business constantly slipping, turned in $9,060.75 last week.

Bad Weather, Big Business for Portland, Ore.; $21,000 Is Best

PORTLAND, ORE.—"Bad weather and big business," sounds almost impossible but it was true nevertheless, at least for two of the big first run houses, whose film attractions and stage presentations proved too strong to resist, and in spite of near-zero weather and a half foot of snow drew capacity houses at practically all evening performances and matinees were larger than for some weeks past.

Some twenty-five thousand crowded the ample foyer of "The Portland" during the first three days, and indeed found a much bigger and better show, as had been promised them, in "The Shopworn Angel" and enjoyed to the full the exceptional Paramount offering. Gross for the week was $20,000. Heading the first Publix stage show to visit this house this year was Billy Dooley, together with a galaxy of real talent in "Blossoms." The musical novelty also came via Paramount, Borrah Minnevitch and his musical revelers were also enjoyed. George Johnson, as usual contributed excellent organ numbers.

At "The Broadway" equally as good business was enjoyed, waiting lines being again in evidence to renew accquaintance with two old favorites Billy Haines and Will King; the former in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," who was in good voice, and Will King who brought another bunch of good looking girls. Georgie Still and his musical syncopators played well both on the stage and at two dances on the famous mezzanine. The house did $21,000

"Submarine" was held over by popular demand at the Pantages and drew good business. Five dancing and singing acts rounded out a splendid bill.

"The Music Box" billed "Conquest" for just the one week, with good box offices at evening shows, but only fair matinees. Fox Movietone news and Vitaphone acts were good and applauded.

The hold-over at "The Blue Mouse" was "The Little Wildcat" which did a fair business only, though the top price was reduced to 35c.

Colleen Moore dropped into the "United Artists" for the first time, and also drew fairly good-sized box office with "Synthetic Sin," with Vitaphone accompaniment.

RED INK CIRCULATION

Trade paper circulation must be classified—not bulked.

Exhibitor readers vary greatly in purchasing power.

Bulk circulation, or the largest number of subscriptions, doesn't necessarily mean coverage of the greatest amount of purchasing power.

There is plenty of red ink circulation to be had by any trade paper, but it is costly and dangerous to the advertiser

There is no official circulation audit that classifies subscribers in terms of buying power.

"Old Arizona" Clicks in Cleveland

Good Pictures Send Boxoffices to Top Figures

CLEVELAND.—Good pictures and good weather combined to produce good business along the film Rialto last week. Most of the downtown first-run houses offered outstanding attractions, and the public, ever on the lookout for novelty and merit, paid tribute via the box office.

"In Old Arizona" continued to be a knockout in its second week at the Hippodrome with $19,000. Breaking all records in the first week of its engagement, it touched, in its second week, the record held previous to this engagement.

"Interference" also was a great success. It played at the Allen Theatre, and received excellent notices from critics and full support of the public. Business was considerably above the average with $18,000.

"Abie's Irish Rose" made a good showing at the Stillman. Considering that the plot is so well known, that the play has enjoyed long engagements in this city, and that other pictures of similar theme have been produced, it drew good attendance—good enough to hold the picture over a second week. The gross for the week was $15,000.

"Synthetic Sin" showed good results at the State with $20,000. Colleen Moore has a following and it turned out in numbers and with enthusiasm to see her latest picture. "True Heaven" did just fairly well at Keith's Palace. War and spies have not the general pulling value of erstwhile days. The picture suffered somewhat, probably because the Palace had had two very big weeks previously, and people take their vaudeville in moderate doses. The show pulled $17,000.

"Hey, Rube" and "Marked Money" divided the week at Keith's East 105th Street. Both pictures did just average business.

Competition was keen in the local amusement field last week. Alexander Moissi, Europe's foremost actor appeared for a week at the Hanna in the Max Reinhardt's production of "Temptation." Chaliapin gave a recital at the Public Auditorium, and Yehudi Menuhin, the 12-year-old violin prodigy, offered two concerts, which were both completely sold out.

$28,000 for Eastman Breaks Record, But is Topped By Palace

ROCHESTER.—Last week was not normal in Rochester. Publix brought its first unit show to the town for its grand opening of the recently leased Eastman Theatre. Against the Publix unit, Van and Schenck at Keith's Palace were considered a good drawing card.

"Three Week Ends" at the Eastman drew a good crowd. With the Publix presentations it shattered all attendance and admission records for the house with a gross of $28,000. The Keith-Palace, however, did $30,000, the feature picture being "Captain Lash," with six vaudeville acts.

"Sunrise" was "over the heads" of the public, according to Manager Thomas D. Soriero of the Rochester. This fact and Publix gave him a not so good week with $17,500. He usually averages around $25,000. At Fay's "The Barker" did $6,500, and at the Regent "Do Your Duty" did the same. "Runaway Girls" and "Avalanche" split an $8,500 week at the Piccadilly.

"Interference" Brings Capacity Business to Albany Mark Strand

ALBANY.—Aside from the "Singing Fool," which ran to record breaking business some months ago at the Mark Strand in Albany, there has been no picture shown at the theatre which attracted greater crowds than the 100 per cent all-talkie "Interference." Every night there were crowds standing far along the street, awaiting a chance to enter the house. The picture could easily have been held for another week. The matinees ran very heavy. In addition to the feature there were the usual two Vitaphone presentations as well as the Movietone News.

The next best business-getter in Albany for the week was "Naughty Baby" which served to pack the Ritz night after night, although it was generally conceded that the picture was rather light. The Leland reported satisfactory business with its week of "Dream of Love." This theatre is installing sound equipment and will be in a better position to meet competition by the latter part of the month.

The Clinton Square theatre in Albany continues its policy of first run double features and played to normal business last week with "Prep and Pep" and "Casey Jones." Proctor's Grand started off the week with sound and reported immediate response in business. The theatre used "Captain Swagger."

Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, which is now using sound pictures, double program of sound and silent features, is having a very substantial increase in business these days and the house is filled to capacity each night. "On Trial," running for one half the week apparently pleased every one and the crowds were excellent. Seemingly the theatre made a mistake in not holding this over for the entire week, for "Naughty Baby" that followed for the last three days did not pan out any too well. The Lincoln split its week to ordinary business with Billie Dove in "Adoration" and "Beware of Bachelors" the latter part.

Memphis Shows Healthy Upward Boxoffice Trend

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Despite rainy weather for much of the week, box office grosses in Memphis showed a healthy upward trend during the week ending Jan. 26, from the low ebb of the flu epidemic during the first two weeks of the month.

Loew's Palace, with Paramount's all-talker, "Interference," did its best week's business since long before the holidays despite the rain, though nothing approaching a record was set. Loew's State opened and closed the week well, with M-G-M's "The Trail of '98," and five stage acts, but slumped in mid-week owing to bad weather.

The new Orpheum did its second best week since the holidays with six acts of vaudeville, headlining Mary Haynes, and "Show Folks," Pathe picture, but had far from capacity business.

Pantages did not come up to expectations with Universal's "The Man Who Laughs," and three acts of vaudeville, the usual bill being shorn of two acts to allow for the long feature. Business there was "poor." Business at Loew's Strand, smaller first-run picture houses of the Loew chain, was "very poor," with "Prep and Pep," Fox comedy.

Dog Show, Cold Weather Slacken Business in Baltimore Houses

BALTIMORE.—A dog show, combined with very cold weather, hurt moving picture business at the first run theatres here.

"Synthetic Sin" was offered as the feature picture on the bill at Loew's Century with Cheerio, the Loew Publix stage show, with Jack Stanley as M. C. Business at that playhouse dropped, doing $19,500 on the week.

At the Hippodrome "Domestic Meddlers" was the feature film attraction, which augmented the Bert Smith Players in "Getting Gertie's Garter," with vaudeville acts and a chorus. The week was estimated at $12,000.

"On Trial," the dialogue picture, was offered at Warners' Metropolitan for its third week, and proved a splendid attraction.

"The Last Warning," offered as a silent attraction at the RKO house, Keith's, formerly New Garden, was accompanied with five acts of RKO vaudeville. It did only fair business.

"In Old Arizona," the all-dialogue production, entered its second week at the New Theatre, and held up well enough at that house.

"Submarine" was the sound production at the Rivoli. It had been shown at $1.50 top at Ford's several months previously, but did splendid business.

"Interference," the Paramount all-talker at Loew's Stanley, did $22.500 for the week. At Loew's Valencia, "Abie's Irish Rose" was offered for its second run, and did business estimated for the week at $4,000.

$17,500 Gross Best for Week in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE.—With clear but very cold weather prevailing here last week just about average business was maintained at the first-run houses. The Wisconsin showed "The Shopworn Angel" to a gross of $17,500, which was just a few hundred below the gross for this house last week. The other picture theatres, as a rule, did a little better than the previous week.

The Strand had on display "Abie's Irish Rose," and it did a snug $11,000. Next in line came the Alhambra, which did $9,000 with "Red Hot Speed." The Merrill, with "What a Night," took a slight jump to $4,000.

Palm Goes to "Trail of '98" At Fifth Avenue

SEATTLE.—West Coast's Fifth Avenue Theatre, playing "Trail of '98," walked away with the leading gross in Seattle last week, being several thousand dollars ahead of its usual gross, and almost that much ahead of any of the other houses. The $18,500 week was a result of keen interest in this picture of the Northland, and exceptionally glowing reviews by newspapers and audiences. "The Spellbinder" as a short subject was a fine attraction, and a good musical act rounded out a very strong bill.

Second in the running came Publix's Seattle Theatre, just a little below their previous week with "Sins of the Fathers" with "Someone to Love" as the feature. The Jannings film did $15,500—the Rogers film around $15,000. It was a mediocre picture, but was put on almost cold after a previously-booked film had not lived through a staff preview. A strong Fanchon-Marco stage unit helped mightily in putting this show over to business just a little above average.

The two Hamrick theatres played hold-over films. "Conquest" at the Blue Mouse failed to create much enthusiasm, and its $8,000 was slightly low. At the Music Box, "My Man" was concluding a month's run, and consequently $9,000 was about all that could be expected. This was also below average.

The two vaudeville theatres both played to average business. At the Orpheum, the stage show was the drawing card and the "Singapore Mutiny" film was just a mediocre filler. Pantages, on the other hand, let "The Last Warning" in its sound form carry the program, topping the stage portion. The latter film was a strong attraction, and kept the house well up in the money all week.

West Coast's Coliseum Theatre took low prize with "Riley the Cop." It was a very ordinary film and didn't rise much over the $6,000 mark.

"Old Arizona" Packs Warfield In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO.—"In Old Arizona," at Loew's Warfield with "Hollywood Scandals" and "Californians" as presentations were the leading attractions here last week. This theatre was crowded all week.

At the Pantages Theatre, "Gang War," a Vitaphone, went over fairly well, but not as expected. "On Trial," at the Embassy, a Vitaphone theatre, went over very well as did the Vitaphone picture "Lonesome," shown together with the stage revue, "Egyptian Honeymoon" at the El Capitan.

Publix Theatres in San Francisco have been doing better than they did a few weeks ago. "The Rescue," shown at the California had a good week. Nat Holt, a long time film man, has taken over this house. "Three Week Ends," reported very good business the two opening nights and some of the other nights at the St. Francis. The afternoons were not so good. The Granada, another Publix house, reported good business with "Scarlet Seas," together with their presentation, "Blossoms" and Bryant Washburn in person.

In the residential districts the theatres did well as many do not care to travel down town when weather conditions are poor. The Coliseum reported good business with "Power." The Alexandria did very well with "The Cameraman" and "Dry Martini."

Sally Blane, Wampas baby star and RKO's starlet. She was the first player to be signed to a long-term contract by RKO Productions.

Snows In Salt Lake City Fail To Hit Business

SALT LAKE CITY.—Some very good theatre attendance was had at the Salt Lake City motion picture houses last week in spite of the fact that heavy snows and extreme cold prevailed.

"Simba" Martin Johnson's African Picture did a capacity business at the Paramount Empress. The Capitol Theatre offered Victor MacLaglen in "Captain Lash" as the feature picture and Fanchon and Marco's stage presentation, "Frivols," with highly satisfactory results as to patronage.

The picture presentation on the Pantages bill was "A Lady of Chance" which played to good sized houses. The Victory did an exceptionally big business with the synchronized production "The Haunted House," a Vitaphone feature, also offering Vitaphone acts and Movietone News.

The feature offering at the Gem was "Sal of Singapore," and good sized houses attended. "Show People" was shown as a second run to fairly crowded houses at the Rialto, and "The Law of the Range" and Helen Foster in "Sweet Sixteen" was the State Theatre offering, with satisfactory attendance.

$7,232 Best In Richmond With Opera Opening

RICHMOND, VA.—The past week of grand opera made serious inroads into the box-office receipts of motion picture exhibitors, despite the fact that several of the widely heralded films showed here during that time. Loew's, the biggest house in town, with 2,200 seats, grossed $7,232 with Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers."

The Byrd came next with "Showgirl," grossing about $4,925, against their present house record of $6,000.

The Capitol, with only 600 seats, did a fair week's business, showing "The Red Dance." They grossed $2,810. The Colonial, Wilmer and Vincent house, grossed $2,562 with "A Lady of Chance."

Buffalo Breaks Records Despite Sub-zero Weather

BUFFALO.—Business at the downtown theatres broke high records here last week in spite of the sub-zero weather. "In Old Arizona" was the screen feature at the Great Lakes. This picture did so well the previous week it was held over for another week and continued to break all records.

"The Barker" at the Buffalo proved to be a first class attraction. "Behind the German Lines" drew them in slowly at the Hippodrome, with five acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville on the same bill.

"The Doctor's Secret" at the Century shared honors with the other downtown theatres when the box-office reports went over the average.

The Lafayette played "Sal of Singapore." It did good business but was helped along with five good acts of first class vaudeville. Shea's North Park did fair business with "Home Towners."

Irene Rich starring in "Women They Talk About" was the feature on the silver sheet at Shea's Kensington. Moderate business was the result. At the Victoria "The Red Dance" made a fairly good showing in the box office. "Three Week Ends" was seen at the Plaza. The first two days were a little slow, but it went over the top.

The Kenmore theatre played a double feature, "The Terror" and "Show People." They were money makers.

"Submarine" starring Jack Holt was at the Granada Monday-Tuesday and Wednesday and brought very good business.

Birthday Show Brings $20,000 in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS.—Capacity houses at the Murat and English's last week cut the movie attendance in first-run Indianapolis theatres. Weather also contributed to the bad business condition. The Indiana did about $20,000 business with a Skouras-Publix third birthday anniversary show. Charlie Davis' band was featured with "Show Folks."

The Circle did only $14,500, according to estimates, with "The Doctor's Secret." Loew's Palace clicked $9,000 with "The Rescue. The picture did not do what was expected, although Lily Damita, star, made a personal appearance the first day. "Captain Lash" at the Palace did $8,000.

Oklahoma City Best Gross for Week Is $6,000

OKLAHOMA CITY.—Influenza and the cold weather did not keep the patrons away from the theatres in Oklahoma City the past week, and good bills stirred interest and roused box office grosses on the whole.

"The Mask of the Devil" together with the National Players at the Criterion did about $4,500 gross. "Alias Jimmy Valentine" in sound, went over big at the Capitol to the tune of about $6,000. "In Old Arizona" did splendidly at the Liberty with estimated gross of $5,000 and the Empress with "The Haunted House," had an estimated gross at $4,000. The Orpheum with splendid vaudeville estimated gross at $6,000.

Boston High Gross Hits $32,000

Metropolitan Tops List With "Doctor's Secret"

BOSTON.—With a full week of grand opera by the visiting Chicago Civic Opera Company in Boston and the influenza epidemic still making itself felt, although with lessening force, the past week has not been up to standard from a box office standpoint.

Continued cold weather with occasional snow made another dent in the receipts for the week. January proved not so satisfactory a month as the same month a year ago when weather and health conditions were far better than this year.

"Craig's Wife" at the B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre grossed well, running above $20,000. The Keith-Albee interests, in making this theatre the real "home of vaudeville" have made excellent selections of those numbers with a very wide variety of program which has resulted in more importance being attached to vaudeville in this theatre than in any other New England house.

Considering the adverse conditions, the "Doctor's Secret," an all talking picture at the Metropolitan, did a good week's business and showed better than $32,000. Ted Claire and his syncopators supplied the stage attraction with Arthur Martel playing a number of trick numbers on the organ.

Loew's State had no complaint to make as a result of the showing of "A Lady of Chance" which showed a decided improvement over the previous week's business although by no means establishing a box office mark.

"The Barker" showing simultaneously at the two Publix houses, the Washington Street Olympia and the Fenway, did a better than average business at both houses. It was reported as doing better than $15,000 at the Olympia and above $8,000 at the Fenway.

"Interference" at the Scollay Square Olympia reports a fair week and this same film played at the Capitol, with the exception of Monday night, to a good business. On Monday night the world's premiere of "The Wolf of Wall Street" was given to a capacity audience at a new high top for the theatre and for the first time a premiere showing has been made at one of the outlying houses. The experiment was so successful that it is certain to be repeated at another of the suburban theatres before the season closes.

"Give and Take" was well received at the Keith-Albee Boston where Gene Greene in person was the stage attraction. "Dream of Love" grossed fairly well at Loew's Orpheum, which staged a girls' dancing contest.

$9,925 Gross For Keith's Ritz At Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM.—Business for the period from January 21 to 26, inclusive, took an upward turn, with the Ritz, a Keith house, leading. The gross here fell just short of $10,000 with $9,925, but this was just as much due to the Friedland Night Club presentation as to the feature picture, "The Haunted House."

The Alabama went over the $9,000 mark for the first time in six weeks. The figures were $9,100 with "Interference" as the feature attraction. "A Lady of Chance" did $3,450 at the Empire and "The Case of Lena Smith grossed $1,400 at the Strand.

An outstanding feature of the week was the exceptional second run showing of "Lilac Time" at the Rialto, a house with but 350 seats. Sound effects were displayed with a non-synchronous device. With a 20 cents top price the gross reached $2,500.

Minnesota Does $24,000 With Thermometer Around Zero Mark

MINNEAPOLIS.—With sub-zero weather prevailing for about two days last week and the thermometer hovering close to the zero mark the rest of the time, Minneapolis houses managed to maintain a good average for the week, ending February 2, though slightly below normal.

The Minnesota, much the largest house in the city with a capacity of 4,025, as usual, led in the grosses with $24,000, or about 98 per cent of the average figures for this theatre. The feature screen attraction was "Naughty Baby," with Movietone shorts and a Publix unit rounding out a good program.

Next in line came the State with a gross of $18,500. Warner Bros.' "On Trial" was the screen feature and a good one, which was helped out by a splendid stage show.

Close behind the State came the Hennepin-Orpheum with a combination of feature film and six vaudeville acts. The house got $17,500 on the week, the feature picture being "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

The smaller houses fared rather badly with averages falling to from 70 per cent to 95 per cent of normal business. Pantages showed "Gang War" and five acts of vaudeville to a gross of but $7,500. The Lyric with "Oh Kay," an Our Gang comedy and an organ novelty did only $2,500, while the Strand with "Beware of Bachelors dropped to $2,000.

Keith's Does $14,000 in Blizzards and Zero Weather at Syracuse

SYRACUSE.—Held over by popular demand, Van and Schenck at B. F. Keith's Theatre topped all Syracuse houses with a gross of $14,000. The famous pair had them standing up despite blizzards and zero weather. "Love Overnight," Pathe feature, split the week with "His Last Haul," FBO, and five Radio Keith Orpheum acts.

Ronald Colman's first starring picture, "The Rescue," did just an average week's business for Loew's State. The United Artists feature brought in $10,500. Also featured on the program were two Metro Movietone acts, M-G-M news and Fox Movietone. Maurice, organist, combined two soloists in his organlogue, and Bruce Brummit and his 17-piece concert brought the program to a close.

"Three Week Ends," Paramount, featuring Clara Bow, played to $9,000 gross at the Eckel Theatre. "In a Persian Market," Tiffany-Tone, was shown along with two Vitaphone acts.

Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien, featured in the Fox sound picture, "Sunrise," played to the tune of $10,000 at the Empire Theatre. Fox Movietone, Collegians and two Movietone acts rounded out the bill.

"Me, Gangster," Fox sound picture, featuring June Collyer and Don Terry at the Strand, did below average business, the gross being $6,500. Strand Debutante Orchestra, two vitaphone acts, Fox Movietone completed the bill.

Wesco Theatre Closing Due to Union Demands

WEST COAST'S Broadway Theatre in Tacoma, Washington, was closed on 30 minutes' notice last week by Richard Spear, Wesco general manager in Tacoma, as a result of demands of stagehands and other union house employes. In all probability, the Broadway, key house for Wesco in Tacoma, will remain dark indefinitely, according to Charles M. Thall, Western division manager who sanctioned the move in every detail.

Due to the shutdown, Fanchon-Marco revues will open in the Fifth Avenue, Seattle, the week after their showing at Portland.

"The Wild Party"

Phillips R. Holmes, son of Taylor Holmes, has returned to studio after long illness and has been given a role in Clara Bow's "The Wild Party."

Bancroft Film Tops L. A. Grosses

"Wolf" Registers $45,500; "Broadway Melody" Runnerup

LOS ANGELES.—This past week was a merry one for Los Angeles theatres, with strong attractions sending the box-office tunes at most instances up to a high pitch. "Broadway Melody" leaped off to a flying start on its run at Grauman's Chinese, the house check registering $9,685 for the opening night with a five dollar top. The figure reported for the week hit the $34,000 mark.

George Bancroft's "Wolf of Wall Street" broke all records at the Paramount Theatre, except one made by a personal appearance of Al Jolson. The take for the week here was $45,500.

Presentation of "The Flying Fleet," and the return of Rube Wolf in the berth of master of ceremonies at Loew's State, brought a return of $31,000. "The Redeeming Sin," playing a second week at Warners' Hollywood, managed to get $27,500.

Showing in its first week at the Carthay Circle, "The Divine Lady," exclusive of the opening night, corraled $16,000. "Lady of the Pavements," running for a second week at United Artists, rolled in a gross of $14,500.

Tampa's Annual Fair Opens and Crimps Theatres

TAMPA.—Cool weather and the opening week of the annual Fair had their effect upon theatre attendance. It was rather a spotty week with some days going over well and others off. The Tampa seems to be having a run of sure-fire Sunday openings with business each Sunday climbing up pretty close to the record of $3,000. This Sunday "White Shadows In The South Seas" pulled them in to pretty near that gross, but the business failed to hold up and the following three days dropped below normal. Then Thursday "The Flying Fleet" opened with a business for the day that went well over the average. The following two days were good.

"Behind the German Lines" did not click for the Victory. Tampa fans seem to be fed-up on these "official" war films and passed it up, so that business was only fair.

The Strand got Bebe Daniels in "What A Night" for the first two days and it brought big business. Bebe has been a standard attraction at the Tampa, at 60c top, until that house went talkie, so the Strand, with its 35c top, caught 'em.

Flu Epidemic Over, Memphis Back to Normal

MEMPHIS.—With virtually every theatre in the tri-state territory that was closed on account of the influenza epidemic now open and doing business again, theatres in Memphis last week fought off the ill effects of bad weather and proved that things were just about back to normalcy.

Loew's Palace, first-run picture house, did its best business since some time before Christmas with Paramount's all-talkie, "Interference." Loew's State, with five vaudeville acts and M-G-M's "The Trail of '98," did an excellent opening and closing business, taking the week's averages, but went down when too much rain fell during the middle days.

No fraternal regard here. Lupino Lane has reached the conclusion that his brother's, Wallace Lupino, voice has a sour timbre. These two stage and screen stars, both of the Educational ranks, recently underwent a voice test.

Stage Stars In Film Draw Well In Harrisburg

HARRISBURG.—Interest of the picture fans centered largely in "The Doctor's Secret," starring Ruth Chatterton, H. B. Warner and Robert Edeson, which showed at the Victoria. The general opinion in Harrisburg was that the stage experience of the stars gave them a great advantage in putting across the dialogue.

Some disappointment was expressed in "The Rescue," at Loew's Regent. The crowds were not up to the average that have been attending the house in recent months.

"The Singing Fool," which was retained for a second week at the Colonial after having shown to overflowing houses, night and day, during the previous week, continued to attract very satisfactory crowds.

Loew's Penn At Pittsburgh Has Tremendous Week

PITTSBURGH. — Another tremendous week's business at Loew's Penn. for the week ending February 2 with "Alias Jimmy Valentine" on the screen. The Publix Unit on the stage, "A Perfect Girl," was one of the best yet seen here.

"The Wolf of Wall Street" brought a good week's business for the Stanley. "The Haunted House" did better than expected at the Enright, and seemed to get a fair share of laughs. "Behind the German Lines" got by fairly well at the Grand for the week. The Regent had "Conquest" and played to an average week's business.

Handicaps Fail To Hit Business In Joliet Houses

JOLIET.—Despite handicaps of cold, sickness and the fact that this is the height of the athletic season here, the Rialto Theatre, with a capacity of 2,300 seats, reported an increased business with "Four Sons," presented by William Fox. "West of Zanzibar," Lon Chaney's starring vehicle, failed to pack the house the first half of the week. However, business ran on an average of $100 a day better than the previous week. Earl Lindsay's stage presentation "Revue of 1929" helped to increase business the last half of the week.

"Abie" Scores in St. Louis, Near Record

ST. LOUIS.—Few pictures in the show business history of St. Louis, Mo., have clicked so well at box-office prices without extra shows or advanced rates as "Abie's Irish Rose," the Paramount talkie special playing the Ambassador and which has established a new record for the year with $42,426. This is about $12,000 above the previous week's figures. The stage attraction was Ed Lowry's "Crinoline versus Jazz."

Loew's State, with "The Rescue" (United Artists), and a personal apearance of the starring player, Lila Damita, for January 28, had a good week. The picture got away to a big start for Saturday and Sunday and Miss Damita proved a very popular attraction an Monday. Later in the week, business tapered off. A gross in the neighborhood of $19,500 was realized.

The Missouri theatre went $21,896, or about $4,700 behind the previous week. The screen attraction was "The Case of Lena Smith" (Paramount). Eddie Peabody, in "Flying High" on the stage, and Milton Slosses at the organ, gave a song review while Charles Previn directed another grand orchestral production.

All theatres in the Grand Boulevard district were affected somewhat by the Fox theatre with its 5,200 seats. The house enjoyed its grand opening on January 31.

The Grand Central, with its closing engagement of "The Barker" (First National), and several Vitaphone shorts, drew $9,889, or about $4,000 below the previous week. The Midtown, in the eleventh week of "The Singing Fool" (Warners) did $7,228, the poorest week for the run.

Business Picks Up During Week In Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA.—Audrey Ferris in "The Little Wildcat" proved the best drawing card on Chattanooga's screen program for the week of January 25. With four acts of Keith vaudeville completing the program the Tivoli did almost capacity business for the three days of its booking.

Milton Sills in "The Barker" enjoyed a good run at the State Theatre all of last week.

Paramount's second all-sound program at the Tivoli the first half of the week, consisting of Ruth Chatterton and H. B. Warner in "The Doctor's Secret," with Borah Minnevitch and "His Musical Rascals" and "Just a Word," an efficiency comedy, lacked the drawing power of "Interference," which played the Tivoli the week before.

Calgary Slumps As Mercury Goes to Forty Below

CALGARY.—With sub zero weather prevailing, ranging from 25 to 40 below, business fell off during the latter part of the week. "The Home Towners" (all talking) at the Capitol Theatre only played to average business for the first three days with Lon Chaney in, "West of Zanzibar" (sound) drawing better crowds during the week end.

At the Palace Theatre the films for the split week were Norma Talmadge in, "The Woman Disputed" and Bebe Daniels in "What a Night" with box office returns below normal.

Censorship Battle Rages in 15 States

number of inspectors, each to be given a card signed by him. This card gives each inspector authority to enter any motion picture theatre at any time to witness showing of any film, and to enter any warehouse where films are stored to inspect these films, and see whether eliminations ordered are made. Reports current here indicate that more than 100 members of the recently-organized League for Better Motion Pictures are to be appointed.

Mrs. E. L. Grossman, chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs has gone on record as being opposed to censorship of talking sequences in motion pictures. "We are not in harmony with the movement," says Mrs. Grossman.

Cleveland exhibitors will use their screens to advise the public of the menace of this bill.

Through the introduction of two bills in Albany calling for the repeal of motion picture censorship in New York state, the question of the right of any state to censor motion pictures once more looms as one of the important questions to be decided at the present session of the New York State Legislature. Both bills have strong backing and there is no question that one or both may be reported out of committee and go to a vote. Introducers of the measures expect the backing of the exhibitors both through letters and telegrams to all members of the Legislature as well as at any public hearings that may be held.

Base Decision on Appeals

It is going to cost New York State more to censor its motion pictures. Under the motion picture division of Education Department, the following notation appeared:

"The increase in this division amounts to $12,865; this entire increase may be explained by the necessary changes in the commission and for the purchase of equipment to properly supervise the new era in motion pictures, namely the talking moving picture."

Censorship of the talkies in Pennsylvania was definitely and probably finally established when the Supreme court, the highest judicial body in the State, today announced a decision in favor of the contention of the State Board of Censors that the Act of 1915, under which the board operates, gives the board the right to pass upon the spoken part of sound films. This is notwithstanding that there is, of course, no specific reference in the act to the talkies which were unheard of when the law was passed.

The decision was based on appeals from two conflicting decisions of two branches of the Common Pleas court of Philadelphia, one upholding the right to censor talkies and the other declaring the board has no such right.

As a result of the Supreme Court ruling it is unlikely that the State Government will make any effort to amend the existing law as it would have tried to do had the highest court of the State held the board's powers do not extend to the talkies. Had an opposite decision been rendered by the Supreme court, Governor Fisher, who favors censorship of the talkies, would, it is believed, have sponsored an amendment extending the board's powers to apply to talkies, as he intimated some months ago, he would do, after a conference in Harrisburg with the Board members.

Would Classify Films

Members of the Maryland Censor Board would be required to give their full time to the work but their salaries would be increased according to a new bill recently introduced in the Senate at Annapolis, Md., by Senator A. Leroy McCardell of Frederick county.

This measure is sponsored by the Citizens' League for Better Motion Pictures. It was referred to the Committee on Judicial Proceedings.

The proposed salaries outlined in the bill would be $3,500 per year for two members and the chairman would receive $4,000.

Other provisions in the bill include that the Censor Board would have to classify pictures as to whether they are suitable to be shown to general audiences or to adults only. Also the Board would be given jurisdiction over all advertising matter including posters and art work.

If a picture designated by the Board as unfit for children under 16 were shown by any theatre, a sign would have to be placed outside the playhouse while it was on view, reading "ADULTS ONLY." No children under 16 would then be permitted to see such pictures unless authorized to do so by their parents or guardian.

The bill introduced before the Ohio Legislature at Columbus last week by Senator Davis B. Johnson, which provides for a drastic censorship of all talking sequences in motion pictures by the existing State censor board, has brought forth numerous attacks on the part of various film officials in Cincinnati.

Frederic Strief, president of the Cincinnati Film Board of Trade says: "From the official censorship of talking pictures to the censorship of the press, the pulpit and the stage is but a very short step. Speech is speech, regardless of the medium by which it is conveyed to the public. We have not tolerated a board of censorship of the stage, believing that police protection against indecency was quite adequate. The talking picture does not differ in kind from the stage play."

Talkies Bring Guest Star Roles To Idle Actors

Instead of Taking a Fling in Vaud. May Now Find Berths With Stock Cos.

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—A new field for screen actors not working, has been opened as a direct result of talking pictures. This is the "guest star" engagement with stock, repertoire and dramatic companies throughout the country. Heretofore, film stars so inclined, would fill in open time with vaudeville engagements, but found difficulty in securing contracts with the other theatrical style of attractions.

Stock companies in the major and minor cities of the country have invited as "guest stars" in the past, only well known legitimate names. Such engagements are for the run of one attraction, or for a summer.

Pathe Starts Production on First Downey Talkie Film

Production began this week on Morton Downey's first talking and singing feature for Pathe at the Sound Studios in the East under the supervision of Robert T. Kane. James Seymour, aide to Kane, is dialogue director and Basil Smith is assistant director. Paul Streger is supervisior.

Sound Systems Develop Battle For Playdates

Film and Disc Recordings Confuse Exhibitors On Equipment

Exhibitors who have not yet made installations of sound reproducing equipment in their theatres are wondering what system of recording sound will dominate during the coming year. They are not yet convinced whether it will be by disc or sound on film. With the large number of playdates involved, it is not unlikely that quite a battle will be on during the year.

S. R. Kent has come out with a statement that Paramount will do practically all of its sound producing by the film method. Only on rare occasions will the disc system be used. Albert Warner says Warners are well satisfied with the disc recording and will not switch until a better method is discovered.

M-G-M and United Artists have made no declaration, but are said to favor the film. Fox, Pathe and RKO will also do their recording on film. Many independent producers, along with Warners, will record by disc.

Sound Pictures Reopen Danville Silent Theatre

That sound pictures have brought a renewed general interest in films of all descriptions is shown in word from Leo G. Garner, manager of Danville Theatres, Inc., of Danville, Virginia. With the installation of sound apparatus in his Rialto Theatre, Manager Garner figures that the time is ripe for the reopening of the Capitol Theatre, which has been closed for over a year, and which, strangely, will be devoted exclusively to the playing of silent films.

The Capitol will show the best of the silent pictures and those pictures that are produced with orchestral accompaniment for Movietone presentation, but the latter will be presented with orchestra music, which Mr. Garner contends is better than the canned brand.

World Wide To Handle Wilcox Talkie Feature

"Black Waters," Made by Neilan in Hollywood, Set for Immediate Release

The current releasing schedule of World Wide Pictures, Inc., has been increased to the extent of one feature, a production made by Herbert Wilcox on the Pacific Coast and entitled "Black Waters." It is an all-talking film and was made by the head of British and Dominion Films, Ltd., of London, with the sound facilities that Hollywood offers. It will be distributed at once in the United States and Canada by the World Wide Pictures through Educational Exchanges.

Marshal Neilan directed the picture for Mr. Wilcox and used a cast that included Mary Brian, John Loder (loaned by Paramount), James Kirkwood, Lloyd Hamilton, Frank Reicher, Robert Ames, Hallam Cooley, Noble Johnson and others. It was financed by British capital. The story is taken from "The Fog," John Willard's play. Western Electric film disc processes were employed.

Sound Schedule Now in Effect At "U" City

Seven productions having dialogue are now in work at Universal's plant at Universal City as the present allotment of films on the all-sound schedule now in effect there.

Included are "Broadway," all dialogue; "The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," containing several talk scenes; "The Shakedown," with sound and talk, and the following dialogue shorts: "High and Low Lifes of History," the fourth series of "The Collegians," and Movietone shorts with the Rooneys starred.

Pathe Sound Newsreel Is Now Issued One-a-Week

With the issue No. 7, the Pathe Sound Newsreel becomes a weekly release instead of bi-monthly as since its inception.

No. 7 is the current issue and contains: Captain Fried and crew of the S. S. America and the rescued sailors of the Florida; the Salt Lake City at the Camden navy yard; a press and sound camera interview of Fridtjof Nansen; Walter Cochrane in action at the billiard tables; one of the University of Pa. candidates for the Mask and Wig Club.

Bancroft to Star in "Race Track," Paramount Talkie

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Paramount will star George Bancroft in "Race Track," with dialogue and sound. J. Walter Rubin and Wells Root are writing the original story and adaptations for both sound and silent versions.

Broadway Show Reviews

By Fred Schader

Nothing Fast About Denny's "Red Hot Speed"

Colony Show Has Two Women That Lend a Suggestion Of "Cooch" To Bill

Reginald Denny, in "Red Hot Speed," a sound feature with several talking sequences proves neither speedy uor very hot at the Colony. The surrounding show, with the exception of Paul Specht and his band, adds little to the gaiety of Broadway this week. There are two women offering specialties in conjunction with the band, one, Ruby Shaw, a contortionistic dancer, turns loose a lot of bends and floor rolls, while the other, Evans Burroughs Fontaine, slips over an Oriental Dance, with a suggestion of a cooch, that is a little snappy at times.

The show has been cut to the bone at the house because the feature runs an hour and fourteen minutes. In addition there was only a Lucky Rabbit Oswald cartoon comedy entitled "Sick Cylinder Love," which ran six minutes.

Paul Specht and his band took the next twenty minutes of the show.

That means that the audience got just a little more than an hour and a half of entertainment for its money. That is just a bit of cheating for Broadway, and audiences soon get wise to it and leave the house that puts on that kind of a bill flat. The Colony looked pretty flat on the night that the show was reviewed. Less than two-thirds of the lower floor was filled at the 9 o'clock show when the other houses on the street were crowded.

The stage portion of the entertainment opened with the band playing "Caressing You," with one of the boys handling the vocal end. This was followed by reviving "Dardanella," which strangely enough got a hand from the audience, after which Ruby Shaw appeared with her contortionistic routine. Then the band for two numbers, the first "When Summer Is Gone," and the second a comedy number with the boys singing "Everything We Like We Like Alike." Then Evans Burroughs Fontaine, and for the close "Why Do I Love You," by the band.

"B'way Melody" Premiere at Grauman's Chinese

"Broadway Melody" was given its first public showing recently at the Chinese Theatre in Los Angeles. The production is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-talkie.

"Trail of '98" Heads Strong Bill With Chester Hale Show at Capitol

A REVISED edition for the regular picture houses of the Clarence Brown production "The Trail of '98" and an outstanding stage revue with lots of color and action, produced by Chester Hale, are the attractions at the Capitol this week. The entire program runs exactly two hours and a half with the feature taking an hour and thirty-nine minutes of this time. On the whole it is very enjoyable entertainment and seemingly was enjoyed by the audience at the performances reviewed.

An overture of eight minutes duration has been fashioned of the "Hits of 1928" in which "The Man I Love" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby" predominated brought a round of applause.

In presenting the Capitol Magazine and Fox Movietone News the house seemingly tried an innovation for there were two Movietone News shots interpolated between shots of the silent news reels. There was thirteen minutes of news stuff. The M-G-M News had the first shot, that of a trick skater at St. Moritz, which was followed by three clips from Paramount News showing Al Smith in bathing at Miami, the Rome, Italy firemen and their giant ladder and the race of the Paris delivery boys; then came three clips from the Fox silent news showing Dutch skaters, the baby bears at the Berlin Zoo, and the bethrothed royal couple of Norway and Sweden;

Immediately following was the Chester Hale production "Dominoes" with the forty Hale Girls on for the opening which brought Dave Schooler on for the first number "The Girl That Broke the Man That Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," which was well worked out for comedy with various of the boys in the orchestra doing chorus versions of the song. Little Dolores Farris, an extremely pretty toe dancer, startled the audience when she uncorked her routine of Russian floor stuff on her toes. It was great. Dave Schooler went to the piano for the next number which had the Hale Girls on for a dominoe drill. Milo, the tramp falsetto singer, gave the picture house audience a real kick when he made his first appearance, but following this his talk failed to click in the big house and he fared much better as soon as he got into his animal and farm yard imitations ending with the mocking bird whistling finish.

The Lime Trio with their acrobatic routine filled the next spot after which the girls were again on for the finale which was speeded up by the introduction of Criss Cross Tumblers, an Arab act that furnished the grand hurrah for the curtain. The revue ran exactly 33 minutes.

"Doctor's Secret" Outstanding Feature On Paramount's Well Balanced Bill

HERE is a show that is just about what picture house entertainment should be. It has everything that the public might want, with the balance just a little in favor of the screen entertainment, and after all what is it in the majority of cases that attracts the public—the screen or the stage show—to the theatre? Pretty safe to say the screen, especially today when the screen is talking. In "The Doctor's Secret" the Paramount has a talking feature that overshadows everything else on the program

There is only one thing lacking in the three Publix houses on Broadway for the last couple of weeks, and that is programs. The public are squawking for them.

This show starts off with a nine-minute musical program of "Hungarian Sketches," which also gives Dave Rubinoff an opportunity to display his skill on the violin by playing "Dance Tzigane" as a solo.

During the seven minutes that the Paramount News runs there is also a trailer for "The Dummy,"

The Crawfords, Jesse and the wife, disclosed a novelty in "A Cross Country Song Flight." Starting with Detroit and "Tomorrow's Violets," hopping to Chicago for "Sweethearts On Parade," then to Denver for "Carolina Moon," and to San Francisco for "She's Funny That Way."

After the five minutes of popular melodies there came Eddie Cantor in his short talking film, "That Certain Party," which runs nine minutes.

"Vanities of 1929" is the title of the stage entertainment. It is the initial production on the part of Dave Gould for the Publix chain, and he seemingly has outdone himself in the number of people that he has placed on the stage. There are thirty-four people in the offering. Instead of the usual twelve girls this unit has twenty-four, and with them are Cunningham and Clements, the whirlwind dancers; Johnny Perkins, the fat boy, who entertained at Coffee Dan's on the Coast for a long time, and the Six Lucky Boys, a tumbling act, and an unprogrammed girl who sings.

Roxy Program Built to Overshadow Film Feature for Current Week

S. L. ROTHAFEL must have figured that it was up to himself to frame a program at the big house this week that would carry the film feature "Captain Lash" along with it. The feature was a short one, its running time being only 57 minutes, so it was up to the managing director to provide an additional hour and a fraction to complete a two-hour program at the house. This was accomplished through a bill that completely overshadowed the feature. There were three units of stage presentation, any one of which would have been enough for the ordinary theatre and each one of them surpassingly good.

For the first time in a long while the program was opened by utilizing the three organs, with Messrs. Velasco, D'Antalffy and Epstein officiating, by playing the "Hits of 1928," and then stepping back further into musical memory lane. For about seven minutes this proved very interesting and amusing. The following ten minutes were devoted to the overture "Orpheus" by the orchestra.

Prize Compositions

Then came the third unit of the bill which Thomas Griselle composed, "Two American Sketches," comprising a Nocturne and a March, which were awarded the $10,000 prize in a recent competition sponsored by the Victor Talking Machine Company. A special orchestration of each of the numbers was made by the composer to meet the requirements of the Roxy orchestra. A special ballet and stage interpretation was arranged for the work. The ballet was accompanied by the Nocturne score, and the Roxyettes revealed a perfectly synchronized modernistic automaton march drill to the remaining half of the composition. Both won distinct favor with the audience.

The Movietone News following had a full ten minutes, and the complete sound reel was shown with several of the shots being outstanding, although it seemed that there was just a little too much of the Capt. Fried and Chief Officer Manning welcome.

A return to stage presentation followed, with Forbes Randolph's Kentucky Jubilee Choir, the double quartet of negro singers being backed by the whole Roxy ensemble of voices, in a setting that represented an old Southern mansion with its sweeping lawns and wide porches. Vocally it left nothing to be desired, and the applause which came at the conclusion of nine minutes of signing and dancing must have gratified those on the stage.

Newsreel Scores

The Roxy Magazine, made up of silent newsreel shots, ran six minutes, and contained three clips from the Fox News and one each from the Paramount and M-G-M reels. That which was enjoyed most by the audience was the shot from Portland, Ore., of a series of electrical experiments that were held there. It gave the audience a good laugh.

"Snowflakes" is the title that was given to the piece de resistence of the stage program. It ran exactly thirteen minutes, and had for its headliner five adagio couples working together. They were Frioff and Lucille, Don and Doresee, Swanson and Burne, Buck and Therrien, and Betta and Le Marr. It was an enthralling spectacle to see this double quintet of dancers working in unison in a routine that was identical for all of them, and the applause at the finish of this offering was tremendous. Prior to that Patrica Bowman offered a solo in imitation of an ice-skating dance that was well received.

In all it was decidedly worth-while entertainment.

ber completed a vote of their membership over the state and it shows 243 against and 202 for a state theatre admission tax. The Idaho Chamber, in face of returns, will likely not recommend the passage of the proposed tax measure—and in Idaho the State Chamber has a lot of weight.

Unjust Kansas Legislation

An unjust piece of legislation appears to be headed for adoption as a law in the Kansas state legislature. The measure—a provision to the act on military memorials, allowing them to be leased for entertainment purposes—has been passed by the house and now is before the senate.

There are twenty-two memorial buildings in Kansas, not subject to taxation. Virtually all of the halls have a large seating capacity. The vote on the measure in the house was 110 to 15. In the house were twenty-two members of the American Legion, which lends an idea on the opposition the exhibitors' representatives had to be confronted with.

"I do not believe there is a bit of doubt but what such a clause inserted in the act is unconstitutional," R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, said. "We obtained an injunction in the Kansas supreme court against the use of memorials as theatres on the grounds that non-taxable buildings could not legally be transformed, even if only temporarily, into commercial institutions, opposing theatres which are taxed as legitimate businesses. We intend to oppose the measure as strongly as we can. That is all we can do."

Large Staff of Stage Writers at M-G-M Studio

With the signing of Laurence Stalling and James Forbes, writers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now has a large staff of pen artists on its roster. They will write dialogue for new pictures. Robert Montgomery is another acquisition from the playwright field. Others include Willard Mack, Bayard Veiller, John Howard Lawson, James Gleason, Dorothy Parker and Lillian Kalish.

Good All Around Talking Program Shown At Strand

Three Vitaphone Shorts With Alice White in "Naughty Baby" Complete Bill

A good, all-around talking program is shown at the Strand this week, with three Vitaphone short subjects, consisting of a popular song number, a dramatic thriller and a jazz band with a glib master of ceremonies furnishing the talk portion. These are topped by Alice White in "Naughty Baby," a First National comedy that has considerable wallop.

Following a brief overture there are five minutes of silent news reel shots, with the Fox reel winning out with four clips as against one from Pathe. Eight minutes of Fox Movietone News follows.

Jane Green, "The Melody Girl," in a series of three song numbers, has the next spot on the program.

Mitchell Lewis, supported by Jason Robards and Elizabeth Page, offer the dramatic thriller, "The Death Ship," which held the audience.

Gene Morgan and his band offer both music and song, with Gene, who is one of the foremost master of ceremonies in picture houses on the West Coast, putting over a number of gags for laughs. "Pale Moon" is the opening number, this is followed by Gene delivering "Oh, For the Life of An Osteopath," which was a howl, and the finish had "Haunted Blues."

Alice White, in Naughty Baby," got a number of laughs.

Denounce Censor Bills As Thrust At Free Speech

of Rights left one free to print or utter what one chose, but the author of the words must face the consequences, whether it were a libel suit or prison."

The following from an editorial in the Memphis "Press-Scimitar:

"And now the professional reformers with eyes cast on fat secretarial jobs desire to censor the motion picture that talks. They might not like the movietone presentation of what President Coolidge says in addressing the Rotary Club. Censor 'in! Cut out from the word 'why' to the word 'wherefore' in the second sentence of what Calvin said. Next, there'll probably be a pretext found for censoring the radio. A person who desires to deliver an address, tell a joke or sing a song into the microphone first will have to go to censorship headquarters for a preview. And maybe our Saturday evening toast must have its copy censored in advance to be sure; there's nothing scorching in it. If those who are sincere in their wish for a clean motion picture screen will leave it to the motion picture producers, the screen will be clean."

Troupers Meet Grief in Hollywood

Disillusioned, They Hope for Jobs in Talkies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.—The professional from all walks of the amusement industry has become the successor to the film-struck amateur and the beauty-contest winner as Hollywood's unwanted immigrant. With the wide belief that all pictures are to be made as talkies, and the visions of what such synchronization can accomplish, small-time vaudevillians, carnival performers, singers from chautauqua, concert and even opera, as well as ventriloquists, have been pouring into the film colony.

The problem of handling such people is more annoying that that of the mere pretty girl, or the ambitious youth with no experience. The others, having had professional experience, make it the duty of whatever friends or acquaintances they have with positions in studios, to "get them in." The fact that such people have all they can do to hold on to their own jobs, and rarely are able to recommend anyone, means nothing.

The "Talkie" Rush

Their reasoning is that synchronized pictures will need voices, dancers, vocal freaks and even acrobats. That Hollywood has been overflowing with such talent before the equation of talkies ever arrived, is not known to them, neither will they believe it. The film-struck girl, who is still a problem, may at least be aided through the Studio Club or other methods used by the Producers' Association. The best one is to give them their carfare home and exact a promise that they will never return—for the purpose of breaking into pictures.

Such means cannot be used on professionals from other branches of the theatre or amusements. There is a possibility of the producers inaugurating a propaganda campaign warning them to keep out of Hollywood.

Meanwhile they are flocking to agents' offices mostly. They have found that the Central Casting Bureau cannot help them, for it is established for extras only. A few hoping the newly established Call Buread will aid, are doomed to disappointment. For the Call Bureau does not officiate as an employment agency or casting office. It is merely a place for actors known to studios to register, so that when the individual is wanted by name, the Call Bureau can secure him or her immediately.

Fox Reel Helps Boost Warners' Guinan Film

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, February 6.—The Warner Brothers exerted a tremendous amount of willpower when they checked an impulse to send a wire of thanks to the Fox organization for one sequence in a recently released Movietone News. The sequence, seen here at the Carthay Circle in conjunction with the opening of "The Divine Lady," was a night at Texas Guinan's newest night club. This scene occupied the major portion of the particular Movietone Newsreel release.

It seems a direct exploitation stunt for the Warner Brother production starring Texas Guinan, under the title of "Queen of the Night Clubs." It is slated for release next month.

New Paramount Talkie

"The Escape," John Galsworthy's play, will be made into 100 per cent talkie production by Paramount at West Coast studios, talkie version to be directed by Basil Dean, who will leave London in few weeks to try his hand at films for first time.

Sax Rohmer's Fearful Chinaman

"The Insidious Dr. Fanchu Manchu," Chinese menace of fiction and the creation of Sax Rohmer, British author, will be brought to screen by Paramount in 100 per cent talkie, Rowland V. Lee directing and Warner Oland playing title role of the dreadful Oriental. Neil Hamilton, O. P. Heggie, Jean Arthur, William Austin, Lloyd Corrigan and Florence Ryerson will have parts.

Among "The Cocoanuts"

Players assigned supporting roles in Paramount's talkie comedy, "The Cocoanuts," include Margaret Dumont and Katherine Francis. First is now featured in Marx show, "Animal Crackers." Mary Eaton, leading stage figure, has been engaged for one of principal roles.

"Burlesque"

Edward Sutherland and John Cromwell will work together in filming "Burlesque" for Paramount.

Christie Signs Fazenda

Louise Fazenda has been engaged by Al Christie for two of Christie talkies for Paramount. James Gleason and his wife, Lucile Webster Gleason, have also been secured. Miss Fazenda will be idle for a while, but the Gleasons will begin working in "Meet the Missus." The studio recently finished casting "Jed's Vacation," the players including Charlie Grapewin, Anna Chance, Bill Irving, Aileen Carlyle.

"Young Sinners"

Charles "Buddy" Rogers' next starring vehicle will be "Young Sinners," to be made as all-talkie. It is an original by John Farrow. Doris Anderson is adapting.

Paramount Engages Butterfield

William Butterfield, actor, dramatic and stage director, arrived on Coast recently to direct Paramount talkies.

Buys "Golowin"

Jacob Wasserman's novel, "Golowin," recently purchased by Paramount, has gone into production as "Black Eagles," with Fay Wray and Gary Cooper co-starred.

Joins Cast

Greta Granstedt was signed recently by Paramount for "Close Harmony."

Christie Musical Manager

H. D. Lawler, formerly of the staff of the Victor Talking Machine Co., has been appointed music manager for Christie talkies.

Dorothy Hall

The leading role opposite Richard Dix in "Nothing But the Truth" is Dorothy Hall, blonde stage actress featured in "Precious," current play.

Christie Silent Production

Besides talkies, Christie studios are also devoting themselves to production of silent comedies. Billy Dooley is making "Crazy Doings," Bobby Vernon "His Angel Face," Jack Duffy "Are Scotchmen Tight?", Frances Lee and Billy Engle "Tight Places."

Olive Borden With RKO

Olive Borden is included in star group being assembled for RKO Productions. She has been signed for two talking vehicles to be made at the new Hollywood plant. Her "Love in the Desert" is set for Broadway showing soon.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

HERR JOSEF VON STERNBERG takes vocal exception to a remark made by this writer in a review of Raymond Cannon's "Red Wine" . . . the remark was to the effect that it proves "a man doesn't have to have a prefix of 'Herr' or 'Von' to be different and clever" . . . Herr Josef Von Sternberg labors under the impression that something personal was meant toward himself and is rather ired . . . in the first place the crack was a compliment to "Herrs" and "Vons" . . . and secondly it applies only to those who were BORN with the "Von.". . .

IT seems an idiotic procedure for studios to tie up a certain amount of seats for previews and not use them . . . the least concession they might make to the theatre is to give the manager permission to sell the seats which are not occupied by the time the preview starts . . . the cause for this outburst is the lines against the walls and in the rear of Bards West Adams where Paramount previewed "The Canary Murder Case" . . . I saw at least fifteen vacant seats roped off all through the preview . . . knew of at least four reviewers who stood up through the picture in the rear and saw several women and children standing along the walls . . . it annoyed me so much to see the women and children that I couldn't relax in my big comfortable seat. . . .

EDNA MARION will be the new "vamp" in the "The Collegians" series . . . Dixie Gay, who has "menaced" in the series thus far is under contract to Fox and has been recalled by that studio . . . if anyone doubts the Spanish ancestry of Anita Page . . . one look at her Dad and kid brother . . . Mr. and Master Pomares will be absolute proof . . . Joseph Steele, right-hand man to Richard Barthelmess had a grand time being compelled to take bows for Dick at a preview of "Weary River" held in Los Angeles last week . . . both he and Barthelmess wear hats . . . oh yeh both also have black hair . . . oddly enough the local preview was held a night after the New York opening, but it was a great idea . . . for it certainly is one picture I wouldn't miss . . . it's got everything. . . .

KEN MAYNARD bought a new plane and broke it in with an intended non-stop flight to Agua Caliente . . . Ken forgot that he would have to land at San Diego before flying over the border . . . so the "non" was stopped . . . Bebe Daniels has been chosen queen of the policemen's ball in San Francisco . . . which should burn up certain cops in Orange County . . . Edmund Breese will be another judge in pictures, this time "The Gamblers" . . . which makes three in a row for Breese on the bench . . . Bill Beaudine has started work on "Two Weeks Off" for First National. . . .

THE height-of-something . . . no this is the depth . . . for it is a low stunt, was the filing of a divorce suit by a well known leading man against his screen actress wife last week . . . for she left him over a year ago and filed suit and then withdrew it . . . meanwhile he waited until he opened in a play and then filed suit himself in order to get publicity benefits while working . . . but that's the part of Hollywood which is publicized. . . .

Re-organize Story Dep't

First National has re-organized story department at West Coast studio, since appointment of Anthony Coldeway as assistant associate producer there. There are now 13 writers including: Tom Geraghty, Bradley King, Monte Katterjohn, Louis Stevans, Forrest Halsey, Ewart Adamson, James Gruen, F. McGrew Willis, Humphrey Pearson, Paul Perez, Walter Anthony, Gene Towne, Edward Luddy.

Paramount Signs Al St. John

Al St. John, former two-reel featured comic, has been placed under long-term contract by Paramount. His first will be as co-comedian to Jack Oakie in "Burlesque." There is a possibility of Oakie and St. John being teamed in a series of feature length comedies later.

Voice Tests

Jack White has completed voice tests of various contract players at Educational studio. From Lupino Lane to "Big Boy," all of the players submitted to tests.

"All-Male" Comedy

Something new—an "all-male" comedy, is being directed for Educational by Stephen Roberts with Monty Collins and Vernon Dent co-starred, Robert Graves and Al Thompson supporting.

With Jerry Drew

Supporting Jerry Drew in his newest Ideal-Educational comedy, are Vernon Dent, Lucille Hutton and Estelle Bradley. A new comedy vamp, Dolores Johnson, has a part.

Franklin Makes New Title Change

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.—The latest title change for an attraction booked into Loew's State, Los Angeles, is from "Mother Knows Best" to "Sally of My Dreams." The latter title, suggested by Harold B. Franklin, is given in view of the popularity of the theme song to the Fox picture. Franklin changed the names of "Red Wine" to "Let's Make Whoopee" and "Annie Laurie" to "Ladies from Hell" for local showings.

First Report on "Broadway Melody"

Broadway Melody

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

(Editor of the Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News)

LOS ANGELES, February 6.—This picture is great. It will revolutionize the talkies. Song and dialogue combined achieve an interest that at this juncture, could never possibly be attained by dialogue alone. The songs are sure hits, particularly "You Were Meant for Me."

A ballet of painted dolls is a remarkable spectacle with snappy music. The direction is an amazing indication of what can be done in the new medium.

"Broadway Melody" will go over 100 per cent in any house equipped with sound, and they'll all want to equip when they hear about it. This is the entertainment of the hour.

The Trail of '98

Sound Version Review

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"THE TRAIL OF '98" makes a much better program picture than it did a $2 special. Had it been turned loose in the regular picture houses this film would have swept the country as something really big, but the idea of trying to force it as a road show when it wasn't that at all, may have taken some of the edge from the picture in the towns where it has already been shown. But where they have seen it at the $2 price it is going to be a box office sensation.

At the Capitol, in New York, this week the sound version of the picture is being shown. It has no talking sequences whatever, but there is a synchronized score with some musical and singing numbers, and sound effects. The score and effects have been carefully devised and added to the picture as it is now cut in a manner that make them worth while from an audience standpoint. At this house they are using the giant screen for two of the sequences, namely the snow slide and the shooting of the rapids and in both instances this was very effective.

Just in the event that you do not recall the story from the first review we will remind you in brief that it is a tale of the Alaska gold rush and the hardships that the maddened throng that were seeking their fortunes encountered. The cast has Dolores Del Rio, Ralph Forbes and Harry Carey as its principal players and the direction was in the hands of Clarence Brown.

The picture has some terrific punches in its present form and the fight between Forbes and Carey with the subsequent setting afire of the dance hall and Carey jumping with his clothing in flames from a balcony will prove a great kick to audiences.

There is a theme song "I Found Gold When I Found You" that is sung at one scene in the picture and the song of the gold seekers as they tramp through the snow will hold your audiences.

Drawing Power: Play it up as one of the real big pictures of the year with a great east and you will not go wrong.

The Doctor's Secret

A Sure Fire B. O. Talker Knockout

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

HERE is the class of all-talker productions to date. It proves that the talking film is here to stay, for when it is possible to take something as fine as Sir James M. Barrie's "Half An Hour" and put it on the screen with the dialogue intact and hold a picture audience of about 4,000 people on the edge of their chairs and have them react as a single person to the dramatic climax, you have got something in entertainment that the public wants. They are proving it at the Paramount, New York, this week for this is the first picture that is to be held over at this house since it opened.

And what a cast! Ruth Chatterton, H. B. Warner, Robert Edeson, John Loder and Ethel Wales. Every name known to the stage and known favorably, and with the exception possibly of Miss Chatterton, as favorably known to picture fans. But you do not have to worry about Miss Chatterton, for after her performance in this picture and the work that she does in the Emil Jannings picture "Sins of the Fathers" she is going to be known and liked everywhere that they show these two pictures. It is a pleasure to watch her performanee in this instance. The ease with which she handles herself and the manner in which she utilizes her voice, for of the women who to date have tried delivering in the "talkies" she stands first and foremost.

The story is a soeiety melodrama, with a girl of English nobility sold into wedlock with a wealthy commoner, whose suspicions of her are so rabid that he inflicts not only mental but physical abuse as well on her. Finally she decides to elope to Egypt with the man of her own station in life that she loves. She leaves her home as the clock strikes 7:30 P. M. but is back again at 8 o'clock, but in the space of that half hour her lover has been killed when he went to call a cab to take them to the station, she has been interviewed by a physician who was on the scene of the accident who mistakes her for an immoral woman and advises her to commit suieide and on returning home has tried to obtain a note which she originally left with her jewels for her husband to read after she had fled, but was unable to do so. At that point the physician who advised her after the aceident walks into her home as a dinner guest, invited by her husband and the whole tale is almost spilled right there and then. The husband does become suspicious that his wife is the woman that the doctor has related his story about, but in the end is convinced otherwise, while the wife eontinues in life with her secret anguish.

It is all superbly acted by the players and delightfully handled in the direction by William C. De Mille. Of the men Robert Edeson as the doctor easily carries off the honors. H. B. Warner was quite disappointing in the matter of voice recording, his being decidedly harsh and blasting at times.

Drawing Power: Go forth and proclaim this as the class of class as far as all-talking features are concerned to date. Play up the east and go after the regular legitimate theatre following for this cast is worthy of their attention.

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

VERY little of anything new in the way of story, locale or situations ever seem to find their way into the series of Universal featurettes starring Bob Curwood, but despite the fact one may be hardboiled, the fast riding of horses and rough-and-tumble human brawls, no matter how crudely done will send the blood pressure up a speck. The above mentioned, do appear in this series. The audiences that have been backing these Westerns will get their usual kick.

Jane Martin, kidnapped from home in her father's absence, manages to signal Bob Cole (Curwood), who chanced to be passing the Hacienda where she was held prisoner. Bob always seeking adventure, steals up to the house and hears the girl's story of an unwelcome marriage into which she is being forced. Bob overhears the plans of Jane's captor, Jim Brady, and from ambush sees Brady's men shooting at the girl's father, who is searching for her. Bob joins Martin and plans a ruse, by which, after some hard riding and fights, Jane is freed just as the ceremony is about to be performed.

Captain Lash

Not Much Sting to This One

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

POSSIBLY the Fox production department was impressed by the business done by "A Girl in Every Port," so they decided that they were going to give Victor McLaglen another sailor story. The result is "Captain Lash" a tale of the stoke-hold and smuggled jewels, no real love interest and of questionable box-office strength. Of course it isn't an easy thing to fit Vic with a story, and after all this one has its comedy moments. Clyde Cook is responsible for the laughs, he, playing opposite McLaglen throughout the action and the contrast between the husky star and slight comedian works out to advantage.

McLaglen is the boss of the black gang below decks and has won the title of the best stoker afloat thereby gaining the title of "Captain" Lash. As the story opens he and his shadow are ashore for a few drinks and a couple of fights, but NO girls. They get all three for without the girl element how could the fight start? After a roughhouse in a waterfront dive they start for their ship and crash into an automobile unloading a passenger. The passenger is a good looking girl in the person of Claire Windsor, and Lash, with ever an eye to a lass, looks her over admiringly. After the ship's at sea, she with others in the captain's party inspect the boat and the girl climbs down into the stoke-hold where a crazed fireman heaves a coal scoop at the officer and knocks of a steam valve head. Lash jumps between the girl and the escaping steam shielding her with his bare back and being severly burned with the result he is taken to the sick bay. From then on it seems that a romance is blooming, until one sees the girl work a semi-badger game on a wealthy jewel collector who is a passenger and knowing that her substitution of imitation jewels for the real ones that have been shown her is apt to be discovered, she gets to the husky stoker who saved her life and asks him to bring them ashore for her. When she lands she is searched but no jewels are found, and a watch is kept on her home. When Lash shows up there he turns over the envelope which he believes contains the jewels to her, but he reckoned without his concertina playing partner, who, to prevent Lash from being involved in a crime substituted bunker coal for the stones. The girl's gang set upon the giant stoker and he finally cleans them all out, just as the police break in. After the fracas he thinks of Cocky his pal and knows where the jewels are and restores them to the rightful owner and disillusioned as to "real" ladies he returns to his waterfront love.

Drawing Power: Play up the comedy end strongest for that is the strength of the picture.

Ned McCobb's Daughter

Melodrama Holds the Attention

(Reviewed by Raymond Canly)

THIS story of the redemption of a bootlegger through the love of a good woman contains suspense, fine portrayals by three principals and authentic story detail. It is the picturization of the stage play by Sidney Howard, adapted by Marie Beulah Dix. William J. Cowan, a new director, handled the megaphone and his work elicited good feeling from the players and atmspheric tone.

Irene Rich has the title role. This actress has been more fortunate than her sisters lately in that she has been given roles that enable her to put over some keen acting. Her character painting of Mrs. Craig in "Craig's Wife" is still fresh in mind. In this new attraction she is extremely capable in handling the role of a steadfast woman.

Her principal support comes from Robert Armstrong, as the bootlegger and rumrunner who loves her, and George Barraud, as her husband who betrays both her and the rumrunner, his brother. The late Theodore Roberts has a small role in the early part of the film and Carol Lombard is seen as a vamp.

Armstrong uses the home of Ned McCobb's daughter as a blind for his secret trade. While one of the government men is investigating the cellar of the house he is killed by her husband. To conceal his crime, the husband puts the body in the apple bin; the dead man's buddies arrive searching for him and this scene leads to a fine play of suspense. The inspectors all but discover the body.

The guilty husband plunges to his death, Armstrong is arrested and taken away as a violator of the law, and Ned McCobb's daughter is left alone with the promise that when he has served his term he will come back to her.

The film is equipped with RCA synchronized score and sound that dovetail nicely with its action. It is splendid recording.

Drawing Power: This is the type of attraction that gets over in most any house.

THEME: Drama of a rumrunner's redemption, through the influence of his brother's wife.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Released, Dec. 2, 1928. Sound footage, 6,015 feet. Silent footage, 6,070 feet. Director, Wm. J. Cowan.

The Divine Lady

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

Wins Merit On Sheer Beauty

AFTER seeing a production such as "The Divine Lady," the big, or would-be big moguls of the industry, gather. (as they did in the lobby of the Carthay Circle) and state solemnly, "It is such pictures which are credits to the industry. They give pictures a status of art and dignity."

The fact that "The Divine Lady" may be classed as "art and dignified" should not frighten exhibitors. In spite of such comments, it is a good picture, splendidly directed, exceptionally well enacted and beautifully photographed. The story may not please historians who claim Lady Hamilton was not quite the beautiful character First National's production has made her.

A reviewer, such as this one, having seen the virile and modern "Weary River" directed by Frank Lloyd a few days before the opening of "The Divine Lady" cannot but marvel at the prolificacy of the man. The Corinne Griffith opus is in such direct contrast. One is heart-stirring, but with a strength which stands out like the village blacksmith's muscles. The other is dainty, —exquisite in fact.

Without detracting credit for such scenes from Frank Lloyd, after all they are splendid only because of the fine performances given by the artists themselves. The various comparisons made of Corinne Griffith to different flowers, the favorite one being to an orchid, are more odious than ever in the case of "The Divine Lady." Speaking horticulturishly, (whew!) one may admit the delicate orchid, but must bring in with it, the strength of the geranium, the coloring of oak leaves in autumn for changeable moods, the sparkle of daisy fields in the sunlight. It isn't quite proper to wax poetical in a trade-paper, but regardless of whether orchids are delicate, geraniums strong, or daisys sparkle,—there it is. Take it or leave it. One could boil it down simply to the fact that Corinne Griffith gives a magnificent characterization.

And she has a cast of supporting artists who make it tough for any individual to stand out among. There is Victor Varconi's Admiral Nelson; H. B. Warner's Lord Hamilton; the work of Ian Keith, William Conklin and Marie Dressler among others. Worth individual commendation, because they have so much more to do, are Victor Varconi and H. B. Warner. The only sound are some singing sequences by Miss Griffith, which are very good.

Drawing Power: One of Corinne Griffith's very best. As a spectacle it should do very big business. Cast has plenty of names.

THEME: Supposedly the story of Lady Hamilton and Admiral Nelson, based on history, bringing in the biographically true death of Nelson at Trafalgar and the defeat of Napoleon.

Produced by Walter Moroseo and distributed by First National. Directed by Frank Lloyd; continuity by Agnes Christine Johnson, adaptation by Forest Halsey. Titles by Harry Carr and Edwin Justis Mayer.

Naughty Baby

Not So Naughty But Pretty Nice

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

ALICE WHITE and Jack Mulhall are co-featured in "Naughty Baby," a First National release, at the Strand this week. Alice has turned from a red head into a blonde and the chances are that you are going to like her just as well with her blondined locks as you did with her near auburn curls. In the picture she is not so very naughty and still very nice. Mulhall makes a pleasing lead opposite her, but Benny Rubin and Georgie Stone overshadow Jack when it comes to this picture. From a box office standpoint there is little to recommend other than to say that it will get by with the average feature that is worthy of playing any of the week stand first runs.

It is a Broadway story with Alice a check room gal in one of the big hotels, where the hero, Jack Mulhall, is supposed to be stopping as a Boston millionaire. Alice makes up her mind that she is going to capture the prize, even though all the White Light gold-diggers are trying to do the same. With the aid of her three boy friends, one of whom is the son of a hockshop proprietor, and he furnishes the jewelry when Alice dresses up; the other an assistant in a modiste shops "borrows" gowns for her and the third a chauffeur provides the cars for her to ride in, she steps out as a lady. But in the end she is stripped of her finery, and it looks for a time as though the prize that the girls are fighting for is nothing but a phony. But when the smoke of battle clears away, and the detectives are shooed out he proves to be a miltionaire after all and little Alice who stuck steadfastly when danger threatened succeeds in marching to the altar with him.

Benny Rubin, as the boy from the hockshop, pulls a lot of laughs from the audience and shows that he has a spot in pictures. Georgie Stone steps right along with him and registers nicely. Thelma Todd displays her blonde loveliness and there seems to be an awful lot of it. That girl better go into training to keep her weight in hand. Doris Dawson playing opposite Alice looks like a million dollars and is a sure fire bet for the future.

Drawing Power: Alice White and Jack Mulhall as a new team for this picture only. A lively story of Broadway gold-diggers with lots of laughs. It will please any average audience.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length: synchronized, 6,360 feet; silent, 6,406 feet. Running time: sound version, an hour and eleven minutes. Directed by Mervyn Leroy.

Red Hot Speed

Denny Reveals His English Accent

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"RED HOT SPEED" is Reginald Denny's first picture with talking sequences for Universal. The star reveals an English accent which is quite out of place for a young district attorney in an American city. The picture itself is neither very speedy or very hot when judged from a box office standpoint.

Supporting Denny are Alice Day and Fritzi Ridgeway, the former playing the lead and the latter doing a Swedish slavey that failed to get a laugh. The balance of the cast was just passable.

The story, on which the picture is based, is one that might happen in any city where the local government is as loose as it is in Los Angeles. Everyone has a political or police pet of some kind who can fix tickets handed out for the violation of the speed laws or other traffic violations. The young district attorney is also a fixer, but he is trying to win the favor of one of the local newspaper publishers, who is a demon against speeding and who wants to conduct a campaign to send all violators to jail.

It is the publisher's daughter who causes all the complications. She likes to step on the gas, but the fear that her father might find out and compel her to return to boarding school leads her to give phony names each time she is pinched. The young D. A. is on his way to court when he is run into a couple of times by a girl driving a roadster recklessly. When he arrives in court late as the result of one of her smashes with him he discovers her among those present as a prisoner. In informing the court of her recklessness he becomes so rabid that the Judge finally paroles her in his custody for sixty days.

That night when he arrives at the publisher's home he finds that the girl paroled in his custody is the daughter, and then there are a series of overdrawn farcical situations that are hard to believe. It ends finally with the D. A. and the reckless driver going into the marriage license bureau together.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length: 6,288 feet. Running time: An hour and fourteen minutes. Released: Jan. 27, 1929. Directed by Joseph A. Henabery.

THE CAST

The District Attorney	Reginald Denny
The Girl	Alice Day
The Slavey	Fritzie Ridgeway

A child's dream is the theme of a new Laemmle Novelty, entitled "Fantasie." Here we can see little Betty Graham Jane and her fairie boat. There are 13 in all of the Novelties, written by Sam H. Jacobson and directed by Jacques Rollens

Nothing nice about the weather. Lewis Stone, Nils Asther and Greta Garbo cannot go very far from shelter in this scene from "Wild Orchids," a story with an African setting by John Colton which was directed by Sidney Franklin for M-G-M.

"The Queen Bee"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE cartoonist of Pathe's Aesop Film Fables devoted his animation this time to the bee family, and has created the usual good job.

Queen of the bees goes for a ride in her coach, driven by several bee steeds, and as she passes a poor drone on the road, she halts long enough to toss him a coin. She does not travel far, however, before the villainous Simeon Spider, pounces upon her, and drags her to his lair. Hearing the Queen's frantic cries, the poor drone races to the scene, treats the villain to a real old-fashioned cuffing, and wins the kisses of the fair one.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Buys "Most Immoral Lady" to Star Corinne Griffith

Alice Brady's current stage vehicle, "A Most Immoral Lady," now playing at the New York Klaw theatre, has been acquired by First National-Vitaphone as a starring vehicle for Corinne Griffith. It is probable that the screen actress will start working on the all-dialogue version of the play following the completion of "Lillies of the Field."

Peggy Wood Reported as About to Sign With "U"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Peggy Wood, musical comedy star, is reported en route to the Coast to close contract with Universal.

"It's always fair weather when good fellows get together." This trio in Tiffany-Stahl's "The Rainbow." Paul Hurst, Lawrence Gray and Harvey Clark, could very well render the Stein Song as they eye their schooners

"The Melancholy Dame"

(Christie Talking Comedy)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THE Christies seem to have beaten all the other producers to the screen with a talking comedy of colored folks' life with an all colored cast. Both M-G-M and Fox are still making theirs. A story by Octavus Roy Cohen was chosen for the first all-colored comedy to be released. It deals with life in a Birmingham cabaret.

It opens with the wife of the proprietor seated at a table in the cabaret insisting that her husband fire the hot dancer who is entertaining there. He refuses on the ground that until the hot dancer and her piano-playing husband arrived the place was a failure. But under threats from the wife that she'll clean up, he tries to get the dancer to quit. She refuses, and further tells the proprietor that she has told her gigantic piano playing husband that she had been married previously and that her first husband abused her frightfully, with the result that hubby No. 2 has been looking for No. 1 ever since, but she has kindly refrained from telling that the cabaret proprietor was No. 1.

Then the proprietor's wife takes a hand and when she learns that the dancer was formerly married to her husband she is sore and seeks out the piano player. It ends in a chase and when the giant finally corners the little fellow the expected fails to happen for all he wants to know is how to get a divorce from the dancer. Lots of fun and well played.

"Just Monkeys"

(Universal—One Reel)

ANOTHER one of the Laemmle novelties has put in its appearance, and although it is quite entertaining, falls a bit short of previous releases in the series. This one centers around the lives of two monkey sweethearts, who are captured in their jungle home at different times, and wind up in the same zoo cage.

Horace was a lonely little monk, until one day his sweetheart Maggie is placed in the same cage with him. Maggie has much to say of the scandals, etc., of their native home. The pair are very happy, until Maggie sees the terrible human who had captured her standing near the cage. Watching his chance, Horace pulls the gent's whiskers and beats him in general. The little monkeys fiercely resent being the jest and amusement of passers-by. Finally locked in each others arms, they fall asleep and dream of a monkey heaven where injustices were righted, and only unfair humans were kept in cages. There is some clever work done by the trained "monks," and the number was well handled by Director Rollens. The kids especially, will boost plenty for this one.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"She's a Pippin"

(Universal—Two Reels)

JUST ordinary comedy will be found in this release of the Mike and Ike series. This line-up of comic films have pretty nearly all given off an appearance of being "machine made," and the same old stereotyped gags are used to vamp the giggles in this new one.

Mike and Ike as sailors, get shore leave and set about finding some entertainment. Armed with their trusty address books, the two crawl into a phone booth and wreck it trying to date up some queens. They take to the street, after having wrapped the phone and wires about the neck of a dignified old duck. They next flirt with two husky maids, who present them with gorgeous black eyes. Finally Mike and Ike get the eye from a couple of girls and are asked to their home. Arriving there they see a man sneaking in one of the windows, who in reality is the girls' father. A slapstick free-for-all is evolved in this situation, with Mike and Ike getting the worst of matters. Not much of a wallop packed into this one, but it might find its place in the neighborhoods and small towns.

"Knock Out Buster"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

BUSTER BROWN and his gang appear in this comedy, which takes a rating of just average fun. Adult audiences will probably yawn through the screening of this, but the antics of Buster, Mary Jane and the little darkey "Oatmeal," will no doubt take the juveniles over.

While Mr. and Mrs. Brown are preparing for the annual family camping trip, Buster and the kids stage a prize fight in the backyard. Buster takes on the fat boy, and in spite of the fact that Mary Jane is timekeeper, Oatmeal referee, and the dog Tige his second, he gets a very lively cuffing around. Later father said Oatmeal couldn't go on the camping trip, but when the automobile trailer is unpacked Oatmeal is found hidden among the luggage. Camp established, the kids go on an exploration campaign of a nearby farm. It is needless to record the fury of friend farmer, after the kids caused havoc to his place.

Robert North Appointed Burbank Production Chief

Robert North, assistant to Al Rockett, associate producer at First National's Burbank studio, has joined the ranks of producers there and will be in charge of the production of pictures as well as continue his former work as Rockett's aide. The first film assigned him is "Broadway Babies."

"The Eligible Mr. Bangs"

(Educational-Coronet Talkie—2 Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A SOPHISTICATED offering, poised in a nonchalant manner and bearing the witty conversation of the habitues of drawing room circles, who smoke Murads and read the New Yorker (if you read the ads). Yes, and quite (extremely so) eligible for showings on the now rejuvenated screen projecting the laughter and talk of charming people in clousecups.

In other words, "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," the first of the new series of Coronet talkies, can readily be stamped with the trademark: quality. Nothing cheap nor tawdry here; instead, class—in the acting, dialogue, settings and all the other important things that can either make or break a picture.

Edward Everett Horton is co-starred with Florence Eldridge, and Johnny Arthur with Mabel Forrest are secondary players. Horton is quite effective as Mr. Leighton Bangs, eligible for matrimony, and Miss Eldridge is a splendid foil for his light, subtle humor. As a matter of fact, the lady in question has a very pleasant personality and renders her lines with considerable charm.

The story concerns the pursuit of the eligible Mr. Bangs by this personable female. Incidentally it tells how Mr. Bangs, supposed to be so cold towards the ladies, pursues her. Although they are extremely fond of each other, they both assume an attitude of indifference which belies their real feelings. Finally in a nicely drawn tete-a-tete, Bangs capitulates to the charming young lady, who with great dexterity has twisted him around her little finger. There are sharp little flashes of pantomime, wit and dashes of humor.

Sidney B. Brennecke supervised the story by Robert Housum which Hugh Faulcon directed. William Ayer did the photography. The Western Electric system is employed.

"Girls Will Be Boys"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is a Grantland Rice-Pathe Sportlight subject, dedicated by the famous sports authority, to the marvelous strides the modern girl has made in the field of athletics. To prove that the up-to-date Miss has set a goal of belonging to the super sex in sport, she is shown performing feats of muscular skill, that originally were only the forte of the male.

Among the sports enthusiasts shown in action are: Lillian Copeland, champion shot-putter; Margaret Jenkins, women's champion javelin thrower; the Earle Wallace dancers of Los Angeles, and Alice White, film star, expert aquaplane rider. Will be of especial interest to the women folks, but all sports fans will get a kick.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

The beginning of a quarrel. Vernon Dent enjoys the spectacle of Monty Collins with the bosom of his shirt all awry. The two Educational comedians are co-featured in "Making Whoopee" in which a shirt-pulling fracas is the climax.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

By Charles E. Lewis

Australia in Here Again

A short time ago I published a letter on "Sound" which was received from Frederick Sykes, who calls himself, "Versatile Manager" of the Piccadilly Theatre in Sydney, Australia.

His letter threw a different angle on a manager's viewpoint of "sound" and brought forth much varied comment from members and readers of the CLUB pages. Now I have received another letter from Mr. Sykes dealing with "Talkies" and boys, it's corking good reading for anyone, both from the intelligent and humorous sides of the question. Because I am a little crowded for space in this issue I am holding it for next week. But by all means be sure and read Mr. Sykes' letter on what he thinks of the entrance of "Talkies" and their effect on countries such as Australia.

Let the Ads Pay for 'Em

In response to our recent request for theatre programs we received, among many others, several of the Cameo Theatre's from St. Johnsville, N. Y.

Mr. Miller, who pilots this theatre for the Smalley Circuit, is an advocate of ads. in theatre programs to pay the cost of them. He tells me that—"we will never have a program published that will not more than pay for itself." And his samples prove that he practices what he preaches. There are a lot of managers who have the same idea, while others have tried it and decided that the trouble in getting the ads and the payment for them does not make the idea attractive enough. Especially when one stops to consider how cheaply programs can now be secured through the various theatrical printers who specialize in such work. But if you do like the idea, then make the most of it. We are promised some good exploitation stunts from Miller, so watch for them.

Exploiting the "Soundies"

Another phase of picture exploitation has arrived in this great business of ours. Managers with wired houses are rapidly thinking up new ways to exploit "sound" pictures. They are trying to fit old ideas into new ideas. "Sound" pictures are just here long enough now so that theatres running them are turning to exploitation to put them over.

We want to "tell the world" how you—and you—and you sold "sound" and "talkies" to your public. Send us the story and we will pass it on to your brother exhibitors.

It's a Great Life, Boys

WHEN someone ups and asks, "What is a theatre manager," one has asked a healthy mouthful. Of all the executive positions in this great big world, that of theatre managing stands out head and shoulders over any other job you can think of. He is expected to be an expert in over a dozen different lines, he must be a student and exponent of psychology, he must be a diplomat in every sense of the word. He is expected to be a perfect critic and censor, especially if his theatre runs vaudeville. He must be a darned good ad writer. He must have a knowledge of program layouts. He must be capable of writing original, and good, readers for his local newspapers. He must promote good will among patrons, business houses and merchants of his town. He must serve on numerous committees for the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Lions Clubs and all other organizations in his city. He must be an economic expert to run his theatre at the lowest possible cost. He must understand how to get the most out of his help. He must teach his staff how to dispense courtesy and service to his patrons. And—and—and—and—and—we could go on forever, but we're running out of breath.

And yet there are some "smart" guys who tell us that "any guy with a little sense" can run any house in the circuit. Find us, if you can, another industry in the whole wide world where so much is expected of a man. Find us, if you dare, another position which is so exacting in its demands for time and labor. Find us, if it is possible, a job where a man is expected to be familiar with as many different phases as theatre managing demands.

And yet, those same guys will say that any "young guy" could handle this or that house.

Who is it that locks the place up at night—sometimes as late as midnight—and is then so tired that he must crawl into bed? Who is it that is on the job early the next morning getting things in shape for the day's business? Who is it who must grab his meals at the convenience of his job, rather than the way his health demands? Who is it that has to pep up the organist and orchestra when they fall into a melancholy spell? Who must remind his operators that expensive booth equipment must have some attention once in a while? Who is it that peeks here and there to see if the porters are laying down on the job?

And still those guys will say that running theatres could be called child's play.

Maybe they are right and I'm all wrong.

Now you tell one.

Pete Egan Knows His Onions

P. (Pete) D. Egan, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Regina, Sask., Can., sent me a clipping together with his membership application, and the clipping brought to light the very evident fact that Pete doesn't let the grass grow under his feet.

He caught some fine publicity in his leading paper by capitalizing on the fact that Beatrice Lillie and Jeanette Loff had come from Coburg, which is close to Regina. When Egan played Miss Lillie in a comedy talkie and Miss Loff appeared in "Annapolis" he made sure that his patrons knew all about it. Live stuff, boys.

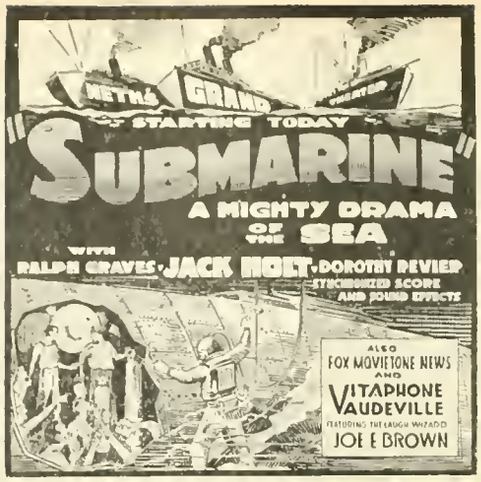
Club Service Bureau

Replying to F. H. S. regarding the non-synchronous device which he asks about, I wish to say that up to this writing I cannot find any data on that device. I have made numerous inquiries but no one seems to have heard of it. I suggest that you go very slow about buying this equipment until you have heard a finished installation. In the event that I get any word about it I will write you at once.

K. Richardson's request for manufacturers who would cooperate on candy matinees for kiddies is quite in order, inasmuch as we called attention only a short time ago to such a stunt. The companies making Life Savers, "Oh Henry," or in fact any nationally known manufacturers can be addressed through your local distributors of their product and they will explain the various methods through which they will cooperate.

D. G. Jr. asks about Low Intensity lamps and whether they are more practical than the newer Hi-Low reflector arcs. In my opinion, if you have a throw of under 100 feet from the booth to the screen, the Low Intensity lamps are both economical and practical. For throws over that distance we would recommend the Hi-Low type of lamp. We use both types in our various houses and according to conditions find them very satisfactory. Any booth equipment house will gladly furnish additional facts and information about the different types of reflector arcs if you will drop them a line.

Mickley Runs a Birthday Party



Manager Frank S. Mickley of the Earle Theatre in Allentown, Pa., tells me about a Birthday party he ran in his theatre to celebrate the first anniversary of the Earle. He has a nice large lobby and he placed two long tables there so he could serve birthday cake and coffee to his patrons or friends of the theatre. He ran his "party" during the week of Dec. 17th, which we all know is one of the poorest weeks in show business and it certainly helped to brighten the box office for that week.

He further states that the coffee and cake were furnished free in return for a card in his lobby. This is worth trying, boys, the next time you celebrate your theatre's anniversary.

Something New In Handbills

The genial manager of the National Theatre in San Francisco, Mr. George Knowles, sent us something really different in a handbill for public distribution. The idea was to print, what appeared to be, a newspaper front page utilizing regular newspaper stock, and following the regulation newsy layout. Centered on the page was his announcement of "White Shadows in the South Seas" and all the surrounding copy consisted of items of local interest. The entire finished article is most certainly eye-arresting and bound to create, as Mr. Knowles tells us, a lot of added interest in both the theatre and the attraction. It is certainly an idea worth copying anywhere if you are looking to get away from the same circular type of handbills. We suggest that you drop a line to Mr. Knowles, his theatre address is 25 Taylor St., San Francisco, Calif. He will gladly mail you a copy.

RCA Photophone is being installed in the Colonial Theatre in Cambridge and the Hippodrome in Marietta, Ohio, houses run by the Cambridge and Marietta Amusement Company, of which E. E. Finch is president. The installations will be completed this month.

Depinet Holds Conference of Branch Mgrs.

Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager of First National held a conference in New York Thursday of last week with the eastern branch managers to consider the marketing of the First National-Vitaphone productions to be released during the coming three months. All hands attended the world premiere of "Weary River" held at the Central Theatre.

The new releases under consideration are, "Weary River," "The Divine Lady," "Why Be Good?", "The Man and the Moment," and others. Among the branch managers who attended are, R. S. Wehrle, Albany; T. New Fox in St. Louis Opened With Ceremonies

St. Louis' largest picture theatre, the new Fox, was opened on the evening of January 31, with a gala program and ceremonies in which figured civic notables as well as leading executives of the Fox corporation. The house takes rank with the Roxy, the Fox, Brooklyn, and other theatres of the chain in size and equipment.

President William Fox and John Zanft, head of the theatre organization, attended the opening. As part of the civic ceremonies there was an address of welcome by Henry S. Caulfield, governor of Missouri, and an expression of welcome by Victor J. Miller, mayor of St. Louis. Mr. Fox offered a dedicatory scroll.

The house was designed by C. Howard Crane and his associates along the lines of the Hindu mosques in India. D. G. Aronberg and William Fried constructed it.

Evans Mgr. Richmond Loew's

Howard S. Evans has come to Richmond, Va., to manage Loew's Theatre, as successor to Floyd F. Smith, who has been transferred and was last heard of in New York, awaiting his new assignment date.

Mr. Evans came to Richmond from Memphis, Tenn., where he was manager of Loew's Strand. With him are his wife and two children. Virginia is not new to Mr. Evans, as he received his first theatrical management training under the Loew chain at Norfolk, Va., several years ago.

Veidt to N. Y. for Appearance

The Avalon, New Catalina Structure, Will Cost Well Over $1,000,000

THE Avalon Theatre and Casino, started as a million dollar project and now in the process of construction at Catalina, Cal., has started on its second million. William Wrigley, Jr., has okayed the elaborate plans for interior decoration and these plans indicate that no cost limit has been placed on the structure, which, say architects and constructors, will be a cultural contribution from Mr. Wrigley instead of a business enterprise. It is said that the ideas embodied in the Avalon and casino are of a new type in architectural and decorative art.

The building is individual, to say the least. Ten stories in height, yet comprising only two floors, the main structure is shaped as a complete circle, 190 feet in diameter. Three gigantic trusses brace the building horizontally and the two floors, comprising a ball-room on the upper level and situated 56 feet from the ground floor and the theatre auditorium, are under a double dome, an umbrella-shaped ceiling covering the former and the full dome the latter. Encircling the entire structure, a 14-foot deck promenade is accessible from all points of the ball-room. The building overlooks the ocean. Unique as well as elaborate treatment in lighting effects and mural paintings are planned for the theatre proper. There will be no center lighting for the full dome but behind a decorative wall 400 lights in a series of colors will control the lighting effects.

New Carolina in Winston-Salem, N. C. Is Southland's Newest Movie

THE Carolina Theatre, Fourth and Marshall Streets, Winston-Salem, N. C., is the Publix-Saenger circuit's latest link as well as the newest of the Southland's moving picture enterprises. The house enjoyed a gala opening during January.

Much attention was paid to the work of decoration, the workmen striving laboriously to achieve delightful effects right up to the time of opening. The lobby, inasmuch as it first greets the eye of a patron, immediately impresses him and gives him an inkling of the pleasing decorative effects that he is to find within. Each piece of decorating and statuary was especially prepared for the Carolina and was designed exactly according to the architect's plans. The lighting effect as worked out shows off the remainder of the decorative scheme to the best advantage. The Carolina is equipped with a pipe organ and Vitaphone and Movietone apparatus.

Two of the latest type Simplex projectors with Westinghouse bases and Peerless high intensity lamps are the foremost features of an elaborate projection booth. The projectors have automatic feeders and adjusting devices as well as, of course, the equipment for the operation of the sound devices.

Construction Notes and Theatre Openings

The Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles is probably the brightest theatre in town. A new marquee, costing around $20,000, lights up the house's exterior in marvelous fashion. The house, having been rewired completely, presents new and pleasing light effects.

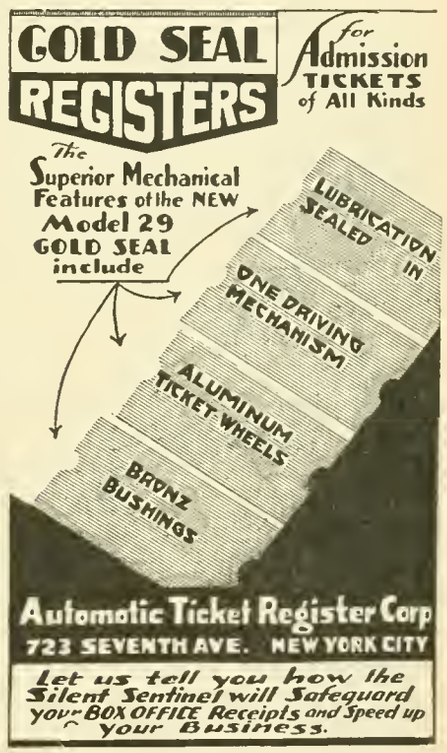
The work of completion, long delayed on the Adams Theatre, Orange, Cal., by litigation, has been resumed and the finis of the workmen's activities is shortly forthcoming. The general contract has been awarded to C. T. McGraw, Long Beach contractor. The house is expected to be completed by early spring and a grand opening has been set for Easter Day by the lessee, C. E. Langley. The house will be part of a Southern California theatre chain and will feature films and vaudeville.

A modern marquee extending over the sidewalk in front of the Hemet Theatre, Hemet, Cal., was completed recently. It is entirely of iron construction and serves the double purpose of ornamenting the exterior and protecting patrons from inclement weather. William Martin is the owner of the Hemet.

Martin Schlesinger has consummated a deal with Lester and Elmer Johnson by which he takes over the theatre in Soledad, Cal., which closed late last year. Upon the reopening of the house, pictures will be shown twice weekly as heretofore.

L. B. Todd, owner of the Liberty Theatre Building, Blythe, Cal., has taken the place of R. T. Johansen, for some time operator of the shows at the Liberty. Mr. Johansen expects to go to an Arizona City where he may reenter the theatre business.

The main business district of Nantygio, near Johnstown, Pa., was recently threatened with destruction, when a fire of undetermined origin did damage estimated at $50,000 to the Star Theatre there. The theatre was levelled by the blaze and several adjoining dwellings were injured by the flames.



The Rialto Theatre in South Pasadena, Cal., is now being managed by a new personage, Ralph Horseman, who comes to the Rialto after a connection with one of the leading theatre chains.

Lowell Will Have Second Largest Mass. Film House

Purchase of the old Boston and Lowell station property in Lowell, Mass., by Herbert A. Horgan, of Boston, is announced by the Boston and Maine Railroad, which owns the old Boston and Lowell properties. The sale price is placed at $500,000.

The present buildings will be razed and on the site Mr. Horgan announces that he will erect the largest theatre, in connection with an office building, in New England outside of Boston. Plans call for the expenditure of $1,000,000 on the theatre property, which will be known, Mr. Horgan says, as the Lawrence Auditorium, and will seat 5,500 people. It will exceed the seating capacity of the Publix Metropolitan, Boston's largest theatre, by 300 seats, but will be some 700 seats less than the contemplated new Fox Theatre in Boston.

The tract purchased contains 104,000 square feet of land and is in the heart of the business district.

:: "The Check-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Lack of patronage forced the Strand theatre, Minneapolis, to go dark last week. This theatre and the Shubert, a stock house, were the only two out of the four theatres built upon Seventh street, which were still doing business. The Garrick, an F & R house, and the 7th Street, a Junior-Orpheum, were forced to close some time previous due to the same condition.

If this condition continues, Minneapolis will become konwn as "The City of Darkened Houses." The Metropolitan and the Lyceum are now only opened to traveling attractions. The Gayety, the Garrick, the Seventh St. and the Strand are so far as we are able to discover, permanently dark.

Large Downtown Cincy Houses 100% Sound

TWO more Cincinnati houses have swung into the sound column, namely, the Albee and Palace, both in the Keith-Libson chain. This makes all the larger downtown theatres 100 per cent in the talkies. The usual number of vaudeville acts will be continued at both houses.

Another "opposition house" has sprung into being in Cincy. The recently-formed Civic Theatre Association, who expected to promote only the interests of the drama, has decided to include related arts, and will also feature pictures. Local exhibitors look upon the move as an advantage rather than a detriment, figuring that it will convert many persons into movie fans who are not now in the habit of attending regular movie theatres.

As Thomas Wier, manager of the Family Theatre, Cincinnati, was alone in his office checking up the day's receipts about 11 p. m., two robbers entered. One of the bandits struck Wier as the other commanded him to raise his hands. The pair escaped with $250, all they could find in their haste.

Robert Sparks, manager for the Dent Circuit at Vernon, Texas, was found guilty and assessed the minimum fine of $20.00 for operating a motion picture show on Sunday. Mr. Sparks attorney has filed notice of an appeal of the case.

New England Section Witnesses Busy Week

THE Harris Theatre Corporation has received bids for the new theatre which it will build at Natick, Mass. Plans have been drawn by John E. Kelley, of Boston.

The State Theatres, Inc., of Manchester, N. H., will erect a new theatre seating 2,500 from plans by Hutchins & French, 11 Beacon st., Boston.

Audiences in the Olympia theatre, in Boston, remained throughout the show last Saturday night not knowing that in the building adjoining the theatre a two-alarm fire was in progress.

The Wilkinson theatre, at Wallingford, Conn., is now playing a split week.

Allie Hamilton is manager of the new Empress theatre at South Norwalk, Conn.

Damage of $3,000 was done to the Dream theatre, at Winthrop, last Monday. The fire started near the stage and spread to the curtains and scenery. Charles L. Hatch is owner, and Charles Clark is manager.

Harry Worden, who has been branch manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange at Albany, has been transferred to Boston.

Anna Carmen, contract clerk for the Metro exchange, has been confined to her home by serious illness.

Arthur Viano formally opened the remodelled Viano's Broadway Theatre in Somerville which he recently purchased.

Kenneth Forkay has returned from New London to become manager of the Regent Theatre at Norfolk Downs.

The Premier Theatre at Lawrence, Mass., received minor damage from a fire in an adjoinng building early last week.

Jack Jennings, formerly with Pathe, has become representative for the Timely Films Co., in the New England territory.

Sam Moscow, sales manager at Independent Films, is recuperating at the Phillips House of the Massachusetts General hospital.

The Auditorium Theatre at Lynn is meeting with much success in showing pictures. The theatre formerly was a stock house.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING MOTION PICTURE FILM

Big Stanley Openings for Philly in Feb.

THE opening date for the Stanley Company's new Uptown theatre at Broad and Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, which was scheduled for February 2nd, has been postponed to February 16th. The Mastbaum, at 20th and Market Sts., a 5,000-seat house, it is now announced will open on February 28th.

One of the historic theatrical landmarks of Philadelphia was destroyed on January 30th when the old Dime Museum at Ninth and Arch Sts., was swept by fire. The old building, which was erected shortly after the Civil War by Robert J. Simpson, is said to have been the first structure built in the United States for museum purposes. For many years it was operated as a museum and variety theatre and later vaudeville, stock companies, comic opera and motion pictures all had their day in the historic old building.

Another house which has been hard hit by the competition of the Stanley Company's Met is Nixon's Grand Opera House, at Broad and Montgomery Ave., which it is reported will be closed this spring. The Grand, a 3,100-seat house, is operated on lease by RKO-Stanley-Nirdlinger, with a policy of pictures and vaudeville, and has been losing ground steadily since the Met opened. With the opening, on Feb. 16th, of the Stanley's new Uptown theatre, seating 2,500, the prospects of the Grand appear to be almost hopeless.

The Fern Rock theatre has been purchased by Herbert Elliott, former manager of the Palm theatre, from Schwinn & Whittaker.

Ed Whaley, former United Artists salesman in this territory, and owner of the Park theatre, in Phillipsburg, will become manager of the UFA exchange in Washington.

Announcement has recently been made that the Chestnut Street Opera House, owned by the Shuberts, will be wired for the presentation of talking pictures. It is said that in each city where the Shuberts have a chain of theatres one of the houses will be wired for talkies and as the Chestnut is probably the most advantageously located for this purpose, it has been decided upon as the local choice.

The annual dinner-dance of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Penna., Southern New Jersey and originally scheduled for January 27th, has been postponed until some time in April, the date to be announced later.

Happenings in Picture Circles of Southeast

Atlanta

PAUL A. STRACHAM, film salesman in the Southeast, has joined the sales force of the local branch of World Wide Pictures, being assigned to the Alabama and Tennessee territory, according to announcement by C. R. Beacham, head of the World Wide office in Atlanta.

George M. Jones, of the local film fraternity, joined the Fox organization last week as assistant manager of the Atlanta branch, announcement of his appointment to the post being made by William G. Minder, head of the company's offices here. Mr. Minder also announced the appointment of Miss Julia Harbin to be secretary to the branch manager.

E. C. Zrenner, head of Publix theatre Corporation's sound department, spent several days in Atlanta last week checking over Vitaphone and Movietone equipment in local Publix houses, and explaining fine points of operation.

Ben Y. Cammack, who has been prominently identified with the film industry in Atlanta for more than three years, has resigned as local branch manager of Universal and has left his post. While it is understood that he expects to take a vacation from active business affairs, his plans for the future have not been announced.

Gale Lancaster, assistant manager at the Alabama theatre, Birmingham, Ala., was on special duty at the Howard theatre, having been summoned when Manager Robert E. Hicks was called to Denton, Texas, on the death of his father.

W. T. Murray, resigned as manager of Loew's Grand, effective February 9. More than that, he is leaving the field of theatre management to which he has given practically all the business years of his life. He will embark upon an entirely new enterprise in connection with an established brokerage business.

C. A. Clegg, head of First National's Atlanta branch, has returned from New York.

Marie Pinkson, secretary to District Manager Creswell, of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, has recovered from an attack of flu.

Memphis

J. F. Norman, secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, opened his new Best theatre, at England, Ark. Norman's new house contains more than 400 seats. He is also owner of the Amusu, at England, and the Best, at Fordyce, Ark.

Jack de Waal spent last week in the Pathe office at Memphis. He is a home office representative.

Henry Owen, Paramount booker, spent the week on the road. Eddie Foster, Paramount salesman, was back at work after an appendicitis operation.

M. H. Thompson, Brown theatre, Harrisburg, Miss., was a film row visitor during the week-end, and other visitors of the past week included J. C. Hester, Princess, Shelby, Miss.; John Sharp, Sharp's, Humbolt, Tenn.; Sam Williamson, Princess, Biggers, Ark.; J. A. D. Herrington, Gem, Pontotoc, Miss.; C. W. Tipton, New, Monette, Ark.

Guy Snow is no longer associated with R. E. Priddy, at Pocahontas, Swan theatre, it is reported.

Fred M. Jack, First National manager, was in Chicago this week for a mid-western sales conference called by Ned Depinet, general sales manager.

Little Rock, Ark., next week will have two theatres showing sound pictures, following completion of installation at the Capitol, operated by E. H. Rowley.

Louisville

The Kentucky theatre, at Danville, one of the Principal Theatres Corporation houses, goes sound at the end of this month, with the latest in tone reproductions, the improved Vitaphone. Not only will the Kentucky install Vitaphone, but will also be equipped with Movietone, Photophone, Victorphone and Radiograph. This will make possible the presentation of any style of sound pictures. Despite the great amount of work necessary to complete installations, the theatre will not be closed.

Harry Matthews, manager, Empress and Bleich theatres, Owensboro, Ky., has been ill for the past few weeks.

The Kentucky theatre, Louisville, in going the way of "all talkies," had to employ two new picture machine operators. They are Albert Greenberg and Thomas H. Hosstatter. The two already employed are Emil Greenberg and Henry DeMarsh.

Florida

The South Florida Fair opened in Tampa last Tuesday and is pulling immense crowds, which is having its effect upon the attendance at the theatres. Next Monday the Gasparilla carnival will be staged, in connection with the Fair, and the "blood-thirsty" pirate and his band will do their stuff for the talkies. Neil Sullivan, cameraman, and Kenneth Allison, sound technician, are here and will shoot all the big scenes for the Fox Movietone.

Lakeland enjoyed its first Sunday shows last Sunday, following the election, and that it was appreciated was shown by the immense attendance at the three theatres of that city. Reports from there say that the churches enjoyed their usual attendance as well.

Cameramen of the Eastman Foundation, Rochester, N. Y., have been at work in Sanford preparing films on the celery industry of that section. 4,000 feet of negative was made showing the process from the planting of the crop to the retail market.

"U" Western Managers Convene at Salt Lake

THE Salt Lake Universal branch office was the place of meeting this past week of a number of the representatives of this organization, including W. J. Heineman, of Seattle, manager Naylor, of Los Angeles; Mathew Apperton, Seattle; I. Schlank, of Portland; Sam Cain, of Denver; Matt Skorey, of Butte; and G. E. Rosenwald, Division Manager for Universal who conferred with the managers in connection with the beginning of the 23rd Carl Laemmle Anniversary drive which has commenced.

S. B. Steck, of the Lyceum theatre, of Odgen, Utah, was in Salt Lake for a short time, having returned from the Pacific Coast. While in Long Beach, Exhibitor Steck visited with Ray Peterson, formerly of the Cozy theatre, here, and Hy Olsen, formerly of the Photo Play, also in Salt Lake, and both are reported to be doing very well in the theatre business on the Pacific Coast.

Louis Marcus, head of the Marcus Enterprises in this section, returned from Denver, where he was called due to the passing of his brother-in-law.

A new sales representative has been added to the United Artists sales force this week in the person of G. B. Gilbert.

Construction has begun on the new $70,000 theatre at Idaho Falls, Idaho, to be known as the American. Joe George, owner, stated recently that the theatre will be opened about April 1st.

Theatres and schools of Wendell, Idaho, have been closed to prevent the spreading of meningitis.

Salt Lake film folks were greatly grieved to learn of the automobile accident which caused the death of J. M. Lym, Portland, exchange manager for Fox.

The theatres and public places of Lehi, Utah, were closed last week due to the influenza epidemic.

Western Division Manager W. H. Brely, of the Paramount organization, spent several days in Salt Lake.

This being annual Fox week the local branch expects to have the biggest week's business they have ever experienced.

J. T. Sheffield, owner of the Sheffield exchanges in Salt Lake City and Denver, has been in New York City on a business trip.

T. M. Derrick, of the Liberty theatre, reported to have sold his interest to Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harmer.

During Manager C. J. Merley's recent trip back from Idaho to his Columbia exchange he had a perilous escape, having gone off the road into an embankment of six feet of snow.

Loew and Fox Erecting N. Y. C. Theatres

THE Palace Theatre, located at Essex and Irvington streets, an over-seated section of the city, has been closed by the M & S Circuit. In making this move M & S believe that patronage will be diverted to their Ruby Theatre on Rivington street.

According to report, Loew Theatres, Inc., have begun wrecking work on a group of houses in the vicinity of 175th street and Broadway, Manhattan, for a new theatre. It is expected that this theatre will be completed within the year. Loew's have also a 4,000-seater now undergoing construction at Grand Concourse and 180th street, the Bronx.

The Windsor Theatre in Brooklyn, which was closed some time ago by the Federated Theatres Corp., has been reopened by the Rossu Theatre Co. Ben Levine is handling the management.

A new theatre is nearing completion at Little Neck, L. I. This house will be operated by the H. G. Operating Company, owners of the Roosevelt Theatre in Flushing. Henry Huber is managing director of the company.

The new Fox Theatre, which is being built on 58th street, between Third and Lexington avenues, is scheduled for opening during the month of March. Roxy is supervising construction of the house, which is said will seat around 3,500.

Hollywood—Continued

T.-S. Starting "Zeppelin"

Reginald Barker has begun work for Tiffany-Stahl on "Zeppelin," a new special which has Conway Tearle, Claire Windsor and Larry Kent in the leading roles. The film will have dialogue and sound. Many of the exteriors will be made in and around Arrow, Colo.

Crosland to Make "Shoestrings"

Alan Crosland will direct "Shoestrings," an all-talking picture with a theatrical background. Al Jolson, Louis Silvers, and Grant Clark are composing the musical numbers. Larry Ceballos will stage dances and ensembles.

A Boxing Immortal's Life

The life story of Stanley Ketchel, prominent boxer of 15 years ago, forms the basis of the story for Paramount's "The Man I Love." Herman Mankeweicz, former New York newspaperman, wrote the original, with Percy Heath doing the script. Richard Arlen will be featured in the role of Ketchel.

Olive Borden Signed

Columbia recently added the name of Olive Borden to the list of star's scheduled for starring parts in forthcoming Columbia films. "The Wildcat," temporary title, will provide the star with the role of a Latin American girl. John McCarthy, director, has been signed to direct her.

New "Collegians" in Talk

The fourth series of "The Collegians" has been launched at Universal City and are being made with dialogue and full sound effects. Carl Laemmle, Jr., is the author of the new stories and will supervise their making. Ten two-reelers, in all, will be made and will be released this spring. Nat Ross and the same trio—George Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver and Eddie Phillips—will be the director and leads, respectively.

Rubin's "Hysterical History"

Benny Rubin has already started acting in his dialogue comedy sketches, entitled "Hysterical History." He is supervising the direction of the series as well as taking the principal role. Eddie Kane will play the role of the school teacher in the first release. Jack Foley is doing the megaphoning.

The Coronet Talking Series

Educational's second series of talking comedies, called Coronet Talking Comedies makes its bow with "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," starring Edward Everett Horton. This new Educational unit is under the supervision of Sidney Brennecke and the direction of Hugh Fauleon. The Movietone process is employed.

Educational Working at Top-Speed

Having recently finished "Good Night Nurse" and "Summer Saps," Lupino Lane is now preparing for a line-up of sound and talk comedies. "Big Boy" has also finished "The Fixer" and "Ginger Snaps," the latter set for February release. Jerry Drew recently finished "Wise Wimmin," Monty Collins and Vernon Dent "Parlor Pests," and Al St. John "Smart Steppers." George Davis has also finished a new piece, "Howling Hollywood." Cameo comedies have also been turned out by Cliff Bowes, Jerry Mandy, Billy Dale and Gene and the talkie comedy units are in the midst of hard work.

Fox Signs Cyril Hume

W. Scott Darling will collaborate with Cyril Hume on the latter's first screen adaptation. Hume, well known author, has been signed by Fox, and for his first screen assignment, will do "The Secret of Sweet Almonds," with the aid of Scott Darling. Jeff Lazarus is to supervise.

Pathe Casts Dorothy Appleby

Dorothy Appleby, who appeared in 1926 with Elsie Janis in "Puzzles of 1926," has been cast opposite Eddie Quillan in "Listen Baby," the Janis dialogue story which Pathe is filming under direction of Casey Robinson.

"Whispering Winds" Filmed

Tiffany-Stahl's "Whispering Winds," singing and talking special, was finished last week. Patsy Ruth Miller, Malcolm McGregor, Eve Southern have roles.

Tiffany-Stahl's "Midstream"

The Tiffany-Stahl film in work under the title of "Life" will be called "Midstream." The story was directed by James Flood, who also made "Whispering Winds." Ricardo Cortez, Claire Windsor, Montagu Love, Helen Jerome Eddy are featured.

"Two Men and a Maid"

"Two Men and a Maid," with dialogue and synchronization, will be the next Tiffany-Stahl production. It was directed by George Archainbaud with Buster Collier, Alma Bennett, Eddie Gribbon, George E. Stone as principals.

Frankie Darro Cast

The boy in "Sleepy Valley," Sono-Art vehicle for Eddie Dowling, will be Frankie Darro.

Agnes Ayres in "Donovan"

One of the leading parts in "The Donovan Affair," Columbia talkie, will be played by Agnes Ayres, who returns to screen after absence of several years.

Columbia Signs Players

With the signing of Ralph Graves as leading man and John Miljan as menace, Columbia has started shooting on "The Wildcat," Olive Borden's new starring film.

Bakewell Progressing

William Bakewell will play the juvenile lead in Warner Brothers' picture, "Shoestrings," which Alan Crosland is to direct. Others cast are Betty Compson, Louise Fazenda and Arthur Lake.

A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your "talkie" prints are on Eastman film—famous for uniformity —your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A GOOD COOK IS A SHOWMAN

HE has to pick the right ingredients, mix them in the proper proportions, and serve them in an inviting, appetizing way. That, in a few words, is every showman's task.

Would you consider a dinner complete without a dessert? Of course, not! And what that dessert is to the dinner, a little of "Big Boy's" delicious comedy is to your entertainment menu. There's sweet profit for your box-office, too, in "Big Boy's" unbounded popularity.

"THE FIXER"

Domestic mix-ups that will fix up the laugh part of any program.

"FOLLOW TEACHER"

School day fun with all the pranks you dreamed of but didn't dare to pull.

"COME TO PAPA"

"Educational's gifted young star . . . in what is easily one of his best comedies to date."

TELL THE TRUTH!

Admit that no other producer is in a class with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Look over the succession of hits that the weeks have given from M-G-M. Truly there are no conditions that can be conceived of which could ever dislodge this great company from its topmost position.

EVERY SEASON THAT HAS BEEN TRUE. THIS YEAR more than ever!

NOTE:

"The Broadway Melody" has just opened, revolutionizing the whole field of talking pictures. Now playing extended top price runs at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles, and at the Astor Theatre, N. Y.

A WOMAN OF AFFAIRS (John Gilbert-Greta Garbo)

Sweeping America like wild-fire. Two packed weeks, Capitol, N.Y.; new record at Warfield, Frisco; Boston, Minneapolis, everywhere tremendous!

THE FLYING FLEET (Novarro)

Greatest aviation Epic Otus far! Novarro's Biggest since "Ben-Hur." A clean-up in its first engagements. Watch it ride!

THE TRAIL OF '98 (Dolores Del Rio)

Best "Big Parade" and "Ben-Hur" records at Butte, Mont. "Got the kale in Seattle," reports Variety. Big in St. Louis, Cleveland, Washington, Pittsburgh!

ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE (Haines)

Broke all records Strand, Hartford, Conn. Variety reports it "best in months at Stanley, Baltimore," and "biggest by $4000 in Syracuse." Biggest also in New Orleans, Kansas City. It's the money!

THE DUKE STEPS OUT (Haines)

Oh boy, M-G-M keeps making the audience delighted. Watch Bill Haines in this one with Joan Crawford! From the swell Saturday Evening Post serial story.

THE BELLAMY TRIAL (Monta Bell)

Solid sell-out at $2 since Embassy opening. Biggest advance sale in history of house. Critics, public thrilled! Great Talking or Silent!

QUALITONE

The Voice of the Screen

Fidelity of tone ✓ ✓ ✓ ✓ Perfect synchronization

Simplicity of Operation

IT IS INTERCHANGEABLE

Qualitone reproduces the best qualities of sound:

It is a dynamic reproducer of the human voice with more accuracy than any device yet perfected.

Qualitone like all most useful inventions, is readily handled and easily understood by operators and their assistants:

It is self-adjusting, "fool-proof" and requiring NO additional help to operate.

Qualitone cost and terms are within reach of all exhibitors both small and large:

IT BECOMES THE EXHIBITOR'S PROPERTY FROM THE DAY OF ITS INSTALLATION.

Qualitone's fidelity of tone and perfect sychronization will amaze audiences and build business from the first day of its introduction.

Each inquiry should be accompanied with a blue print or pencil sketch of the stage, projection rooms and name of projecting machine.

QUALITONE will fit ANY projection machine

Its qualities guarantee—

against danger of infringement claims; against costly investment for installation and uncertainty of results.

against doubt or hesitancy about showing "talking pictures";

against involved contracts and restrictions to show only certain pictures; against expensive adjustments and service charges; against fluctuating tones, blurred voices and lack of true distinction in sound or voice.

QUALITONE IS VIBRANT AND ALIVE!

WHERE ON THIS EARTH CAN YOU match this most amazing collection of box-office values in any one entertainment?

FIRST, EDNA FERBER'S best-selling novel "Show Boat." (a)

SECOND, FLORENZ ZIEGFELD'S MUsical stage production of "Show Boat." (b)

THIRD, JEROME KERN'S EXQUISITE music. (c)

FOURTH, OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN, 2d's, heart-touching lyrics. (d)

FIFTH, HARRY POLLARD'S DIRECtion. (e)

(a) MISS FERBER IS ONE OF THE GREATEST LIVING AUTHORS. Every book she writes is a best-seller. "Show Boat" topped them all in sales and the royalties from it still pour in upon this gifted young woman.

(b) FLORENZ ZIEGFELD IS EASILY THE WORLD'S greatest producer of brilliant musical shows. Paying as high as $25 per seat to see one of his productions is nothing startling to New York. And now, for the first time, the cream of his best is sent out to the whole world to be enjoyed at popular prices within the reach of all.

(c) MR. KERN IS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL LIVING composer of music for musical comedies. He is a multi-millionaire as the result of royalties from his world-known music hits.

(d) MR. HAMMERSTEIN, A MEMBER OF ONE OF THE most illustrious stage families in America, adapted Miss Ferber's book for Mr. Ziegfeld, wrote the lyrics and produced the London engagement of "Show Boat."

(e) MR. POLLARD DIRECTED THE "COHENS AND Kellys," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Sporting Youth," "California Straight Ahead," and others which have fattened your bank account.

(f) THESE NAMES SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES. MISS LaPlante, Mr. Schildkraut and Mr. Harlan have always been associated with successful pictures.

(g) MISS MORGAN IS THE GREATEST LIVING SINGER of crooning love songs. She has "it" and she puts it into her work.

(h) MR. BLEDSOE IS THE GREATEST LIVING NEGRO singer. He is now singing in concerts. I don't suppose any one thing contributed more to the success of Mr. Ziegfeld's show than Bledsoe's rendition of "Ol' Man River."

(i) THE PLANTATION SINGERS WILL DELIGHT YOU with their rich, mellow voices, such as are found only within the negro race. They are a terrific hit on the stage. They will sing for you in "Show Boat."

The grandest show ever put on!

As a novel it took the country by storm . . . as a Ziegfeld Musical Comedy it was a sensation . . . as Carl Laemmle's Movietone Triumph it's the biggest thing that ever happened in motion pictures.

That's glittering, gorgeous, glamorous Show Boat.

Seats sold for as high as $25.00 each at the Ziegfeld Theatre, New York. Now as a motion picture it marks a new era in entertainment.

This is the first time in show business history that the smallest towns, villages and hamlets can see and hear the highlights of a big $7.70 per seat musical comedy hit on the screen while the Broadway production is still running.

You will HEAR as well as SEE the famous Ziegfeld stars . . . Helen Morgan singing "Bill" and "Can't Help Loving That Man" . . . Jules Bledsoe singing "Old Man River" . . . Aunt Jemima and the celebrated Ziegfeld Plantation Singers "Hey Fellows" and "Come On Folks."

The brilliant Universal cast of screen stars including Laura La Plante, Joseph Schildkraut, Otis Harlan, Alma Rubens, Emily Fitzroy, Jane La Verne and hundreds of others.

That's SHOW BOAT with the greatest array of stage and screen celebrities ever identified with one picture.

Audiences everywhere shaking the rafters! Critics hunting for new adjectives! First run exhibitors 24-sheeting the comedy, giving it featured position in newspaper advertising and marquee lights, and crying, "When can we have the next one?"

TWO CORKERS

"The Eligible Mr. Bangs"... is good fun and an example of a screen comedy in which the dialogue is absolutely essential to the registering of the humorous points. We recommend this picture.

"The Bride's Relations" ... There may be funnier comedy sound offerings in the field today but we have never seen one.

—ARTHUR JAMES
in Motion Pictures Today.

MACK SENNETT, HIMSELF

Count among the triumphs of the audien its success in bringing the one, only and entirely too exclusive Mack Sennett back from the shadows to the plain, white glare of the screen. This funniest of all funny men ... has a comedy in distribution which all good motion picture people should see if they see nothing else this year. It is called "The Lion's Roar". . . . The comedy would be a riot without the audibility stuff. With it, it is a riot plus a panic plus pandemonium. (Try that on your reproducers, men.) . . . I wag my old grey head happily and chuckle. Attaboy, Mack, give 'em 'ell.

—Service Talks, EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD, (Jan. 12).

A SMART COMEDY

"The Eligible Mr. Bangs" is well described . . . Here is a comedy that reminds us of the famous Sidney Drew series which helped make attending picture theatres so pleasant years ago. Incidentally, the first of a new sound series from Educational. A very good beginning.

—KANN in Film Daily.

MACK SENNETT TALKING COMEDIES

"A TRIUMPH"

. . . Head and shoulders above anything that we have yet seen and heard in the field of audible picture entertainment. It is smart and sophisticated and as funny as can be without the slightest hint at slap-stick. A triumph for the talking short.

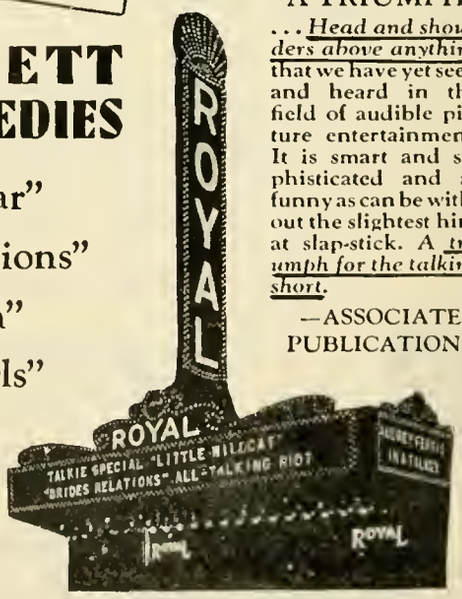
—ASSOCIATED PUBLICATIONS.



WATCH IT CLICK

"The Bride's Relations" . . . is a knockout. The best talking short we have seen. Shown in a cold projection room, it "got" the reviewers, and brought plenty of laughs. Watch it click in the theatres. A "natural", if there ever was one—M. P. NEWS.

. . . Riotously funny.

"The Eligible Mr. Bangs" . . . is a smart society comedy with excellent lines.—M. P. NEWS.

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"

PROOF of a LEADERSHIP COMEDIES

Educational has taken full command of the talking comedy situation. And you don't have to believe it on the word of one lone reviewer. You have the evidence of the whole industry, with unprecedented praise from showmen, the public, and the critics.

"TRIUMPH"
"SCREAM"

CRASHING IN

Publix books "The Bride's Relations" for the Paramounts—New York and Brooklyn. "The Lion's Roar" goes into the Colony. We've seen both of 'em. You're doing Educational no favor if you buy them. It's the public and your box-office that are in for the treat. —FILM DAILY.

EDUCATIONAL

I am constantly being agreeably surprised with what can be done with sound and dialogue in motion pictures. My latest surprise comes from two Educational sound and talking comedies. One is a Coronet talking comedy with Edward Everett Horton as the chief purveyor of wit. It is called "The Eligible Mr. Bangs", and, folks, it's bang-up comedy. It is a gem of a skit, with sparkling dialogue well spoken. The second is the Mack Sennett comedy, "The Bride's Relations". As a silent comedy it would be funny, but with sound and dialogue it's a panic.
—Service Talks, EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD, (Feb. 2).

A COMEDY JEWEL

They don't come like this often. Therefore, this rave ... One of the goofiest and most amusing affairs this reviewer has seen in many moons. It's just funny, so much so that a lot of reviewers who saw this in a cold projection room fairly rocked the place with their laughter. Now imagine what it will do in a theatre.—FILM DAILY.

"THE BRIDE'S RELATIONS"

Voice has put Sennett back to those former heights when a Sennett comedy was frequently more important than the feature film on a program. "The Bride's Relations" ... is the funniest comedy I've seen in seasons.
W. WARD MARSH
—in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

... It is a riotous comedy from beginning to end ... Nothing that we could say would do justice to this picture gem.

P-F-L Gen. Mgr. Convinced Latter Method Essential For Quality Production

Victory for Movietone

Quality sound reproduction comes best from the film system, rather than discs, and the tendency in future production will be to lean more and more to the film system of recording and reproducing said S. R. Kent on his return from Hollywood, where he spent the last month viewing coming Paramount product. "'Interference', with its marvelous sound reproduction," continued Kent, "has somewhat prepared me for what was to come in the way of sound reception by the film method, but the perfection attained by our experts in the talking pictures which we are about to release made me realize that in quality production the film system will prevail in the future. Surface noises and scratches will creep into recording by the disc system are eliminated in the film recording method.

The action of the story takes place during the performance of the famous New York-Paris Review—one of the most gorgeous musical and beauty shows in the world.

Director Dupont rented the theatre, company and orchestra, and photographed the entire performance—audience, back-stage, girls, bar, orchestra and all. Now, the R. C. A. Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Joseph Littau of Roxy's staff, a foremost sound expert, has added the music and sound effects that bring to America one of the most famous shows on earth—the one performance that no visitor to Paris misses. Its just like being there.

Sound makes the motor chase terrifically thrilling —a triumph of realism.

The dramatic climax of the story will leave few dry eyes—

We now say without fear of contradiction that is one of the great, high-class Sound Attractions

"MOULIN ROUGE"

It was a big picture before sound was added.

Made by A. E. Dupont, one of the world's great directors.

Starring the gorgeous Chekova, of the Moscow Art Theatre.

An Announcement Of Great Importance To Every Exhibitor

By William A. Johnston

A WEEKLY Box-Office Check-up! Charting actual box-office results from the first and second run theatres of the United States and Canada in terms that are instantly understandable, begins in this issue of Motion Picture News as a new and exclusive weekly service to our exhibitor readers.

Here is something truly extraordinary and practical in reader service.

This innovation has been planned and organized, and now becomes a regular weekly department of Motion Picture News, as its response to hundreds of requests from exhibitors for a more frequent statement of production values than was possible in the box-office check-up which we have published monthly.

The form in which this fact data is presented was decided after several months of investigation and correspondence with exhibitors in all sections of the country.

Every theatre, large and small, has an average or normal gross. This is the amount with which every exhibitor compares his receipts on each picture he runs.

In this new weekly box-office check-up, the average or normal gross of every theatre reporting is taken as 100%. For example, the average or normal business for a given theatre may be $20,000. That amount becomes 100%. If a particular picture grosses only $15,000 in that theatre, it is given a rating of 75%. If it grosses $25,000, it is rated at 125%.

Every exhibitor knows his normal or average gross. All that is necessary is to take the percentage ratings reported week by week, average them, and any theatre operator can tell just what percentage of business above or below his normal each production should gross at his box-office.

In addition, The Weekly Box-Office Check-Up gives other vital facts, such as seating capacity of theatres; the number of days run; admission prices; the short subjects used on the program; and the presentation or stage show on the bill. These we call vital statistics of the box-office. Certainly, they cannot fail to prove of great aid to exhibitors everywhere in determining the make-up of programs and in many other ways.

We present this weekly box-office check-up knowing that its importance and value to exhibitors will more than compensate for the months that have been devoted to its organization and for the great amount of effort and expense necessary to maintain it and make certain of its accuracy.

Speaking Editorially

The Race Is On

WELL, they've gone and done it — "The Broadway Melody!" M-G-M, Beaumont the director, James Gleason, master of smart dialogue, Bessie Love and Charley King, brilliant troupers—and many other creditable people have put the entertainment of Ziegfeld, Buck, White, Carroll, the Shuberts on the sound screen.

Evidently, the talking screen is going to enfold the big Broadway musical show just as silent pictures took to themselves the dramatic production.

The producers of Broadway's best revues have been asked for sometime: "What are you going to do about the talkies?" Now they are asking themselves the same question and in dead earnest.

The race is on.

And it looks like a big and merry one. The track is wide. There are many candidates for the colors. The handicaps are getting closely leveled. The vista opens till it takes the imagination.

The talkies are here to stay and box-office grosses have been put on a new basis.

In passing, we call attention to the fact that since the very advent of the sound movie this editorial page has right along emphasized the value of the revue and musical comedy type of show, its remarkable adaptability to sound and pictures as against the over-dialogued stage play.

In "Broadway Melody" you have the swift colorful action-and-sound of talk, music, songs, ensemble numbers, taps from the dancing, the color of costumes. The picture is not slowed up; its movement is intensified. You haven't the awkward joining of two distinct arts and a two-fold appeal to ear and eye. They weld together and entertain as one.

And that is true progress.

The producers are getting the hang of the thing The large studio resources of Hollywood—most of them were caught napping eight months ago—are getting into the swing of production of the new style of goods.

And the cost!

It is no more than would be expended in producing a revue for the stage. Exactly twenty-one shooting days elapsed from the time the picture was started till it finished.

"The Broadway Melody" is a new type of entertainment. That's certain. What is just as certain is that our ideas of big box-office grosses will have to be revised; have already been revised, in fact.

And the talkies are doing it. Take "The Wolf of Wall Street," which has shot the gross at the Rialto, New York, to a figure that would not have been dreamed of a year ago. Even the $100,000 weeks at the Roxy will, in time no doubt, seem tame.

Yes, it's big box-office stuff. Once again proving that he who would attempt to place limits on the future of the motion picture is foolish indeed.

Fighting Censorship

OPINIONS of newspaper publishers and editors from all sections of the country in opposition to censorship of talking pictures are being printed in many of the most important dailies. These are the expressions gathered by MOTION PICTURE NEWS and published in our columns.

Special stories, containing the editors' views, have been sent out by the United Press and also by Pathe, which is fighting the New York State Censor Board's attempted invasion of the freedom of the screen.

Clippings coming in to us show wide use of these important expressions, and publication of them in the dailies brings the fight against censorship directly before the people themselves.

The industry is engaged in fighting censorship in several states, notably Ohio, where some of the leading newspaper executives of the state have made emphatic declarations against political inquisition over talking films. As an instance of the attitude taken by publishers, we quote again the expression from Dan R. Hanna, President of The Cleveland News:

"It is my opinion that legal censorship of dialogue in motion pictures is a wedge which threatens our constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

"Censorship of spoken drama, censorship of speech and censorship of the printed word is a natural consequence following censorship of dialogue. As a publisher, therefore, I am opposed to any legal limitation to our constitutional rights, especially that which affects free expression of thought."

Theatres Being Equipped Too Fast For Production

Studios Cannot Meet Demand For Sound Film With Present Equipment

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Theatres are being equipped with sound projection apparatus almost one hundred per cent faster than studios are being equipped at present to turn out production for them. The result is that many houses now equipped will be compelled to play second run talkers or synchronized productions, or else take the alternative of buying independently made pictures and short subjects.

Most houses are using their apparatus at present only for shorts, awaiting the time when they can get good first run features which are now being made. Studios will be at least six months before they have sufficient number of talking pictures to handle theatres now ready to buy them. Hence many exhibitors are playing silent features with their only sound attractions consisting of one reel acts, novelties or news reels.

Others, not content to wait for a better class of product than the independent or "quickie' type of talking feature, are booking second runs of early talkers which have been played by other houses. This class, however, is in the minority.

As a result "quickie-makers" who have secured recording apparatus other than the standard types, standard being considered Western Electric, RCA, and Sonora patents, are making quick clean-ups with cheap features and shorts. One producer grabbed a couple of colored boys from the negro section of Los Angeles, had them go through a routine of songs and dances before a velvet curtain and had a short made for a total gross cost of $600. This was for salaries, film, props and setting. He sold the short for $2,500.

M-G-M To Make Dramatic Series Of 2-Reel Talkies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13. — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will produce a series of two-reel dramas, in addition to its comedies of that length. All are to be fully synchronized with dialogue. The rights to three playlets have been purchased for the short drama program, among them "Brains," "Emergency" and "Casualty" by Martin A. Flavin. Two have been made already, "Confession," directed by Lionel Barrymore; and "The Man Higher Up," by William De Mille.

Fontaine District Manager

J. E. Fontaine has been appointed district manager with supervision over Paramount exchanges in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Pittsburgh. He was formerly branch manager of the Paramount exchange in Cleveland.

Universal Studios Lop Off Many Heads Of Departments; Big Shakeup Started At Fox

Max Reinhardt Quits U. A.; Gish Film Off

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, February 12.—Max Reinhardt and United Artists have definitely parted, Reinhardt having left his offices at the studio. He came from Germany to direct Lillian Gish in "The Miracle Woman" and has been having difficulties with United Artists executives ever since his arrival, it is said.

The argument is reported to have started over United's desire to assign a standard picture director to work with him. Following this, trouble continued to increase and the picture is now permanently off. This is admitted by studio executives.

Myers Speech May Develop Suits On Sound

Northwest Exhibitors Plan Action On Question Of Interchangeability

A number of test suits on interchangeability are being planned by exhibitors of the Northwest as a result of the recent meeting of the exhibitor organization at which Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel of Allied States Association, was among the principal speakers.

Mr. Myers, who was making his first speech before an exhibitor body since taking up his new duties, charged a freeze out of independent sound systems and announced that he plans to push his request for a Federal injunction to restrain an alleged monopoly. He recently placed his request for action before the Department of Justice.

At the meeting 243 members of the exhibitors unit ratified the affiliation with Allied and pledged $10,000 toward maintenance of the association.

Bailey To Direct Gambol Of Catholic M. P. Guild

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Harry A. Bailey, former Fox executive, will be Director General for the forthcoming Gambol held by the Catholic Motion Picture Guild. It is booked for the Philharmonic Auditorium, Los Angeles, on Saturday night, April 6.

William McCormack, formerly Western Representative for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, has been placed in charge of the advertising for the Gambol by Father Mullins.

Several Executives Dropped And Additional Cuts In Staffs Reported Due Shortly

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.—Two wholesale cleanups in studios featured the past week in Hollywood, taking effect in Universal City and Fox. In the latter, still more changes are expected to be made, the most important affected thus far being Ben Jacksen, head of Movietone City, and Dave Thompson, studio manager for Movietone City. Jacksen is being succeeded by H. Keith Weeks, who was engineer in charge of construction of Movietone City. Thompson's place is filled by E. H. Barter, formerly with Paramount.

At Universal the sweep was long and unbiased. Relatives of Laemmle, gag-men, writers, directors, studio executives, were lopped off without a moment's notice.

Harry Zahner, who for years has been assistant general manager for Universal, has been transferred temporarily to the scenario department. Department heads who are out include Julius Bernheim, supervisor; Nate Goldstone, supervisor; Sigmund Moos, head of location and leasing department; Earl Snell, writer; Bob Wyler, supervisor; Eddie Laemmle, director; Victor Nordlinger, head of casting department; Morris Kurland, head of transportation department; Gladys Lehman, writer; and many minor people.

Robert E. Welsh remains as general manager of Universal City, with Carl Laemmle, Jr., associate producer. The casting department has been closed down and will remain so for several weeks. It is unlikely Nordlinger will return. Every other department has been cut but the publicity.

The Pat Rooney and Benny Rubin series have been halted temporarily as the sound stages are needed for "Broadway" and the completion of "Show Boat." Rooney and Rubin will resume in a few weeks.

The Fox axe fell without warning within a few days after the secret arrival in Hollywood of William Fox and Winfield R. Sheehan. That Ben Jacksen is out cannot be believed by Hollywood, inasmuch as Jacksen was supposed to have a life's job with Fox and has been one of the most efficient studio officials employed on that lot. He

5 Sound News Reels Planned For Next Year

Universal, Fox and Pathe Set In Field, M-G-M and Paramount To Follow

There will undoubtedly be five sound newsreels in the field by the time that next season opens. Fox and Pathe are making great headway with their service in sound, with the former having a big lead in this particular field. Pathe has already started. Universal is the latest to bring forth an announcement that they would be in readiness next season to furnish sound newsreels and it is no more than natural that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount will follow suit.

That will mean that the Hearst organization will step into the sound field through furnishing M-G-M with their service. The Hearst International News, which is now distributed through Universal, will undoubtedly be forced into a secondary position when that company inaugurates its sound service to exhibitors. The Sound News by Universal will in no way conflict with the Hearst contract for the distribution of the International News which has to run to the end of this year. International is silent and the new newsreel in sound is an entirely different product, according to the Universal contention.

In its announcement, Universal says that the Universal Movietone News will have daily releases and color film and other innovations are scheduled as part of its service program. Sam B. Jacobson, formerly head of publicity at Universal City, has been selected to handle the organization and production of the new venture. He has been in New York for about six weeks working out the details for the worldwide staff which is to secure news pictures for them. The executive staff under his direction will comprise Harry Mack, formerly with radio station, WMCA, Harold Lewis, a sound engineer, Howard Dillinger, and Herman Obrock as chief cameraman.

The first sound wagons are expected to be delivered to Universal from Western

Loew Circuit After Big Names For Sound Houses

An about face in policy as far as a number of the up-state New York and New England houses are concerned is contemplated by the Loew Circuit. They are trying to secure as many big vaudeville names as possible to augment the bills in the sound equipped theatres which have not been holding up in business to date. The reason for this being generally conceded as due to the inferior type of sound pictures which have come to the market for general distribution.

"The Glad Rag Doll"

Dolores Costello's recently completed Warner film, "Alimony Annie," will be released as "The Glad Rag Doll."

Griffith In Successful Television Broadcast

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, motion picture producer and director, was in Schenectady last week, and in experiments in Television, had his voice and image broadcast across the continent and picked up in Oakland and Los Angeles. Mr. Griffith scoffed at the notion that the talking movie is a fad. While in Schenectady, Mr. Griffith and his party were lavishly entertained by officials of the General Electric Company.

Germany Lags In Sound Films But Gets Start

Linguistic Barriers Of Film From U. S. Overcome By Starting Own Company

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL

Berlin Correspondent Motion Picture News

Berlin, Feb. 6.—Considering the fact that the linguistic barriers had to exclude Germany from the Sound Film wave swamping the U. S. A. and British markets during the last year, it is not surprising that Germany should have lagged behind a little.

In Germany practically all the sound film interests of the country are concentrated in one single firm, the "Tonfilm Syndikat" (Tobis) which, as announced by MOTION PICTURE NEWS at the time, was founded with a capital of $2,250,000 last fall. TheTri-Ergon System is used by the syndicate. This system, developed during the last six years by its inventors, Vogt, Dr. Engl and Masolle, very much resembles the Movietone system, also photographing the sound on the edge of the film and doing without disc records.

Another British company also means to start sound film production in Germany. This is "British International Film Distributors," an English Company, controlled by the well known South Africa millionaire Schlesinger. The sound film interests controlled by this group are "British Talking Pictures."

Fanny Brice Signed For Three U. A. Talking Films

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Fanny Brice has been placed under contract by the United Artists for a series of three talking pictures. At the United Artists Studios here it was admitted that negotiations with the stage and screen star were in progress but that the actual signing of the contracts had not taken place as yet. Jos. M. Schenck in New York at present is the one who was acting direct with Miss Brice in making the deal.

The signing of Fannie Brice by United Artists was officially confirmed by Joseph M. Schenck in New York Thursday.

Producers Find Talkie Material In Old Films

Many Past Successes Being Exhumed; Paramount to Make "Virginian" in Talk

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—With seven pictures made within the past twelve years as silent productions scheduled to be rewritten, recast and remade for talkie purposes, indications are that more than a dozen such stories will be released during 1929-30. While no definite announcement has been made by any studio regarding the seven, such announcements have been delayed only until a new version of the story has been completed and some idea as to who will be cast decided upon.

Corinne Griffith has announced her intention of doing "Lillies of the Field" as a "talkie." Norma Talmadge is known to be wavering between "Smilin' Though" and "The Sign of the Door," both of which she has produced in the past as silent pictures. It is definite that it will be one or the other, with the odds in favor of "Smilin' Through." "Madame X," with Ruth Chatterton starring, is now being made by M-G-M, originally made by Samuel Goldwyn in 1920.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is working on the idea of doing "Lombardi, Ltd.," all over again in talkie form. Leo Carrillo is also mentioned as set for the role which he created on the stage. Warner Brothers have "The Narrow Street," made some years ago, on their program for the coming season to be made with dialogue and a new

"Moulin Rouge" First World Wide Film With Sound

"Moulin Rouge," directed by E. A. Dupont will be the first of World Wide Pictures to be released with sound accompaniment. It will introduce the Continental screen star, Olga Chekova. RCA Photophone has synchronized this production under the direction of Joseph Littau of Roxy's with the Photophone Symphony orchestra.

"Moulin Rouge" is said to have been actually made in the famous Paris night resort and introduces the entire cast of principals and beauty ballet of the Paris-New York Revue. It will be released with a synchronized score and also as a silent picture.

Stahl Writing Sequel to "Zeppelin," New T.-S. Film

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—With "Zeppelin" completed, and rated as a big special for next year on the Tiffany-Stahl program, John Stahl is now writing an original story sequel under tentative title of "The Lost Zeppelin," which will go into production early in the spring.

M-G-M To Start Projectionists' Training School

Licensed Operators Will Enroll And Teach Others As They Learn

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—To insure proper sound projection in conjunction with the national release of all synchronized product, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer intends to start a training school for projectionists. This move may be followed by various other studios. The intention is to establish headquarters in both New York and Hollywood, and use experienced licensed film operators as students. They, in turn, will be sent out over the country to teach other projectionists the intricacies of sound projection.

Studios have found with several releases recently, that no matter what degree of perfection is attained in recording sound and dialogue, the picture's fate is in the hands of the operators. In Los Angeles, two major productions were ruined at public showings for several performances because the operators in the projection booths used poor judgment in regulation of volume and various other details connected with projection.

Trained operators have been found to be the only remedy. Up to now, when sound films have gone wrong in theatres, the house managers have wailed for the local studio engineers, or the representatives of Western Electric or General Electric to come and rectify matters. In such cases, two and three performances have been given in houses before the wrong was corrected.

Still another idea may be used in connection with road-showings of sound pictures. This will be the use of special operators sent from the training headquarters nearest the town in which the production is being shown.

Fox Execs Shake Dust Off "Scarehead" For Fixing

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Fox executives have taken down "Scarehead" from the shelf and are now trying to doctor it up. The picture was originally called "Calamity" and its shelving was said to be responsible for Luther Reed, supervisor, and Fred Newmeyer, director, leaving Fox. It is a newspaper story and production heads are submitting it to newly signed writers on the lot who "used to be newspapermen themselves" for fixing.

Inspiration To Put Sound Into "She Goes To War"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Inspiration Pictures will synchronize music and sound effects with "She Goes to War." The RCA Photophone system will be used and the synchronizing will be done at the Mack Sennett studios. United Artists, who have the Western Electric license will release despite the General Electric apparatus used.

Paramount, M-G-M Beat Rivals With Sound Trucks By Hiring Special Car On Fastest Train

Pay Full Passenger, Pullman Rates To Save 10 Days On Delivery Over All Other Companies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Shipping their first Movietone sound trucks from the East in a special car attached to the fast Santa Fe "Chief," M-G-M and Paramount beat other coast producers in getting the portable apparatus to the coast by at least 10 days.

As previously reported in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, all producers making talkers under Western Electric license agreed that the electric company should deliver one truck to each producing company at the same time, so that no one would be favored in priority of orders. W. E. made delivery to all organizations f.o.b. New York; with the trucks now enroute by freight with the exception of the two for Paramount and M-G-M.

The latter organizations, holding productions pending the arrival of the sound trucks, arranged to ship the apparatus by special car attached to the fast passenger trains. In order to do this, it was necessary for the film companies to purchase a large block of straight passenger and Pullman tickets for the freight car; the railroads classing it with a private Pullman when routed on the fast passenger trains.

The cost to Paramount and M-G-M for bringing the trucks west amounted to about $5,000 each, but officials at both studios feel the expense entirely justified on account of savings on production costs of pictures waiting for the outdoor recording apparatus. It is figured that delay in delivery of the sound trucks to studios is costing each producing company at least $5,000 a day, while Paramount and M-G-M saved at least ten days in delivery of the trucks by routing them on the passenger limiteds.

Suggests Debunking Easy Path To Stardom

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.—At the suggestion of Joseph Schildkraut, either the Association of Motion Picture Producers, or the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce may produce and release a two reel picture warning the youth of America to stay out of Hollywood. It is suggested that hundred prints be made and distributed throughout the country, with a title similar to "Beware of Your Hollywood Ambitions." The picture would show what difficulty youngsters have in getting jobs in Hollywood and what small chance there is of breaking into the movies.

Censor Board Is Abolished By Greeley Council

Aldermen Pass Proposition Up To Mayor And Chief Of Police

The City Council of Greeley, Colorado, last week adopted a resolution to abolish the board of motion picture censors and the members of the board promptly tendered their resignations. Five aldermen comprised the board and they voted unanimously to abolish censorship. By their action they passed the matter of keeping pictures clean to the mayor and the chief of police.

The censor board was composed of Mrs. L. W. Howerth, Rev. Byron Hester and Rev. Walter I. Fowle. They tendered their resignations immediately upon the passing of the resolution.

This resolution introduced by Alderman George Strubel was as follows:

"I move that the City Attorney be instructed to draw an ordinance eliminating the censor board and repealing all ordinances pertaining to picture shows, leaving it up to the mayor and chief of police to eliminate all pictures not up to standard."

There was no open discussion before the resolution was adopted. The action was agreed upon at an executive session of about twenty minutes duration.

Gleasons Start "Meet the Missus" For The Christies

A short play by Kenyon Nicholson went into production last week as one of the Paramount-Christie short feature talking plays. It is "Meet the Missus," and co-stars James and Lucille Webster Gleason.

"Old Arizona" Paves Way For New Outdoor Picture

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—As a result of the tremendous success of "In Old Arizona" in various key cities, Fox is rushing preparations for production of a big outdoor western epic to carry both sound and dialogue.

Although plans are being kept well under cover, it is known that Fox will spend at least one million dollars on the picture, and expects it to rate road show potentialities upon completion.

Dix Back In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Richard Dix returns to Hollywood for the production of "The Wheel of Life," his next Paramount vehicle. Victor Schertzinger will direct it as a hundred percent talkie.

Deny Receiver For Canadian International

Bairnsfather Concern Given Three Months By Court To Reorganize

An application for the appointment of a receiver for Canadian International Films, Limited, Toronto, was denied by Mr. Justice Jeffrey in weekly court at Toronto, a stay of proceedings for three months being granted by His Lordship to enable the company to secure a financial re-organization if possible. Application for the winding up order, which created a big sensation in theatre and political circles of Canada, was made by Canadian Moving Picture Digest, Dominion Printing Company and other creditors of the company.

Canadian International Films, Limited, organized by Capt. W. F. Clarke and Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather for the purpose of producing the picture that would be known as Canada's Big Parade, spent $500,000 for the making of "Carry On, Sergeant" at Trenton, Ontario, where the Ontario Government studio had been loaned to them. When the picture was finally shown at Toronto there was a general outcry that it was an unnecessary and unwarranted reflection on Canadian troops and the Ontario Government almost ordered its withdrawal, it is stated. The picture got reams of publicity but the result was a painful flop.

E. C. Berkinshaw, solicitor for a number of the backers, admitted in court that there was no current revenue from the feature but a committee had been organized to rescue the production. The members of this committee are numbered among Canada's wealthy men, and include C. H. Carlisle of Goodyear Tire, C. O. Stillman of Imperial Oil, and Allan Ross of the Wrigley Chewing Gum Company.

Florida Towns Are Adopting Sunday Movies

Sunday movies having been adopted by all of the large Florida cities, the smaller towns are now falling in line. Following the recent successful elections in Tarpon Springs and Lakeland, Bartow and Clearwater have both circulated petitions and will vote on the question next week.

The towns of Bradenton, Orlando and Winter Haven also announce elections on the subject in the near future. In the latter city the date for the "straw ballot" was set for February 12.

UFA Eastern Division Will Distribute Art Acord Series

David Brill, president of UFA Eastern Division Distribution, Inc., has closed a contract with J. Charles Davis, 2nd, whereby UFA Eastern Distribution, Inc., secures the rights to a series of eight features starring Art Acord.

"Last - Time - To - See Film" Ads Banned

THERE will be no more promiscuous advertising of motion pictures in Portland, Ore., with labels calling attention to the statement that certain films would not be shown again in the city for a limited time or at reduced prices, was the announcement of Robert M. Mount of Better Business Bureau.

Exhibitors have been warned to refrain from such advertising under penalty of prosecution. In several instances picture houses had broadcast notice that the public had "its last chance" to see a picture for a year, but not many weeks later the film is exhibited in a neighborhood house.

Talkie Actors Become Mute When Censors Cut

Paper Comments on "Holes" In "On Trail" Dialogue At York, Pa., Showing

"To persons sitting in a theatre it seems odd when a talking picture refuses to talk, although the mouth and lips move just as if the picture were talking, or trying to talk," comments the "Gazette and Bulletin" of York, Pa., appropos of the censoring by the Pa. State Board of Motion Picture Censors of several lines of dialogue in Warner Bros. "On Trial." The talkie appeared recently at the Rialto Theatre in York, and several of the theatre's patrons were disturbed by the non-amplification of the deleted talk. Inquiry revealed that the Pa. board of censors had instructed the Rialto management to eliminate a few sequences here and there. Accordingly the operators in the booth "doctored" the Vitaphone records so that while the film ran there were several instances when no sound ensued.

The Pa. Supreme Court recently decided that the Pa. censor board had the right to delete talking sequences.

Lon Chaney Will Star In Railroad Meller For M-G-M

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—M-G-M will produce an epic railroad melodrama at an estimated cost of $750,000. Lon Chaney will star, under direction of William Nigh, with Hunt Stromberg supervising. The story is from an original titled "Thunder," by Byron Morgan.

Nigh will leave Hollywood in a few weeks for Chicago, where background shots will be taken around the big railroad terminals.

New Title

"The Song of Broadway" and not "Say It With Music," will be the title of Harry Richman's first singing and talking film, a forthcoming United Artists release.

Sound Films Rapidly Advance In French Field

U. S. Studio Installation Contracted For And Patents Acquired

By L. C. MOEN

(European Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, Feb. 5.—The sound film bids fair to make its way rapidly in France. Louis Aubert, recently returned from America, has already contracted with Western Electric for a studio installation.

Jacques Haik, who acquired a number of patent rights in America recently, Bristolphone among them, has announced ambitious plans for the manufacture and installation of a standard apparatus, both disk and sound track, as well as the production of features, musical films and a newsreel in sound.

Filmavox, the Gaumont-Petersen-Poulsen process, is enjoying a considerable vogue. After its 12-week run at the Cameo in Paris it was successfully presented at the Capitole in Marseilles, and is now making the tour of twelve neighborhood houses in Paris. The future of this device is problematical, however, as it records the sound on a separate film, full width, making it commercially costly. In addition it is not interchangeable with other devices, limiting the theatre which installs it to productions made by the Gaumont process.

The newest factor in the situation is foreshadowed by the appearance in a French tradepaper of a double-page advertisement reading:

"Don't Tie Yourself Up!

"TOBIS will present shortly in Paris its projection apparatus for Sound Films, standard process, accessible to all.

"Wait!"

Tobis is, of course, the leading German sound film corporation, in which the Deutsche Bank is interested. The process is similar in principal to Movietone and is undoubtedly interchangeable with it.

And in general it may be said that every important producing company and theatre manager is giving very serious thought to the sound film problem. There will undoubtedly be important new developments very shortly.

Sonora-Bristolphone Ships Twenty New Equipments

Twenty complete equipments of Sonora-Bristolphone for installations in theatres were shipped within the past week, according to announcement by Charles R. Rogers, general manager of the company. The following theatres will receive the equipments:

Temple, Tucson; Lubbock, Dallas; Whites, Greenville, N. C.; Mystic, Pitcher, Okla.; Hollywood, Milwaukee; Crescent, Pampa, Tex.; Egyptian, Sioux Falls; Delf, Escanaba, Mich.; Princess, Gadsen, Ala.; Texan, Goose Creek, Tex.; Orpheum, Pocatello; Broadway, Pittman, N. J.; Crown, Laramie, Wyo.; Academy, Lebanon, Pa.; Delf, Iron River, Mich.; Grand, Brockings, S. Dak.

Louise Brooks Signed By Pathe But Must Study

Glazer And Revues Taking Seven Stage Girls to Coast With $100 Weekly Set

Pathe has placed Louise Brooks under contract for a term of years with the proviso that the former Paramount star come to New York and take a course in one of the best schools of acting for the stage. It is figured that with a stage course and probably a short season in stock with one of the smaller companies, the star will be available for the talkies.

Barney Glazer and Maurice Revnes have been in New York for about three weeks stopping at the Savoy-Plaza and making a nightly round of the theatres, both dramatic and musical comedy, looking for available talent. Thus far it is reported that they have signed seven girls from the stage with contracts for one year at $100 weekly. These are to be members of the school stock company which is being inaugurated on the Pathe lot. All the contracts carry options for services of the young players after the first year at slight increases providing they make good during the schooling term.

The Pathe company is also signing writers with a $250 weekly top for a period of three months on the coast. Their plan is to tryout writing possibilities along the same lines as the players, and these contracts also carry options for future services at stated figures which mean but a slight increase over the original tryout salary.

Glazer and Revnes will remain here for about another week before returning to Culver City.

Plaza In New York Will Be Demolished

The Plaza Theatre, Madison Avenue and 59th Street, New York City, has been added to the list of the city's theatrical landmarks that will soon be no more. The Broadway Theatre, just below Times Square, is now in the process of demolition and work on the razing of the Plaza will commence at the end of this month with the expiration of Leo Brecher's lease. A business structure is to supplant it. The house was originally constructed for grand opera. Vaudeville and vaudfilm followed into the house and after a period of idleness, the Plaza was re-opened in 1917 by Mr. Brecher, who instituted a straight picture policy.

Paramount Signs Two From Original "Burlesque" Cast

Two original members of the cast of "Burlesque" have been signed by Paramount for the screen version of the New York stage success. They are Osear Levant, who appeared as Jerry Adams, and Charles D. Brow, who played "Lefty."

"Broadway Melody" A Smash Hit; Bancroft's Second Big Week; "Doctor's Secret" Held Over

2 "Wolves" Growl On Hollywood's Billboards

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.—The week that "The Wolf of Wall Street" was booked into the Paramount Theatre, Los Angeles, marked the same date of Rube Wolfe's return as stage feature in Loew's State, the opposition house. As a result, placed all about the Paramount Theatre and its billboards advertising "The Wolf of Wall Street," were other billboards from Loew's State, announcing "The Wolf of Broadway—He's the Lion of the Hour."

Grauman Turns Away Thousands At "B'way Melody"

Paramount Leads L. A. Houses But M-G-M Feature Is Big Sensation

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—While the Paramount Theatre was the leader in grosses for the week ending Wednesday night in Los Angeles, the real sensation was "Broadway Melody" at Sid Grauman's Chinese Theatre. Grauman has stuck in a midnight show on Saturday nights and all show prices are $1.50. The gross on the week was $33,500, with an average of one thousand to fifteen hundred turned away at each performance.

Paramount, with "The Canary Murder Case," did $40,000 on the week and "The Redeeming Sin" in its third week at Warners' Hollywood held up to $22,500. "Interference," already road-showed at the Carthay Circle, got $31,500 for one week at Loew's State.

The second week of "The Divine Lady" at the Carthay Circle slipped to $14,000. The seventh week of "In Old Arizona" at the Criterion was strong with $21,500. "Three Passions" dropped United Artists down to $12,200.

Paramount Will Picturize "Greene Murder Case"

"The Greene Murder Case," detective story by S. S. Van Dine, author of "The Canary Murder Case," which Paramount has just screened in silent and talking versions, is now being adapted by Paramount scenarists on the West Coast for production as an all-talking film, William Powell to star in the role of Philo Vance. The dialogue is beng prepared by Bartlett Cormack, author of "The Racket."

Roxy Gets $101,015 With "Lash"; "'98" At Capitol $74,270; "Weary River" Held Up

A REAL box office smash came to Broadway last Friday night when "The Broadway Melody" was presented in New York for the first time. The next morning it was in the air that a real wallop in a talking film had arrived and the ticket speculators were falling all over themselves to get in line and secure seats for the attraction. Since the opening it has been a sellout at each performance and standing room at a premium. It looks as though this picture was going to be in for a year at least.

Another event along the street of unusual importance last week was the breaking of all precedent at the Paramount theatre with the holding over there for a second week of the talking feature "The Doctor's Secret." For its first week the picture drew $82,800, which is the best business that the house has had in five weeks, and for the second week it looks as though the business will hold up nicely.

Of the run pictures George Bancroft in "The Wolf of Wall Street" is still standing them on their heads at the Rialto and even though there was a drop of $13,000 as against the business done the first week, the house turned in $44,700 last week, which is about fifty per cent above the average business done by that house during all of last year. This week started off with an $8,000 Saturday and it looks as though the picture will stick for at least eight weeks in all.

The Roxy, with "Captain Lash" as the attraction, fell below the average business of the house and turned in $101,015.75, while at the Capitol "The Trail of '98" managed to better the average figures by getting $74,270.90.

At the Central, Richard Barthelmess in "Weary River" on his second full week there managed to better the figures of the opening week by getting $21,637, which is a couple of hundred better than last week.

"Naughty Baby," with Alice White and Jack Mulhall at the Strand, did not fare as well as might have been expected, the

Woodhull Sends Hearst Protest On Censorship

Condemns Criticism Of N. Y. American In Editorial

R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has addressed a communication to W. R. Hearst, publisher of the New York American, protesting against an editorial appearing in that paper in the issue of February 11th, entitled "Protect the Movies With National Uniform Censorship."

In part the Woodhull letter reads as follows:

"Political censorship for Motion Pictures is just as unnecessary and dangerous to American liberty as censorship of newspapers and magazines would be. The Screen is the visualized division of the American Press. You cannot but believe this to be true in the light of analysis and demonstration, and when you embargo one section of the Press you place all divisions in danger of the same kind of throttling.

"You would not contend that the Constitutional guarantees of the freedom of the Press applied only to the newspapers as the same existed over a century ago. Naturally you agree with me that these Constitutional safeguards apply to the newspapers of today, tomorrow and the more remote future —in fact, to any and all developments of the press.

"Place the Screen Press in political thrall, surround the Radio with political limitations and the day is approaching when official censors will be in the office of the Hearst Publications and that of other newspapers telling the editors what to do and how to do it."

Jolson Sets Coast Record For Week At S. F. Warfield

The actual figures of Al Jolson's total gross at the Warfield Theatre, in San Francisco, last week were $57,406 for seven days. Jolson was making a personal appearance and no feature picture was shown, the program being confined to shorts.

This figure beats all Pacific Coast records for a week, including Jolson's own at the Metropolitan, in Los Angeles, where actual figures last year were $57,231. The Metropolitan, however, seats a thousand more than the Warfield.

Fox Secures Touraine Site For Boston 5,000 Seater

William Fox is reported as having closed a deal in Boston for the Hotel Touraine site at the corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets, facing the Common, for a 5,000-seat theatre to house the William Fox attractions and to give him a first run stand in that city. With a big house Fox will enter into active competition in Boston with Publix, Loew and RKO. No intimation of the price paid for the big plot has been forthcoming.

Strict Censorship Rules Apply In Australia

AUSTRALIAN censorship of sound pictures is being rigidly enforced, according to Millard Johnson, New York representative of Union Theatres, Ltd., owning and controlling many of the leading picture and vaudeville houses in Australia. The Sydney office has advised as follows with regard to necessary procedure with sound films:

"Arrangements to be made by the importer for the film in question to be screened for censorship purposes upon the special projection apparatus appropriate to the type of patent employed, until such time as the censorship may install its own mechanism. Upon registration in terms of Regulations 6 and 7 a transcript of the words used in the talking part of the films must be submitted with the application. If a film is proposed to be used as both a silent and sound picture it will be necessary to register it in both forms."

Sound News Reels For Next Season Will Total Five

Electric before the first of March. The period between the delivery and the first release next Fall will be spent in securing magazine subjects that are capable of being handled in a news manner when the releases are made. Spot news will be picked up each week and the magazine subjects used in conjunction with them.

Carl Laemmle, before leaving the Coast, recorded an address which will be made a part of the initial Universal Movietone News release.

There is a report to the effect that the International News next year will be distributed through Warner Bros, but E. B. Hatrick, head of International, could not be reached for confirmation.

Addison Named Special Comerford Representative

M. E. Comerford, president of the Comerford Theatres, Inc., has named H. M. Addison his special representative. The latter has been managing director of the Great Lakes Theatre since its opening almost two years ago. He will leave about the first of March for New York, where his headquarters will be thereafter.

Eddie Cantor Starts Work In New Paramount Short

Eddie Cantor started work Sunday at the Paramount, Long Island, studios in "The Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic," an all-talking Paramount short feature picture. The comedian is being supported by a cast of more than 100, including an orchestra of eighteen pieces and twelve dancing girls.

The setting for the picture represents the Amsterdam Theatre roof with Eddie Elkins in the role of master of ceremonies. Joseph Santley is directing.

Contingent Law Results In France Are Demonstrated

Figures Show Large Number Of Import Permits Are Not Used

By L. C. MOEN
(European Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, Feb. 5.—Figures recently made public in France show in interesting and specific fashion the operation of the contingent law during the first ten months of its application, i.e., from March 1 to December 31, 1928.

It will be recalled that under this law the producer of a French film receives a permit to import a certain number of foreign films, the number depending upon the extent to which it satisfies the definition of "a French production."

During the ten-month period, the following French films were presented to the control commission: 51 films found to be of the first category, hence entitled to full number of permits. 6 films of the second category, entitled to partial number of permits. 26 films declared not entitled to any protection. 9 films not examined prior to December 31. A total of 92 French films for the period.

In addition to these 92 full length films, there were presented 74 other French films of less than 4,000 feet. For these 92 films, 403 import permits were issued.

In addition to this, the commission issued 465 extra distribution permits in connection with 66 French films produced in the five months preceding March 1, 1928, making a total of 868 foreign films which might be introduced. Of these 858 permits, 327 were actually used.

Radio To Keep African Troupe In Touch With Studio

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—When the M-G-M company en route to Africa to produce "Trader Horn" establishes headquarters on the edge of the jungle, an attempt will be made to put the company in direct touch with the studio here by means of low wave length radio apparatus.

Portable radio broadcasting equipment especially designed by Ralph M. Heintz, noted radio engineer, was delivered to M-G-M studios for shipment to Africa. The set carries a gasoline powered generative plant, and a high frequency transmitter.

Non-Synchronous Device Opens Offices In N. Y.

Cine Tone offices have been opened at 729 Seventh Avenue in New York City by Harry Segal, president of the S. & S. Enterprises. This is a non-synchronous machine made entirely of steel and is operated electrically. It is portable and installed by plugging in on a light socket. David L. Shoolman is treasurer of the sponsoring company.

figures showing that the house did $30,147, which was not so hot for a warm title coupled with the name of Alice White. Emil Jannings, in his second week at the Rivoli in "The Sins of the Fathers," pulled $29,100.

Reginald Denny, in "Red Hot Speed," at the Colony, did a nose dive as against what was expected for his first talking picture. The figures were $12,172 and although that is good considering the average of the house business, still it is not what it should have been. The returns were expected to be at least $5,900 stronger. The little Cameo, playing "Lucrezia Borgia," following the run that it had at the Little Carnegie, managed to get $5,468, and held the picture over for the current week.

For its twenty-first week at the Winter Garden "The Singing Fool pulled $31,161.75 last week and will remain there until it is replaced by "Noah's Ark" about March 3rd, when it is scheduled to move to the 44th Street. This looks like a mistake for the picture will not pull them on the side street after the Broadway run is over. "My Man," the other Warner Bros. attraction, playing the theatre named after them, managed to get $14,747.75 for its final full week there.

In "Redskin," at the Criterion, Richard Dix is being starred and the picture is in for only six weeks with the take last week being $12,640. "The Bellamy Trial," at the Embassy, turned in a good week with $8,729, while "The River," at the Gaiety, got $9,951.25.

"The Redeeming Sin," with Dolores Costello starred, is due at Warner's on Friday night of this week.

Radio Pictures To Do Vaudeville Skits In Shorts

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Radio Pictures will make a series of one and two-reel talker and musical skits with material to be written by standard vaudeville authors and with standard acts now playing the circuits used. These acts, however, will not use the same material they do on the vaudeville stage.

It is understood that twenty-five of these acts are scheduled for release and most of them are to be made at the eastern studios of the company. Coast production sketches will feature mostly picture names.

"Here Comes Band Wagon" As Sound Circus Story

The sound and atmosphere of the circus will be brought to the screen by Paramount when "Here Comes the Band Wagon" gets under way at the West Coast. The production was recently purchased by Jesse L. Lasky and is from the pen of Henry L. Gates; it was first published in magazine serial form. The chief role will be played by Gary Cooper and Paul Lukas will also have a part. Lothar Mendez will direct. The adaptation is the work of William Jutte.

Denials Keep Pace With An Equal Number Of Rumors On Consolidations And Mergers

Leading Companies Included In Guesses That Would Bring Into Effect Many Combines

NEW YORK boiled this week with rumors of consolidations, mergers, and what not. Likewise, the crop of denials was plentiful. The possibilities, impossibilities, and wild guesses are set down here for whatever they are worth, if anything.

The story that some kind of a deal was being worked out between M-G-M and United Artists bobbed up again. The stumbling block was said to be Charles Chaplin. He opposed a similar deal in 1926, and the report was that he was of the same mind as previously.

Nicholas M. Schenck emphatically denied the rumored merger.

It was reported from the Coast early this week that Blair and Company had become financially interested with Jos. M. Schenck in the Art Cinema Corp., which is the financing organization behind United Artists, the distributing branch.

This was emphatically denied by Mr. Schenck on Thursday. He also branded as untrue the report that United Artists would merge with M-G-M.

R K O again denied that any deal with Paramount or Publix was planned or being discussed. This story was originally denied in Los Angeles last week by President Hiram S. Brown. Additional denial was issued this week by Maurice Goodman.

Hollywood buzzed with two merger rumors. One was an alleged deal between R K O and Pathe, it being pointed out that J. J. Murdock, Pat Casey, and Joseph P. Kennedy were in Hollywood; likewise William LeBaron. The latter issued a denial that an R K O-Pathe merger was pending.

Another big rumor concerned a deal between Loew's and Warners, in which Loew's and M-G-M were alleged about to be sold to the Warners. Nicholas M. Schenck emphatically denied this.

This report was alleged to have started in a statement by Claude Ezell of Warners on the Coast. He denied having said it. The report was likewise denied for M-G-M by Louis B. Mayer.

It was a great week for denials.

Old Films Offer Suitable Fodder For Talkies

cast. Paramount will remake "The Virginian" as a hundred per cententer.

In addition to these are any number of pictures originally made from purchased plays. Some of these have already been released, indicating what is to come. Among those were "The Lion and the Mouse" and "Alias Jimmy Valentine." All the major producing companies are carefully checking their release files as far back as 1915 for the purpose of securing material for talkie production. This enables a great saving in the purchase of film rights for new plays or originals.

Paramount is planning an all sound and dialogue production of "The Virginian," and shooting will start just as soon as the company concludes current negotiations for the dialogue rights. Howard Estabrook is writing the scenario, with Victor Fleming slated to direct. Gary Cooper and Fay Wray will be featured.

It is understood that Paramount purchased the screen rights to "The Virginian" from B. P. Schulberg, now general manager of west coast production for that organization, for $30,000; with Paramount then opening negotiations for the dialogue rights in order to make a full sound and talker of the new version.

Cooper-Shoedsack Team To Leave On New Expedition

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Merian Cooper, who with Ernest Shoedsack produced "Four Feathers," "Chang" and "Grass" for Paramount, left here for New York this week. Shoedsack will join him in the East, and then the pair will depart on another picture expedition.

Costs Too High For Broadway Musical Shows

Picture Producers Casting Them Aside Because of Excessive Royalties

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Producers are beginning to cast aside Broadway musical comedies as prospects for synchronized film musical attractions because of the tremendous cost involved before an adaptation is written or a camera turned. As a result, original musical comedies, written exclusively for motion picture purposes, such as "Broadway Melody," are being given preference over successfully produced shows from the legitimate stage.

Several executives pointed out this week that a studio, desiring to buy the film rights to a musical comedy, has four hundred per cent more "rights" to pay than to a book or a straight play. There are film rights from the producer; film rights from the author, from the lyricist, the composer, and the dialogue rights. In addition, should the studio desire to use the same ensemble numbers as used by the chorus of the legitimate offering, the man who staged the dances must also be given his "cut" for rights to those. Added to this are prices for foreign rights, which generally have been sold by the legitimate producer in America to one abroad before the film rights have been negotiated.

This is the basic reason for studios placing song writers, well known dance masters and dialogue writers under contract. Another equation holding up film makers in the purchase of musical comedy film rights is the number of "angels" usually owning a piece of such a show. There is a great deal of red tape and expense attached to securing the permission of each backer to a musical to film a show.

Real Estate Expert Signed By Universal

Louis Cohen has resigned from Fox West Coast Theatres to accept a post as head of real estate operations for Universal Pictures Corporation. He has signed for two years with Universal with the picture company holding an option for three additional years on his services.

Cohen, prior to going to Fox West Coast at the time Harold B. Franklin was made president and general manager of that con-deal of red tape and expense attached to securing the permission of each backer to a new contract March 1.

George Abbott In Hollywood To Start With Paramount

George Abbott, Broadway stage director, has arrived in Hollywood to start work under his new contract as director of Paramount talking pictures. Abbott will direct Adolphe Menjou's next film.

"Bit" Players May Form New Protective Unit

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.—Two hundred screen players, registered at the Central Casting Bureau as extras, but who consider themselves above that classification because they are called on for bits and smaller important parts, may form the nucleus of a new protective association. They aim to have a standardized minimum salary which will take them out of the $7.50 daily class and improve other conditions for themselves.

The reason for this is reductions in pay made by several independent companies to these players recently. Last week many of them were called by one producer for a scene requiring full dress. They were paid $10 daily as is the rule. When they were recalled for a second day the men expected the same rate. Instead they were given $7.50 which resulted in loud squawks. No raise was forthcoming however, with an indignation meeting being held the next day.

Vancouver Bill To Censor Ads Is Ridiculed

Sponsor Refused to Revamp Measure Despite Criticism

There will be no change in the censorship bill on newspaper advertising of motion pictures as introduced into the legislature at Victoria, B. C., by Attorney General R. H. Pooley. He refused to consider changes when appealed to by R. Howe Holland and J. Muir, of Vancouver, who were a delegation representing the picture theatres and film exchanges of British Columbia.

This refusal came despite the fact that the three newspapers of Vancouver are combining with editorial and cartoon to show Mr. Pooley the extreme error of his ways. The chief intent of the bill is to frown upon advertisements after they have appeared in the newspaper, but not before. The censors would then be empowered to order the withdrawal of the advertisements.

One newspaper in an editorial says in part:

"There is no legitimate excuse for this bill. It is simply a muddle-headed effort to create machinery for stilling newspaper criticism. Mr. Pooleys attempt to be a big, strong virile Mussolini is so palpable as to be ridiculous."

Silberman Named Manager

In the readjustment that had its most active effect in Philadelphia, Atlantic City Stanley Company houses have not been overlooked. Loris Silberman, who has been assistant manager of the Colonial Theatre for two and a half years, has just been appointed manager of the Colonial.

Scoredisc New Device To Aid Smaller Houses

Non-Synchronous Attachment Will Make Synchronous Score, Is Claim

Scoredise is the latest innovation in sound reproducing equipment. It is a device used in connection with non-synchronous reproduction equipment and it is claimed it will practically reproduce a synchronized score for any picture projected. Scoredise is the product of Scoredise Service Corporation, of which Arthur J. Abrams is president.

In describing the system, Mr. Abrams says:

"It is a heavy cardboard disc shaped instrument so devised that an operator of a non-synchronous machine can produce as near a perfect synchronized score for a picture as is possible with any but the score and picture recorded simultaneously in the studio.

"On this scoredise are cutouts numbered consecutively, which, when followed in their numerical order will produce a synchronous score. This arrangement is achieved through the fact that each production is cued by an expert, using the same system in vogue for the musical arrangement of silent pictures. In place of the musical suggestions contained in a silent cue picture cue sheet, the expert works up his score and then delves into his library of records for the exact music to be played.

"When an exhibitor receives the library of records we will supply he will have a repertoire which will suffice for his needs. In cases where the particular record called for on the cue sheet is not in his library it will be supplied by us without extra charge."

RKO Completing Its Program For Sound Expansion

RKO Productions, Inc., is rapidly completing its $250,000 expansion program for the installation of RCA Photophone sound recording equipment at the coast studios. The main item on the program is the erection of a new sound-proof stage, whose construction is somewhat different than those of the past.

Meighan Leaves for Coast To Begin Vitaphone Film

Thomas Meighan departed from New York recently for Hollywood to begin work immediately upon his arrival on the first of a series of Vitaphone stella productions for Warners. A few days before his departure from New York, the star entertained newspaper and magazine writers at an informal farewell tea at his apartment in the Savoy-Plaza Hotel.

Broadway Show Reviews

By Fred Schader

One New Feature On Paramount's Holdover Bill

Gamby-Hale Unit "Cooling Off' Is Lone New Offering For The Current Week

For the first time in the history of the Paramount Theatre, New York, since the house was opened a little more than two years ago has a program been held over at that theatre for a second week. The entire show for the current week was identical with that given last week with the exception of the subject matter in the Paramount News and the Publix Unit.

The show as laid out for the second week ran two hours and twelve minutes. The new Publix Unit was the Gamby-Hale presentation "Cooling Off," which proved a scenic flash and quite pleasing.

There is also a new Master of Ceremonies at the house in the person of Ted Claire. He is hardly the calibre for Broadway.

"Cooling Off" runs thirty-nine minutes. It opens with a Polar scene with a radio announcing that this is to be Pole Discovery trip. Then in full stage a sailing ship is shown moored in the ice, with Ted Claire appearing and followed immediately by the Gamby-Hale double sextette for an opening chorus. The Wallace Sisters lead this number and handled themselves very nicely in it. After this the stage band offers "Tiger Rag" with small return. Ben Blue, the comedian of the unit, does his skating dance immediately following and copped the applause hit of the unit with it. The Wallace Sisters are on again for another number following him and scored nicely here. Picard and Pal, the trained seal turn, fitted nicely into the scheme of things and the Paramount audience enjoyed the offering thoroughly. Then Ted Claire turned loose his "Mammy" number, talking it over to the audience for the most part. The Gamby-Hale Girls were on in one again for a quick change to an Ice Cave scene behind them where Helen Anderson, prima donna of the unit, got her chance at one number. It didn't matter what she sang as their wasn't much of it and the girls filled the eye anyway with a pretty toe routine. A comedy bit, back in full stage before the ship, was cleverly handled by Ben Blue and another trio. This got laughs as worked up by the comic. The finale had the ship moving off stage for the return trip home.

"The Doctor's Secret" is the feature held over and the short has Eddie Cantor.

Dave Rubinoff presented an orchestral production entitled "Emancipation."

Gus Edwards and the four pairs of twins participating in his Twin Revue which he produced in sound and color for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Charles King, starring in "Broadway Melody," also has a role in this production

Best Balanced Program On Broadway Presented By The Capitol This Week

THE best balanced motion picture house program on Broadway this week is presented at the Capitol Theatre. For speed and entertainment value it tops all the other houses for the screen and stage units are so blended and of such uniform standard that a very highly enjoyable two hours and a half can be had at the house. Incidentally it might be a good idea to foster a contest of some sort between the 32 Chester Hale Girls and the 32 Roxyettes to learn which troupe is entitled to the title of "The West Point Cadets of the Stage." In both houses this week the girls are turning out a brand of stage drill and stepping that makes it hard to decide which of the two groups are the better.

To the reviewer's mind it seems a mistake that a theatre having both a stage band and a concert orchestra, that the latter should be permitted to play popular melodies of a jazzy nature. That phase of the entertainment should be entirely up to the stage band. It was noticeable in the Capitol bill this week that the playing of "A Symphonic Medley of Melody" in which "I I Had You," "Crazy Rhythm" and "Chloe" were featured that the bigger organization of musicians took a little of the edge off the stage band. This was the number that opened the show running six minutes.

It was followed by the Capitol Magazine and Movietone News for nine minutes. A shot from the M-G-M News showing an airship landing on the Munitions Building in Washington started the magazine, it was followed by a Paramount News shot of the fleet in the Canal Zone, after which two Movietone shots were given. One was of the training of lions in Los Angeles and the other of the wrestling bouts in Madison Square Garden, New York. The latter was the most interesting. Another M-G-M clip of Lindy in his Central American flight was the closing shot in the Newsreel.

Arthur Knorr's production "Miami Nights" was the stage unit, running forty-two minutes. In a scene in one a snow covered part of the north was shown, after which it switched into a Cocoanut Palm Grove in Miami. For the first number the stage band did "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" with Schooler directing it as though it had been composed by Leoncavallo and Sousa, both of which impressions got a liberal hand from the audience. At the conclusion of this number Schooler introduced Evelyn Wilson, doing a bit of magic in the water changing trick with her and then going into her first number "Everything I Do, I Do For You" for laughs and applause. The Hale Girls were on with a bellhop number "Tip Tip" that got over nicely.

The next of the specialties was The Runaway Four who cleaned up for comedy. The Boys were seemingly a revelation to the picture house audience who started laughing immediately after they entered and continued to explode all through their offering. Evelyn Wilson was on for her second specialty, a male impersonation, for "Let's All Harmonize" and "Only A Bartender's Daughter" both numbers getting over in great shape with the audience.

For a finish flash Stone and Vernon Adagio Quartet pulled the house down. Even though one of the boys was rather faulty in his passing on the night that the show was reviewed. This combination have worked out a routine with the girl being the flyer between three men that is startling to behold. It is at once a startlingly sensational as well as a class turn.

The feature of the program was the M-G-M release starring Ramon Navarro entitled "The Flying Fleet," a sure fire money picture for the box office.

"True Heaven" Weak Feature Film Helped By Strong Roxy Stage Show

IT is the stage entertainment at the Roxy this week that makes the bill worth while. Had it not been for the show devised by S. L. Rothafel the chances are that the house would have a record low week for this time of the year as soon as the public became aware of the weakness of the feature film attraction "True Heaven." The feature is a war picture with an ending so ridiculous that the audiences at almost every performance laugh long and loud at the finish, where the hero, an English spy captured by the Germans, is saved from execution by the declaration of the Armistice. The feature runs only 55 minutes which was just 55 minutes too long. The whole show consumes two hours and thirteen minutes.

At the opening of the program four minutes are devoted to an organ solo. This is followed by an overture "The American Prelude" which runs about eight minutes. Then a talking sketch. That is an innovation for this house and it proved that it is a mistake to try this form of entertainment here. Sitting half-way back in the house it was impossible to hear distinctly what was being said. The offering is entitled "An Episode in the Life of Abraham Lincoln" and George Billings, who portrayed Lincoln in the film of that name again enacts the role. Three other players support him. It is the old, old story of Lincoln reprieving the soldier sentenced to be shot. It was really twelve minutes that were wasted, except for the fact that it lent a touch of patriotic color to the bill for Lincoln's Birthday Week.

Immediately following the stage Lincoln sketch, there was the Charles (Chic) Sale Movietone short "Marching On," based on his vaudeville offering of "The Man Who Knew Lincoln." It ran twenty-five minutes and brought applause and laughter mingled with a sob.

The second stage unit of the bill was "Le Charme De La Dentelle," a melange of song, ballet and Roxyette Dancers. The stage setting for this was most colorful and pretty, the scheme being in a canary yellow as to drapes, with Jeanne Mignolet, prima donna, clad in a spangled white gown singing an introductory number which was followed by the ballet, in costumes to harmonize with the drapes, then a set of four specialty dancers and finally Patricia Bowman, also in white for a very clever solo ballet number. The Roxyettes in a black and white lace combination costume strutted for the finish, winding up the offering in seventeen minutes.

The combination of Magazine and Fox Movietone News took eleven minutes. The opening shot was from the Paramount News showing Lindy on his Central American flight, then there were two Movietone shots showing the opening of the Carnival season in Italy and the testing of the life saving and submarine escape apparatus.

"Pirate Life" was the concluding stage feature prior to the feature film. It is colorful and attractive with Fay Adler and Ted Bradford in an adagio offering that is sensational and which took all the applause honors of the bill. The De Caro Brothers as a pair of drunken pirates offered a soused dance routine that scored for laughs. This offering gave the Roxy ensemble a chance to vocalize and they improved it as much as possible. About twenty minutes for the unit.

Pleasing as entertainment but nothing to go home and tell the folks about, principally because of the failure of the feature picture to click.

Warners Appoint Bonns To Exploitation Staff

Eddie Bonns, well known exploitation man, has joined Warners as a specialist on road show exploitation, it is announced by A. P. Waxman, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Bros.

One of the exciting scenes in "The Godless Girl," the new Cecil B. De Mille production. The shot shows the predicament of the characters caught in a fire inside a reformatory school. In the above scene can be seen Marie Prevost, George Duryea and Lina Basquette. This new De Mille drama which picturizes the revolt of youth will be presented to the public soon

Strand's All Talkie Program Does Nose Dive

Warner's "Conquest" Flops Hard And Proves a Weak Talking Feature

The Warner Bros. release "Conquest," starring Monte Blue, advertised as the outstanding feature in its bill at the Strand, "The Home of the Talkies," proved to be one of the weakest that the house has had in some time. Not only is the feature a weak sister from whatever angle you want to look at it or listen to it, but the short attractions that are shown in conjunction with it are just about as weak.

In adition to the feature two Vitaphone shorts are shown. They are Timblin and Raymond in "A Pair of Aces," a blackface comedy talking and musical offering, that is decidedly small time. Flo Lewis, in her comedy number "Give Us a Lift," in which she is assisted by Leo Karlyn, is easily the best number of the entire bill even though it runs but nine minutes.

There is also a Walt Disney sound cartoon, "The Barn Dance," in which Mickey Mouse is featured. It is one of the usual of this type of picture and runs seven minutes. The musical synchronization by Powers Cinephone adds materially to the value of the picture.

There is also a combination of silent and Movietone shots for the Strand News, the selection of subjects being about on a par with the others along the street this week.

Martin Johnston And Wife Make Personal Appearance

The Colony has undergone another change in its policy for the current week. The film attraction there is "Simba" and in connection with the showing of the picture Martin Johnston and his wife are making a personal appearance. Their talks on their experiences in making the picture in Africa and the showing of the film itself constitute the entire show.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnston make a charming appearance on the stage and they are perfectly at ease in their talk which is instructive and at times contains a laugh for the audience. That is especially true of Mrs. Johnston's routine for the platform.

In addition to the "Simba" picture there is a short of the Pigmy Tribe that runs six minutes, the picture being untitled. Mr. Johnston stands at one side of the stage and explains the scenes that were shot.

It is possible that their talk could be added to the picture via RCA or Movietone and the picture would prove an interesting one for the big circuits if this was done. "Simba" in its present form runs but an hour and seven minutes which makes it perfect for the average picture house.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

"U" Managers Warned To Check Sound Volume

Complaints Against Talkies Charged To Improper House Supervision

Joe Weil, director of advertising and publicity for Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., has issued a bulletin to all "U" sound theatres that should be called to the attention of managers of all sound-equipped houses. It points out the number of complaints by patrons against sound pictures because of improper reproduction. These charges, Weil holds, should not be made against the pictures or the equipment, but against the lack of proper supervision by the house manager.

The charges are made that the talkies are too loud, that they give headaches, that they are not perfected, that the voices all sound the same and that there are too many "surface noises." Weil's bulletin says the operator in the booth is responsible for the running of the picture, but the house manager is responsible for the volume at which the picture is run, and he should make a check at least twice during every performance of the way his sound is filling the theatre.

It is pointed out that with an empty house less volume is needed and with a packed house more volume, and the manager is supposed to check the volume and telephone the booth as to whether a picture is coming over too loud or too softly.

In part the bulletin reads:

"The poor reproduction in most theatres that we have attended is due to an inclination to use too much volume. Human ears cannot stand the tremendous volume of sound being shot through the horns. The result is that the sound seems distorted, raspy and overpowering. Surface noises are amplified a millionfold. The dirt on the film or on the records almost becomes a blast through the horns. Headaches result. Complaints pour in. The remedy is to cut down on your volume, so that the sound coming over will have a normal effect. You will find with lesser volume, in most cases, that all your troubles are done away with."

Billie Dove Signs New First National Contract

Billie Dove has been signed to a new long term contract by First National, under the terms of which she will appear exclusively in Vitaphone productions with dialogue. It has been decided to use talking sequences in "The Man and The Moment."

Cinephone Offers New Lower Price Device

POWERS CINEPHONE is ready with a new cheaper equipment for smaller houses for synchronously reproducing both sound-on-film and the disc records. It is announced to cost $6,000, the cost including the reproduction by both systems.

In making his announcement P. A. Powers, president of the company, says the equipment will be of a quality that will come up to all requirements demanded for interchangeability. These new small theatre equipments are ready for immediate installation, but orders will be filled in the order of their receipt and approval, according to the announcement.

Short Subjects Given Big Play In Exploitation

Two-Reel Talkies Are Being Advertised Extensively By Exhibitors

Synchronized short subjects are enjoying just as much popularity as the longer feature pictures in sound and dialogue and exhibitors realize this fact, judging by the way they are exploiting and advertising them. In fact, in some instances the exhibitor has made the talking comedy the backbone of his program. They have been given prominence in marquee displays and in twenty-four sheet advertising.

An entire twenty-four sheet was devoted to advertising "The Old Barn" when this Mack Sennett comedy released by Educational played the Hillstreet Theatre in Los Angeles. "The Bride's Relations," another Sennett comedy was advertised in the marquee lights of the Royal Theatre in Kansas City.

"The Lion's Roar" was advertised by Loew's State Theatre in Los Angeles both in the twenty-four sheet displays and in the newspapers. When this same comedy played simultaneously at three Balaban and Katz houses in Chicago, the Uptown, Tivoli and Paradise, the advertising was nearly as much as that on all other added attractions combined.

The Uptown Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, a big first run house placed its display on "The Lion's Roar" above that of the feature picture in newspaper advertisements. The same was true of this picture when it played the Grand Theatre in Topeka, Kansas.

Photophone May Open Big Plant On West Coast

General Sales Chief Would Launch Hollywood Sales And Service Branch

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—A possibility of Photophone establishing Western headquarters in Hollywood second in importance only to the home office in New York, looms with the scheduled return of J. O. Smith to Hollywood on March 1st. Smith, who is general sales manager for Photophone, left Hollywood for New York last week, following a two weeks' stay. During that time he was impressed with the possibilities for sales and service of sound equipment right in Hollywood.

Smith characterized Hollywood as "the nerve center of sound" and stated his intention of selling the home office on the idea of splurging with Western headquarters here. When he returns in March, he will remain in Hollywood indefinitely.

Small-Asher Sign Belle Baker For 3 Talkies

A contract to appear in three talking and singing productions, the first to be adapted from the story of her life, has been signed with Small and Asher by Belle Baker, vaudeville, concert and recording artist. Because of her extended vaudeville engagements, the first will be made in an Eastern studio and in it will appear Miss Baker's eight-year-old son, Herbert. The other two will be made on the Coast.

Ed W. Small has already departed for California to work out story arrangements and studio facilities for production, while Eph Asher remains in New York to attend to distribution details.

Synchronization Service to Score Price Films

Motion Pictures Synchronization Service will prepare the original scores for the silent as well as the sound version for non-synchronous machines for the Richard Talmadge productions to be distributed by Oscar Price. The company will also prepare a special cue sheet to be used with disc services on non-synchronous equipment. The first picture to be scored under this plan will be "The Bachelor's Club."

RCA Photophone Studios In N. Y. To Be Opened Soon

Splendidly Equipped Plant Will Be Available To All Producers

The new RCA Photophone studios to be known as the Gramercy Studios will be opened in New York City perhaps by the first of March. They occupy two buildings extending from 24th to 25th streets, near Lexington avenue, and will have every modern improvement for the sound studio. They will be used for the production of the company's feature and short subject program, but will also be available for use by outside companies.

In addition to the main stage, which is 160 feet long and 70 feet wide, there will be a smaller stage, about half as large, for the production of shorts. A "Little Theatre," fitted up in the style of a motion picture auditorium, will take the place of the usual projection room.

In the center of the main stage a great swimming tank has been built, suitable for aquatic scenes. It will be covered by flooring and with the flooring lifted and the water drained off the pit will make a stage within a stage.

Surrounding the two stages will be a series of individual dressing rooms and "mob" dressing rooms, scoring rooms, cutting rooms, property rooms, dark rooms and executive and department offices. A well equipped carpenter shop and acoustical laboratory are also included. The plan has been adopted of housing all recording apparatus in wheeled sound-proof booths, to be placed on any part of the stage as required.

Status Of Silents And Talkies Same, Court Rules

In an action brought against Warner Bros. by Lillian Macloon who sought to restrain the company from exhibiting their Vitaphone version of "The Desert Song," a decision in favor of the picture company has been rendered by the Circuit Court of Appeals. This decision upholds the action of the lower court. The verdict of the three judges, Manton, Learned Hand and Augustus N. Hand, ruled that inasmuch as there was an expressed reservation of motion picture rights in the contract made between the authors of "The Desert Song" and Miss Macloon, Warner Bros. were entitled to produce and exhibit a Vitaphone picture under this clause.

It was the plaintiff's contention that she held the dramatic rights to the play west of Denver in the United States and west of Winnipeg in Canada and that the exhibition of the Vitaphone talking picture constituted unfair competition.

The decision of the court indicated that the judges found no difference between the status of a silent picture and a talking picture.

Bristolphone Is Served By First National, Warners

Budd Rogers Says Complete Service Is Now Available

The fact that "On Trial" has been booked at the Palace, Danbury, Conn., and "Lilac Time" and "The Barker" at the Embassy in Portchester, N. Y., is evidence that Warner Bros. and First National have agreed to furnish Bristolphone with their pictures, according to Budd Rogers, sales manager for Bristolphone.

Rogers claims that Bristolphone has passed all the tests required by Western Electric and RCA and that the question of interchangeability has now been definitely established. Theatre owners operating with Bristolphone equipment had previously played First National pictures with perfect results, according to Rogers, and consequently in the future there will be no trouble getting service.

Stewart Chief Recording Engineer For Paramount

George E. Stewart, who has been in the sound department of Paramount's Long Island Studio since it re-opened last summer, has been promoted to the position of chief recording engineer. Stewart takes the place of Ralph H. Townsend, who has resigned.

Stewart has been a specialist in sound engineering for about ten years past. He came to the Paramount studio from the National Broadcasting Company, and before that was with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He is a graduate of Union College.

Davis With Cinetone

Harry Segal has appointed Charles J. Davis, 2nd, Hollywood, as West Coast sales representative for CineTone, the non-synchronous sound device, manufactured and distributed by S. & S. Enterprises, Boston. The territory to be covered by Davis and his staff includes California, Arizona, Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Northern Idaho, Montana and the Hawaiian Islands.

"Qualitone" To Erect Coast Plant For Manufacture

New Device Will Be First To Make Equipment West Of Chicago

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—The first plan for the manufacture of sound equipment West of Chicago, will be erected in Hollywood by Qualitone," a new device marketed by a company of which Sam Freedman is president. Freedman is the former owner of the Fine Arts Studio, since taken over by Tiffany-Stahl.

The company has been in existence but a month and has, since its first announcement, received thousands of dollars worth of orders, enabling it to go ahead on a large scale. It begins quantity production and distribution immediately throughout the United States, anticipating over 200 installations in the next six months.

Qualitone at present is a disc system of reproduction but is being perfected with added equipment to handle sound on film. Its inventors are Fred H. Harrington and E. R. Harris, both of whom are now members of the Qualitone Corporation and executive heads of the company's engineering department.

The first Qualitone installation was at the Marcal Theatre, Hollywood. A preview of the apparatus in conjunction with several films made with other sound patents to prove its interchangeability was successfully given last week in the Marcal. Present were executives of various studios and theatre owners who complimented Freedman on his device. The main office of Qualitone is at present situated in the Tec Art Studios, Hollywood.

"Pinafore" And "Mikado" To Be Made By Pathe

"The Mikado" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," famed old Gilbert and Sullivan operas, are to be filmed as all-talking and singing features by Pathe. They will go into production immediately at the Sound Studios in New York with casts made up largely from players in Broadway musical shows. Production will be supervised by Robert T. Kane, with Josiah Zuro as musical director.

In addition to "The Mikado" and "Pinafore," Pathe will also make a series of two-reel "Film Operas," on which work will be started immediately. These will include, "Pagliacci," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Martha," "Tales of Hoffman," "Carmen" and "Aida." Joseph Zuro has been signed by Pathe as director general of music. In addition to the scoring of music for the films he will cover the entire musical activities of the company.

Studios Increase Costume Plants

Wardrobe, Prop Extensions Bring Marked Savings

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3.—Local costume and prop studios are beginning to feel the inroads of enlarged wardrobe and prop departments being established by producers. All of the major studios are increasing their costume and prop plants to the extent where they scarcely have need for any rentals except in rare cases of period pictures or a tremendous number of extras.

One studio's bill for rentals with one costume company for the year ending 1925 was over $375,000. The same studio paid a bill for 1928 to the same costume firm for only $50,000; less than one seventh the amount expended only four years before.

In cases of period costumes, very few rentals are being made by studios. Producers have found it cheaper to buy or manufacture costumes for the period, put them into wardrobe and then charge their cost against the different pictures in which they are used. A costume's cost is made with three pictures and producers figure that it shows a profit whenever used thereafter.

Producers also have found another asset in the establishment of their own wardrobe departments, that of time-saving. Formerly when all costumes were rented, extras and bit players had to travel down to Los Angeles or wherever the costumers was located, and use over a half-day, in many instances, an entire day, for fittings. Now, with wardrobes extensively furnished and catalogued on the lots, extras can be costumed and fitted in less than an hour.

Practically all studios have enlarged their carpentry, iron-foundry and other labor shops for the making of props. Rental of props from firms in business for that purpose has dwindled to a minimum.

M-G-M Decides On Talk For Vidor's "Hallelujah"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—After King Vidor completed "Hallelujah," with an all-negro cast for M-G-M, producing executives decided the picture shaped up so well that full dialogue should be added. Vidor immediately started remaking interior scenes necessary to carry the talk via Movietone. When finally released "Hallelujah" will have sound effects, negro songs and talk.

$30,000 For Exploiting L. A. Paramount Name

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.—Over $30,000 is reported to have been spent by Publix in exploiting the Paramount Theatre, Los Angeles, in two weeks, when the house dropped the name of Metropolitan Theatre for the new one. More than 250 twenty-eight sheets were used, as against an average of 50 used weekly by the Metropolitan. Newspaper advertising appropriations were tripled.

During the first week of the new name, Paramount, the house boosted its average gross by $14,000. "The Doctor's Secret" was the first week's attraction, followed by "The Wolf of Wall Street," which broke the house record by doing $45,500 with a stage name in the show.

Hollywood Happenings

In Brief

"La Tosca"

First National has obtained the world motion picture rights, it is claimed, to "La Tosca." It is said that the contract just received from England also covers the talking rights in the U. S., Canada, the United Kingdom, England, Australia, India and all other British possessions.

Burbank Ahead of Schedule

Seventy per cent of the First National-Vitaphone product programmed for release during the remainder of the season is completed and ready for showing, First National announces. In the cutting rooms are: "Saturday's Children," "Man and Moment," "Hot Stuff," "Love and Devil." In work are: "Squall," "Two Weeks Off," "Broadway Babies."

"Dark Streets"

"Dark Streets" is the new title given the new Milton Sills' dialogue film, formerly titled "Pat and Mike." Work has stopped due to Sills' illness.

New Contract for Mulhall

First National has secured the signature of Jack Mulhall to a long-term contract, his first under the agreement to be "Two Weeks Off."

"The House of Horrors"

"The House of Horrors" cast has been augmented with the addition by First National of William V. Mong, Michael Visaroff and Tenon Holtz.

Additions to Casts

Production of "Two Weeks Off," a First National picture, has been started. Eddie Gribbon and Phyllis Crane are additions to the cast. Fred Kohler has been cast for "Broadway Babies," Wade Boteler and Aggie Herring for "Dark Secrets," and Julanne Johnston for the role originally given Loretta Young in "Prisoners."

Football Star "Hot Stuff"

Andy Devine, former football luminary, has joined the cast of "Hot Stuff" along with Buddy Messinger and Larry Banthim.

Floating Sound Stage

A floating sound stage is one of the latest developments in talking pictures and is being used by Director George Fitzmaurice during the filming of "The Man and the Moment," a First National-Vitaphone production. The sequences in question were taken off Avalon, Catalina Island.

Carewe Making "Evangeline"

Edwin Carewe now is engaged in filming "Evangeline," Longfellow's poem which Finis Fox adapted for the screen. Dolores Del Rio has the feminine role and Roland Drew, John Holland, James Marcus, Alec B. Francis, Lawrence Grant, Bobby Mack, Paul McAllister and George Marion are the other players. The theme song has been composed by Al Jolson. Location trips to original sites in Novia Scotia and Louisiana are planned.

Max Ree with RKO

Max Ree, formerly in charge of First National costume designing department, has been signed under a long-term contract to RKO. He will be art supervisor for that studio, with all costumes, art and set designs under his jurisdiction, plus art effects for sound productions.

Paramount Contract

Eugene Pallette has been given a term contract by Paramount. His first role under it is for "The Studio Murder Mystery.

Leaves Stage for Films

Fritzi Ridgeway is leaving the cast of "The Bad Woman" at the Eagan Theatre, Los Angeles, to return to pictures. She has been signed for a series of two-reel talk comedies by Christie.

Columbia's Musical Chief

Constantin Bakaleinikoff has been signed to take charge of all musical synchronization for Columbia's talking pictures. Bakaleinikoff is a well-known orchestra conductor associated with various Los Angeles theatres for several years. At present he is in charge of the Criterion Orchestra.

Poland Sells "Sailor's Holiday"

Joseph Franklin Poland has sold "Sailor's Holiday," an original dialogue comedy, to Pathe.

Star Role for Mary Nolan

Universal will feature Mary Nolan in "The Stolen Lady," under direction of Ray Taylor. The story is from the stage play by William Dudley Pelley, with scenario credited to Peter Milne.

Root Continuing with Paramount

Wells Root, former New York World critic, who came to the Coast a year ago to write originals and scenarios for Paramount, will likely continue with that organization on a new contract now being negotiated.

Long Term for Arlen

Having completed his work in "Four Feathers,' Richard Arlen has been signed by Paramount to a new long-term contract. He is at present working in a talkie, "The Man I Love," from a play by Herman Mankiewicz.

Adds a Director

Columbia has added Thomas Buckingham to its directorial staff. He has been identified with Universal, Pathe and Fox, and can not only direct but is a writer and cameraman.

Sono-Art Signs Hardy

Sam Hardy will play the part of the minstrel show owner in the Eddie Dowling picture, "Broadway Bound," an all-talking picture. In the past Hardy has been well known to musical comedy audiences, and has recently figured in several picture productions.

"Queen of Jazz"

First National has bought the original story, "The Queen of Jazz," by Charles Beahan and Frances Kanes.

Opinions on Pictures

The Flying Fleet

Best Airplane Picture In Some Time

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

WHOEVER it was in the M-G-M organization that got the idea of tying up with the aerial service branch of the Navy should be given a raise in salary, for in "The Air Fleet" the company has turned out a feature that is a surefire money picture for the box office. It is a corking, well sustained interest tale that will be liked by any type of an audience anywhere. It has a series of aerial shots that are better than anything shown on the screen in a year and the Three Sea Hawks, who were the most sensational of all the Navy flyers contribute considerable toward the thrills that the picture has.

The story, the author of which was Lieut. Commander Frank Wead, U.S.N. and in which Byron Morgan assisted, takes a sextette of cadets at the Naval Academy for its principal characters and the tale as it unfolds follows the successive steps from the time that they graduate, through their attendauce at the Naval Flying School at Pensacola, Fla., after which they obtained the rank of Lieutenants to their assignment to the San Diego Naval Station and eulminates in the memorable flight to Honolulu which was unsuccessfully attempted by the Navy several years ago.

Ramon Navarro has the role of a rather self-sufficient young man who tries to win the girl, but even though he manages to step into the place of honor as the pilot of the sea-plane for the big flight, replacing his chum from the Academy, he fails to get the girl, who falls for Ralph Graves, who enacts the role of the true blue pal, and who would rather lose out with his superior officers than to tell tales on a friend who has double crossed him. It is hard to decide which of the two men has the better role, but it would seem as though Graves had the edge, although Navarro more than makes good in what is assigned to him. Anita Page plays the girl. Edward Nugent and Gardner James both contribute worth while performances.

But while on the subject of credits George Hill, who directed, is not to be overlooked, or Joe Farnham who supplied the titles.

Drawing Power: Go out and promise your audiences the real thrills of the air. This is the best air picture that has come along in a year and it is clean, with some very clever comedy situations.

True Heaven

War Is Hell and This Is a War Film

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a very ordinary program feature without anything that will redeem it at the box office. The war is now ten years old and the public has had so many good war stories that it hardly has time for one that is as thinly constructed as this is. Even with George O'Brien, a very good screen actor with a following, you can hardly hope to do anything like real business with this one. Where the title "True Heaven" comes from, other than a spoken title that is forced into the action, will remain one of life's mysteries. And what will "True Heaven" mean at the B. O.? There is nothing in it that will make them come up to the window.

In brief it is a story of Belgium, back of the British lines. George O'Brien is a young English officer who comes to headquarters from the front with dispatches. He sees a girl in a window and falls for her, makes up his mind to stay overnight and meets her in a cafe where the girls are entertaining the boys. Then in a bomb raid they are forced into a cellar the building over which is hit and they are penned in. He is wounded and Lois Moran, as the little cafe entertainer, saves his life. On his recovery he is sent into the German lines as a spy and finds her there. In reality she is a member of the German Secret Service and for a while she is torn between love and duty, but finally deciding that she loves her country the most turns him in. Then as he is to be shot his life is saved by the Armistice. That finish gave the Roxy audience a good laugh. It should have, for it is so forced an ending to the film that it stands out as glaringly humorous.

Other that. George O'Brien and Lois Moran there is but one performance on the part of the cast that is worthy of mention and that is contributed by Oscar Apfel as a German general.

James Tingling, one of the newer directors on the Fox lot, is responsible for the direction of the production and he has managed very well indeed considering the story that must have been handed him. He did manage to get Miss Moran to put over a vamping characterization in the earlier scenes that may change the girl's screen career. She looks as though she can get away with that kind of stuff.

Drawing Power: Nothing beyond the fact that it has George O'Brien as the star.

Produced and distributed by Fox Film Corp. Length: Silent, 5,563 feet; synchronized, 5,531 feet. Running time: fifty-five minutes. Sound, Movietone system. Story by C. E. Montague. Directed by James Tingling.

Conquest

A 100 Per Cent Talkie Flop

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"CONQUEST" is a 100 per cent talkie, but one of the worst examples of that type of picture that has come to Broadway in many months. It is a flop, take it from any viewpoint that you want to, story, acting, dialog and direction. That is covering a lot of ground, but you can't Aget away from it, this is a bad picture.

The story is based on a novel by Mary Imlay Taylor and deals with an expedition to discover the South Pole, a la the present quest of Commander Byrd. But in the pictures it is necessary to have a triangle, that is, two men in love with the same woman and both determined to marry her. She favors one of them and he is the one that is injured when their plane crashes on the ice fields, and the other deserts him, returning to his home with a tale of how heroic a death befell his comrade flyer, and how he buried him beneath a blanket of snow. Of course he marries the girl, but then later the dead man reappears and there is the devil to pay, but the real hero holds his peace for the sake of the girl he loves rather than the man she is married to. Another trip to the Pole is planned and again the same two men start out to make the flight, again they crash, this time as a result of the attempt on the part of the husband to murder his companion, and then the conditions are reversed, for the hero rescues his would-be assassin and when they are returning homeward on their supply ship the husband decides the best way out is suicide and he jumps overboard and you can imagine the rest.

Monte Blue essays the role of the hero, but he is far from convincing when it comes to delivering his lines. They will have to pick character roles for Monte if he is to appear in front of the mike and the chances are that Indian roles will he his forte from now on. In his present role, in the explorer's costume, he certainly looked the role of the aborigine. A somewhat modernized version of "Strongheart" should make an ideal vehicle for him as a talkie. Playing opposite him, H. B. Warner in the role of the heavy was almost as bad in the matter of handling lines. The three members of the cast who really delivered are Edmund Breese, Tully Marshall and Lois Wilson with credit to them in the order named.

Drawing Power: Lacking entirely outside of the fact that it is a 100 per cent Talking Picture.

Produced and distributed by the Warner Bros. A Vitaphone production. Length 6,729 feet. Released Jan. 12, 1929. Running time an hour and thirteen minutes. Story by Mary Imlay Taylor. Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

The Broadway Melody

A Real 100 Percent Showman's Picture for Showmen

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

HERE is the first talking picture that has 100 per cent of everything. It's a real showman's picture made for showmen to go out and clean up on. There is real drama, musical comedy and comedy in its composition, together with a cast of players that are going to make a place for themselves for all time in the talkies on the strength of the performances that they deliver here. And with it all there are at least two song numbers that are in the hit category.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have stolen a march on all of their competitors in the talkie production field by being the first on the market with a combination drama and musical revue that will knock the audiences for a goal. Others have had revues and musical comedies in work but M-G-M is the first to hit the screen with theirs and to them will have to go the glory for all time of being the pioneers.

Let it be said right here and now that "The Broadway Melody" teaches motion picture producers one thing and that is that youth isn't the important factor that it was in the days of the silent picture. For in "The Broadway Melody" there are two people who in the silent field would never have had a chance. In the first place little Bessie Love, who once was a star and then was doing the best she could around Hollywood and not getting much of a chance, is back on the screen and qualifies as a real star. Charlie King, who for years was in vaudeville with Elizabeth Brice, and then with Georgie Cohan in his musical shows for season after season, would have been considered much too old for the silent pictures. Yet here when he is given a chance he screens as young as any of the boys, and in a role that is far from a sympathetic one he manages to come through with flying colors. And as for Anita Page, a newcomer to the screen, she is the little hick vaudeville dame to perfection. She reminds us very much of Marion Davies of some years ago as to looks and she can troup. Of course she hasn't the finesse right now that Bessie possesses but in time she will get it and then watch out for a real hit.

Jed Prouty as a stuttering vaudeville booker tears chunks out of the comedy and Eddie Kane, also an ex-vaudeville performer, steps in as Zanfield, the revue producer, with a flock of yesmen around him, in a manner that sets him. Eddie Dillon and Kenneth Thomson both handle their respective roles cleverly. Fletcher Norton as a tableau director with a dash was to the manner born.

Edmund Goulding who wrote the story undoubtedly did it from his memory note book of the days that he was in vaudeville and later with the "Follies" with the late Nora Bayes. He has turned out a good job, while Norman Houston and James Gleason, who were responsible for the dialogue, contributed a goodly share toward the success. One gets Gleason's work in all of the lines for he for a long time lived in that atmosphere. Harry Beaumont deserves a lot of praise for the direction and there are some angle shots that are crackerjacks.

The story tells of a hick song and dance man who has ambitions to write songs. He finally turns out a hit that Zanfield takes for his revue, taking the hick with the songs and putting him in the show. He has had a crush on "Hank" Mahoney, the older of the Mahoney Sisters, for a long time and as soon as he lands he sends for them to come in off the small time for he is going to fix 'em with the show. He does land them but not as they expected, and when he gets a flash at "Queenie" Mahoney he falls for her like a ton of coal and forgets poor "Hank." "Queenie" loves the hick but thinks so much of her sister's happiness that she is willing to sacrifice herself and accepts the attentions of one of the backers of the show who wants to put her up in a Park Avenoo apartment with a Rolls Royce and everything that goes with it. But at the last minute "Hank" sees the true state of affairs and urges the boy to go out and fight for "Queenie," which he does and although he is kicked out of the Park Avenoo menage she goes with him and they are married while "Hank" with a new "sister" starts out for the tanks again.

It's a peach of a story of self sacrifice on the part of two women with the men getting the worst end of it as they deserve only too often in show business of the type which this story depicts. But with the drama there is a lot of colorful stuff of the revue. The dress rehearsal scenes with the songs are tremendously done, and later when scenes from the show are shown, some of them in technicolor, they are little short of marvelous. The manner in which the dance numbers and the ensembles were handled was truly great and only one who has been connected with a talkie lot where they were trying to make a revue in sound can appreciate how truly a remarkable piece of work has been done in this respect.

From beginning to end the recording and the reproduction of it is clear, distinct and at not a single time is the dialogue or the singing overdone. In the Technicolor scene the singer of the song is not seen but the flash on the stage is so great in color that no one is going to look from whence the voice is coming.

You can put this one down in your date book as one of the biggest box office bets in talking pictures up to now and that doesn't even except the Jolsons. The chances are that it will still be going at the Astor when next season rolls around and it will still be drawing crowds.

Drawing Power: It has everything that any audience could want and it will draw and please all classes of audiences. It's a picture that they can't get away from.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length: 9,372. Release date: Pre-release. Running time: an hour and forty minutes. Written by Edmund Goulding, adapted by Sarah Y. Mason, dialogue by Norman Houston and James Gleason. Arthur Freed and Nacio Herb Brown are responsible for the lyrics and music. Directed by Harry Beaumont.

"The Fatal Warning"

(Mascot Serial—19,000 feet)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

NAT LEVINE'S new serial without any hesitancy steps right into an intriguing story that has a continual flow of story details which serial fans should gobble up. Judging by the first three episodes an enjoyable time is to be had in the coming chapters. The story is of the usual serial type but its contents of mysterious and adventurous events cleverly interlap and have been adeptly screened by Director Richard Thorpe and the characters play their roles well.

One good feature of this chapter-play is its snap. There is a fine play of action and in the first three chapters at least there were no dull stretches discernible. Of course, as in all serials, the "going-on" in the plot are not at all times convincing. In "The Fatal Warning" the plot and its action are as persuasive as those of any serial now on the market.

Rogers (George Periolat), a banker, is mysteriously abducted at his home. His daughter, Dorothy (Helene Costello), calls in Russell Thorne (Ralph Graves), criminologist, to solve his disappearance. The father had suspected someone who came to his home as a friend of being his enemy. Following his disappearance it follows that he may have several enemies for at night his house is broken into by various supposedly respectable people. They appear to be seeking something. That something may be the $100,000 reported as stolen from Rogers' bank following his disappearance and which has resulted in casting suspicion on the missing man. Or the object of the midnight prowlers may be something not yet revealed although it is probable that with the ending of the third chapter, the producer has laid all his cards on the table and it is up to the spectator to guess who is the guilty party.

There are many queries that come without any prompting. Who is the mysterious old man, who hides in the recesses of the Rogers cellar and comes out at intervals to confound the detective with false clues? What is the secret of the bookcase to which come the stealthy prowlers and who is the man who left his scarred footprint on the book that Rogers was reading the night he disappeared? How is it that a copy of the book in question seems to be in the possession of various suspects and what is the meaning of the silhouette thrown on the wall which generally precedes some fresh disaster by the mysterious perpetrator of the crimes?

The story by Wyndham Gittens weaves these various happenings skilfully and as presented by the director and the cast, it keeps you guessing. All will be explained in the final chapters, but till then anyones guess may be right.

In the three chapters, Graves has rescued the girl from a den of kidnappers, has narrowly escaped a death crash and is right in the thick of danger. All the trimmings with this type of action—suspense, speed, fights, etc—are to be found in the chapters. William Presley Burt is to be complimented on his continuity.

Produced by Nat Levine. Released by Mascot Pictures. Ten episodes in length. Release date, February 15, 1929. Also in the cast are: Phillips Smalley, Lloyd Whitlock, Boris Karloff, Sid Crossley, Symona Boniface and Tom Lingham.

"Pathe Review No. 9"

(Pathe—One Reel)

PATHE Review No. 9 presents three subjects that will grab the interest. In the first, the camera has found its way into the laboratories of a spectacle maker. The eye of the camera follows the making of the spectacle, from the time it is just a part of a huge mass of molten glass, until it is a finished lens. The other subjects appearing are: "Dark Romance," Pathechrome films of a wedding day at Menankabau in the Pedang Highlands of far away Sumatra, and "Fashion Note From Paris," tea tips from Pathe Review's Continental correspondent.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

The Man Who Cheated Life

Your Audiences Will Say You Cheated Them

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

HERE is a German made production that is about as rambling a tale that has been witnessed on the screen in this country in a long while. Of course the foreign idea in production leans to the costume period stuff, and in this case it is no exception. "The Man Who Cheated Life," is just another one of those versions of "Faust," which would indicate that in German film production we have much the same idea as exists in America.

Only in this case it was the evident intent of the producers to see just how much footage they could shoot without getting anywhere at all. The character of the Devil in the story took a note on the hero's soul for 90 days, and from the way that the picture rambled on it looked as though it was going to take the whole 90 days before one got to the end of the story. A check up of the audience at the Little Carnegie Playhouse in New York at the last performance on the first Sunday night that the picture was shown revealed nine people asleep in the five rows of the little theatre before the film was halfway finished.

The story deals with a young student in a school in Bohemia who is poor and wishes for wealth. He wants to marry an heiress and the Devil overhears him and comes to him with a proposition to which he agrees and immediately the heiress is thrown into his arms from the back of a horse. Of course, she is engaged to wed a Count and finally when the student and the girl are discovered by the Count there is cause for a duel, and as the student is acknowledged as the best swordsman in the country the girl's father makes him pledge his word that he will not fight the Count. But when the boy gives his word he reckoned without the powers of the Devil, who takes the inner-conscious self of the student and has him kill the Count in the duel. And finally he must pay the price that Satan exacts for his brief time as a wealthy man.

At that it must be admitted that a couple of names were secured for the cast for it is Conrad Veidt who plays the student and Werner Krauss impersonates the Devil.

Drawing Power: If you have a neighborhood house where there is a strong Hungarian or Bohemian population you might get by with this, but otherwise pass it up.

"The Barn Dance"

(Disney Sound Cartoon Comedy)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

WALT DISNEY has evolved another of those animal characters for comedy purposes. This is Mickey Mouse. Mickey is wooing another mousie and takes her to a barn dance with a lot of the usual comedy ticks following. There are some laughs in it. The reel has sound synchronization via the Powers Cinephone. Its running time is seven minutes.

".45 Calibre War"

A Punk Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS western has been on the Pathe shelves for some time. It could just have well stayed there for it certainly will not add any to the prestige of Pathe-westerns. Ordinary, inadequate, the production is a wobbly affair. It is difficult to understand how Leo Maloney who directed and Ford I. Beebe who did the story could have been guilty of so poor a piece of work.

As the writer saw it, the following faults contributed forcibly to make it the mediocre number it is:

(1) very little action, mostly shots of groups engaged in conversation, and a feeble attempt to indulge in a riotous blood and thunder finale; (2) entirely hammish acting from the star, Don Coleman, and equally punk performances from the villain, heroine, etc. The best acting comes from a minister. (3) But he is pictured as setting fire to a dance-hall and is seen running around like a pyromaniac with a blazing torch in his hand. A few captions hint at his actions as being justified because of the end he is striving at—the elimination of the dance-hall as a habitat for the villains. This is not an enlightening spectacle: a minister committing the crime of arson. (4) the general appeal of the picture. It lacks tenseness and is far too passive.

Drawing Power: We can't give this one the stamp of approval. Out in the sticks where they take their westerns in any shape and form it may get by. But it is only another western.

THEME: Western drama in a cow town. Land-owners are forced to sell to a rascally crew or accept a bullet in the back. The young hero and his pal clean up the villains and restore justice.

"At The Front"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THIS release starring Arthur Lake in the latest of the "Horace in Hollywood" comedies, shows him as an extra appearing in a war sequence of a picture. He considers himself a knockout—and certainly would have them, could the top kick in his company have had his way. A gun was an unknown quantity to Horace and when the orders to "fall in" were given, he spent most of his time falling down.

In the trenches Horace's method of handling a grenade nearly gave his buddies fluttering of the heart. At getting orders of any kind mixed up he was a genius. Everyone was relieved when the sequence was finally shot and Horace was discharged as a private. Arthur Lake seems to have quite a following among fans as a result of some excellent work he has done in feature productions, so his name and appearance in this comedy might balance what is just passable fun.

Napoleon

A Very Poor Foreign Made Picture

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

IF you are an exhibitor and you play this one, the chances are that your audiences will send you to St. Helena for life. It is a very poor apology for a motion picture and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer must have had a lot of pressure brought to bear on them to bring about the distribution of the picture by that organization. Not only is the story of the early life of Napoleon handled in a most episodical fashion in the screen version of the tale, but the photography is wretched and the direction even worse than that. If I was running a house and the picture was offered me I wouldn't play it for nothing.

The answer is that the French company that produced it should have been ashamed to send it to America, unless they intended it to be an example of how bad they can make pictures there. If America is going to be compelled to buy this sort of junk to meet quota conditions, then the American producers should take the loss and shelve the pictures and not compel American audiences to look at them. And if the foreign nations that produce pictures of this ilk insist on distribution on this side of the Atlantic why just stop giving them American pictures at all and let their audiences suffer with this sort of product and it won't be long before the public abroad will revolt.

This version of the life of Napoleon first shows him as a cadet in a French military school and then his rise in the ranks of the army of the revolution until he returns from the Italian campaigns. It also carries his romance and final marriage to Josephine as its love theme.

Abel Gance directed the picture for "The General Society of Films." He was also the author of the story, and for all that it matters he might as well have been the whole cast of players. Albert Dieudonne characterizes the young Napoleon and Gina Manes has the role of Josephine. Neither of them will ever mean anything to American audiences and they do not show anything in this picture that would make them a possibility for an American producer. Of course, there is always the possibility that the version of the picture that is being shown in America has been chopped in the cutting and that might account for the decidedly jumpy episodical telling of the screen story. But the chances are that if there were more of the story it would have meant that the audiences would have had to suffer that much more.

Drawing Power: Only where there is a very strong French population is there any chance at all.

Produced by "The General Society of Films of France," distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Released: October, 1928. Running time an hour and twelve minutes. Story and direction by Abel Gance.

"Whirls and Girls"
(Sennett-Educational Talking Comedy)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is another of the Mack Sennett directed talking comedies and a good one. Despite the dialogue it moves at a faster pace than the usual run of these short comedies. Sennett jumps quickly from one episode to another and does not allow it to drag much. He has injected some splendid comedy touches and the windup is a wow. Also the Sennett bathing girls add much to the picture. They are up to the usual Sennett standard and he gives them plenty to do.

Much of the success of this good comedy goes to the credit of Harry Gribbon, who is featured with Dot Farley, Andy Clyde and Ruth Kane. Gribbon is a real comedian with many years of stage and screen experience behind him and he figures to be a real knockout in these talkies.

In this story Gribbon picks up with a henpecked husband who is allowed ten cents a day by his domineering wife. Gribbon offers him a job at one-hundred a week checking up on figures—which are found on the beach. They encounter a bevy of beauties and take in all the beach joyrides and then repair to the cabaret with the swimming pool. Grib takes the fifty dollar salary of the henpecked husband and gives him a signed check in which he is to fill in any amount he desires. They are having a glorious time in and out of the tank when the irate wife puts in an appearance. The keepers from the lunatic asylum arrive at the same time and again take charge of Gribbon. The wife pursues friend husband into the tank with a revolver. He attempts to keep submerged as she fires several shots. The sound effects from the bubbling of the water as the husband breaths beneath the water provide geniune humor and will set 'em laughing wherever the picture is heard.

"Out At Home"
(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

A RATHER fair number of the Buster Brown series of comedies for release by "U." This one has been gagged a bit better than the usual run and should please.

If Buster had only been a little more adept at wielding a baseball bat, he and Mary Jane might have kept out of difficulties, but the ball went through the pantry window, a pie was ruined and an unsympathetic maid reported to father. Following the resultant spanking, Buster, Mary Jane and the little dark boy Oatmeal wander into father's laboratory. They start the mechanical maid Pa was perfecting and couldn't stop her. Poor Oatmeal is about to be squeezed to a pulp, when Buster knocks the maid down, removes her internal workings and rescues the darky. The kids overhear father telling his guests that the mechanical maid would serve dinner. Buster and Oatmeal hop inside to work the contraption—and then the fun begins. After causing all sorts of trouble, the maid is accidentally set afire. The kids are then discovered, and Buster rates another spanking.

"Grandma's House"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS Aesop Film Fable cartooned by the artist Paul Terry, is a clever pen takeoff on the "Little Red Riding Hood" yarn and is funny. Little Rita Red Riding Mouse, leaves her boy friend Milt, to take a basket of lunch to Grandma. Waffles, the wolf-cat spys her tripping through the woods, and races ahead to the house. He ties Grandma to the clock, and takes her place in the bed. Rita, upon her arrival is surprised to see the terrible change that has come over the old lady, and is afraid. Waffles jumps out of bed and chases her. Rita yells for help, and Milt hearing her cries, dashes to her rescue on his wooden horse then rides safely away.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Ask Dad"
(Coronet-Educational Talking Comedy)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a rather clever all-talkie comedy with a cast of but three, Edward Everett Horton, Winston Miller and Ruth Renick. Horton carries the whole picture and proves himself a real artist for these talkies. Unlike most of these short subjects with dialogue, the dialogue is a real asset to the picture. It is clever and so well done by Horton that it holds the interest throughout. The synchronization is by RCA Photophone.

It is a story that does not depend upon speed for its success and it is nicely thought out for talking purposes. Horton is the busy business man whose son visits him from college and promptly falls into love with his secretary. The youth after much embarrassment manages to propose to the girl who is considerably older than he. She tells him she is in love with another, but the kid goes to his father and tells him of his love for the girl. He points out her many attractions to Dad, a widower, and Dad comes to a full realization that he is right. He promptly proceeds in a very clever manner to press his own suit and it eventually develops that he is the one the girl has really been in love with. There is nothing new to the story and in less competent hands it would not amount to much, but Horton puts it over so cleverly that it should meet with much success around the picture houses.

"Button My Back"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

BILLY BEVAN, the Sennett-Pathe comedian who has handled the "wise guy" type of comedy characterization on many occasions to perfection, has the featured role in this number. The appearance of Bevan in almost any film, is pretty nearly a sure-fire gaurantee that fun will be had, and filmgoers will not be disappointed in his latest.

Billy this time appears as a worthless husband supported by his hardworking wife, Alice Ward. He flirts with the dames, but when he hands the eye to an attractive young gal played by Carmelita Geraghty, he gets into a number of amusing situations, the highlight of which is furnished when he takes refuge in her bedroom after having been relieved of his pants by a ferocious bull-dog. Complications follow when his wife finds him there. Billy makes a grand exit through the window minus his trousers, with friend wife helping him on his way with some hot lead from a revolver.

The romantic leads in "The Quitter," a new Columbia drama—Dorothy Revier and Ben Lyon. Also in the cast are Fred Kohler, Clair McDowell, Charles McHugh and Sherry Hall. Joseph Henabery directed

"The Old Barn"
(Sennett-Educational Talking Comedy)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

MACK SENNETT personally directed this talkie comedy which is synchronized by the RCA Photophone process. It is a mystery story featuring Johnny Burke and Daphne Pollard and it is good for quite a few laughs. There is much dialogue to it and many sound effects are synchronized. It is doubtful if the synchronization helps the picture. The dialogue certainly slows up the action almost to a standstill and it is that type of comedy to which speed is more essential than anything else. In the cast are Andy Clyde, Thelma Hill, Vernon Dent, Irving Bacon, Dave Morris and Ruth Hane.

Burke is the new man on the place and he has fallen in love with the kitchen maid. With the household at dinner the radio announces the escape of a desperate criminal, who shortly makes his appearance and demands hot coffee. Burke and the maid later go to the barn and discover the criminal is there. They hasten back to the house, bring the sheriff, the hotel proprietor and the household with them. The storm blows the barn door shut and they are all locked in. Then follow all sorts of wierd happenings, some of them very funny.

Eventually the hotel proprietor is revealed as a bootlegger and Burke as a secret service man, who captures the criminal. Both Burke and Miss Pollard do their work well, but each would undoubtedly do better if the action was not so much slowed down by the dialogue. The picture should be much better in its silent version.

"A Pair Of Aces"
(Timblin and Raymond Vitaphone Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a small time black-face act with cross-fire talk and a song of a comedy character that gets laughs. The cross-fire talk is stereotyped and has been heard time and again in the small vaudeville houses. The song is one of those that teams used fifteen years ago and which the audiences found funny then. Perhaps the new generation will find it likewise. A uke solo by the taller of the two men is one of the best things in the sound short. The running time was eleven minutes.

"Give Us A Lift"
(Flo Lewis Vitaphone Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

FLO LEWIS has a reputation on Broadway as a comedienne. She lives up to it in this picture in which she is assisted by Leo Karlyn. The act is really a slapstick comedy, Flo opening it with a song regarding trying to get a lift from a passing car. Karlyn arrives with a pushmobile and the two follow a flirtation routine with the greater part of the comedy coming from a series of pratt falls that Flo does trying to get in the car. For the finish she finally takes out her roller skates and goes home. There are laughs aplenty during the nine minutes that it runs.

Ed Wynn May Star For "U" In "Manhattan Mary"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 13.—Universal has purchased the film and dialogue rights to "Manhattan Mary," originally produced as musical comedy in New York. Ed Wynn, who has been placed under contract by Universal, may be given it as his first vehicle. Negotiations are b ing held meanwhile with Lou Holtz, who may be used in "Manhattan Mary" should another show be used for Wynn.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

By Charles E. Lewis

Introducing Some New Members Of The Round Table

The Round Table Club takes pleasure in welcoming into the ranks of the CLUB some new members. It is very gratifying to note, in looking over the names of these different managers, that they represent some of the foremost showmen in the business.

First permit us to introduce Harry Browning, of the new and famous B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre, in Boston, Mass. The reputation of this magnificent playhouse is well-known, not only in Boston and New England, but all over the country. From a man of Mr. Browning's type we expect to hear frequently of the happenings of this famous theatre.

Next we introduce Joe Burton, manager of the Keith Theatre, in N. Platte, Nebr. The mere fact that Mr. Burton's theatre is equipped for sound makes his entrance into the club tre is equipped for sound makes his entrance into the Club interesting. We are looking forward to some fine news from Third,—we make the acquaintance of Henry T. Kimmel, who controls the destinies of the Victory and Strand Theatres, in Salisbury, N. C. Mr. Kimmel should be in a good position to pass on valuable tips on theatre operation and exploitation. We will await his next letter with interest.

Fourth: We have another "sound" theatre manager in C. Elmer Nolte, Jr., of the Grand Theatre, in Baltimore, Md. Mr. Nolte, we have every reason to believe, knows plenty about the "talkies" and I'm sure he will want to pass some of his knowledge and experiences on to his fellow members.

Last, but not least, in this week's group of new members, we present Jack Allen, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Kitchener, Ontario, Canada. Mr. Allen knows how to run a theatre and how to advertise it properly and his future mail should contain lots of items worthy of our attention.

New members are asked to bear with us in the event that their applications are not promptly acknowledged through the CLUB pages, but we always seek to take care of all mail and new members as rapidly as we can.

Club Chairman May Have To Make Use Of The Pulmotor

In an organization as large as ours, it often happens that we lose sight of some of those members who stop writing or sending us their advertising stunts. But whenever we get a spare moment or two we are going to "dig" them out of the records and call attention to their "laying down." So you had better keep up your contact with the CLUB if you don't want to find yourself listed in this department.

Fred "Fritz" Putnam, manager of the Strand Theatre, in Port Arthur, Texas, was one of the real "stand-bys" of the CLUB for a long time, but for the past few months we have received nothing but silence from him. Now what we would all like to know is "what happened to 'Fritz'" and when he reads this he will know that it is time for him to sit down and let us know the why's. Get busy Fred or we are apt to run down to find out for ourselves.

Then we remember a good friend of last summer's trip, Ray C. Hickman, and once you meet Ray you will never forget him. He is one "regular" fellow and it would indeed grieve us to lose track of him. Ray is the boy who tackled, without previous experience of any kind, the show business down in Marietta, Ohio and put the Auditorium Theatre on the map in that city. Hustle to your typewriter, Ray, and tell me whether I am to look forward to seeing or hearing from you again. O. K.?

Ashland, Ohio next claims our attention and the best news we would like to hear from that town is that the theatre business has come into its own once more. The outlook was gloomy during the warm weather last August, but with the coming of a new season and, "talkies" to boot, Ashland should be cutting a niche in Ohio's theatre history.

An Attractive Theme Song Tie-up—Story on Next Page

An Australian's View On Talking Motion Pictures

(As promised in last week's issue we are reproducing, word for word, the letter received from Frederick Sykes, manager of the Piccadilly Theatre, in Sydney, Australia. —EDITOR.)

Dear Mr. Lewis:

"I have sent you my opinion on sound now I will send again on the speaking film.

"The speaking film has come—and one more source of noise is added to the ever increasing medley of noises that modern science is creating. Speech threatens to invade the last refuge of silence—the Cinema!

"One of the joys of the Cinema is that it is quiet, apart from the music, you may sit for hours on end following throb by throb the career of the heroine without having to endure her voice. If her adventures pall, there are always the dim light and the silence to help you think of other things.

"But now we are to hear her speak, and who can tell what will happen to the English language when Hollywood and Elstree get going? Shall we really be able to listen while Miss Ruby Henna, in her choicest English tells what she thinks of him? Shall we be any the wiser as we listen to "Two Gun Tom" soliloquising in the Texan tongue on the subjects of Sheriffs?

"On the whole, the Cinema has been kind to its actors and actresses. It has shown them at their best, and we have taken pleasure in seeing them. But will they stand hearing?

"We have endured and enjoyed a generation of American heroes, heroines and comedians playing American plots in American scenes. We are familiar with all the details of Cowboys, and are we not acquainted with the life in American sleeping cars. But we have never heard a word. What will happen now that the speaking film has come to stay? How will it record a big fight?

"The Language Censor will have to be very wide awake to see that no word slips through that is not to be found in the Oxford Dictionary. Many of them may have to go back to school and learn a language that the English speaking world will tolerate.

"What is to happen to the foreign star unable to speak English at all? There need be no misapprehension about the attitude of the English people towards the speaking of their own language. The last few years of broadcasting have familiarized everybody in this country and in the Dominions with good speech, and there is no lack of criticism when speakers fall below the very high standard of excellence set by the official speakers of the broadcasting stations.

"A young American actress once came to me in despair about her 'accent.' She wanted to play Opera and all was in her favor with the exception of her 'accent' which was unsuitable for the work in hand. She set to work and learned what was to her an entirely alien pronunciation of her mother tongue. She would recite whole passages of English prose and verse, I shall never forget her distress when she discovered herself one day at a rehearsal saying 'nat' for not."

Tie Up With Your Music Dealer On New Theme Songs

On the preceeding page we publish the photo of an unusually attractive window tie-up between a theatre and a music store. With the ever increasing popularity of the theme song in conjunction with present day pictures, this has opened up another avenue for theatre and merchant co-operation. The photo referred to shows a window in a representative music store in Astoria, Long Island and carried plenty of "punch" for both the song "Love" and picture it was written for "The Godless Girl."

Music store tieups not only create interest in the song, but build up a desire to also see the picture. This was amply demonstrated during the time that "Mother Knows Best" was being tied up with "Sally of My Dreams;" and for "Angela Mia" used, almost to a fault, for "Street Angel." It is also advisable to have your orchestra or organist play the theme song during the showing of the trailer for a coming attraction. In theatres where there is a microphone attachment to their sound plant, someone can announce the fact while the music is being played. I witnessed just such a stunt up in New England during the showing of the "Singing Fool" trailer.

Mastbaum and Uptown, Stanley Theatres, Opening In Philadelphia

FINISHING touches are rapidly being added to the Stanley Company's new Mastbaum Theatre, at 20th and Market Sts., Philadelphia, erected as a memorial to the late Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the company. The opening date has been set for February 28th. Some indication of the magnitude and beauty of the Masthaum may be gained from the fact that it was erected and furnished at a tremendous cost and will accommodate 5,000 persons.

The building occupies an area 220 x 180 feet and contains nearly 2,000 tons of steel in its framework. It is of ornamental stone and cement with massive columns and overhanging cornices and upon entering the lobby the visitor is impressed by the magnificence of the decorations and furnishings, and the handsome marble stairways at each end. The stage is 75 feet wide, one of the largest in the country, having six levels on lifts. The main feature of the foyer is a beautiful fountain of imported Italian marble and hand made tiles. Covering the walls of the foyer are panels of contrasting light and dark marble, set between twelve splendid marble columns. There is a complete radio broadcasting room and the Mastbaum is the only theatre in Philadelphia with elevators for patrons. Another feature which is not found in any other theatre in the world will be an elaborate signal system for nshers by which they will be able to tell at a glance which seats are vacant, not only on the ground floor but also in the balcony. There will be continuous performances with exclusive first run showings of the very best photoplays, together with stage presentations and musical programs by a great symphony orchestra. In short, the Masthaum stands as a model of beauty, comfort and efficiency representing the most up to date ideas in theatre construction and no expense has been spared in making it a worthy memorial to Mr. Mastbaum.

The Stanley Company's new Uptown Theatre, at Broad and Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, said to be the finest neighborhood house in the world, will be formally opened on February 16th. The house accommodates 2,500 persons and is equipped with the latest improved devices for both silent and talking pictures. There will be three shows daily, presenting first runs direct from downtown houses. The interior decorations are unique, being East Indian or Cambodian in effect. There is a large modernly equipped stage capable of handling large productions. The organ is one of the largest in the city. The foyer contains a large mural "The Chase," painted by Paul Donville, a young Philadelphia artist, which is pronounced by critics a splendid piece of work.

New Tivoli in Brookfield, Ill., Opened to Large Crowd

The new Tivoli Talkie-Movie Theatre in Brookfield, Ill., which opened last December, has impressed itself on the townsfolk and varied complimentary comments have been offered by them concerning its comfort and coziness. The Downers Grove playhouse is considered by Brookfield to bring Chicago entertainment right to its front door.

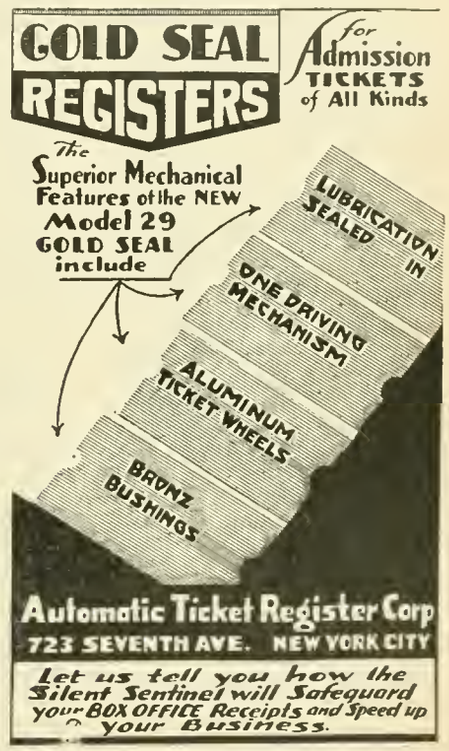
Paramount Plans 4000-Seat $2,000,000 Toledo House

A second motion picture palace of 4,000 seats to cost $2,000,000 is Paramount's promise to Toledo, O. It is to be started this spring, and will be located at the corner of Summit, Lynn and Cherry Streets, The Toledo-Paramount, said to be the finest house in the midwest, is scheduled to open soon. It is announced that officials of the Paramount Publix group have taken a 20-year lease on the property at Summit St., and will build a five-story building. Plans have been prepared by A. F. Graveb and R. Levine and Co., of Chicago, and Stophlet and Stophlet, Toledo architects.

Construction Notes And Theatre Openings

The Grand Theatre, Lake Linden, not far from Calumet, Michigan, was destroyed by fire recently. The large frame building and all the eqnipment were devonred by the flames which caused approximately $40,000 damage part of which was covered by insurance. David Leveeqne, proprietor of the house, was inside the Grand fifteen minutes before the fire was discovered, and saw no trace of fire at the time. The strncture was the property of the Bosche Brewing Co. When leased by Mr. Leveqne the property underwent extensive improvements.

G. W. Crampton, 1023 Sixteenth Street, Moline, Ill., will erect a theatre on Fifth Avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, Moline.



Plainfield, Ill., is to have a new theatre, to cost upwards of $75,000. It will be built on the Lincoln Highway which passes through the heart of the city. J. Gould is the moving spirit in the corporation that will finance the project. The layont of the theatre is in the hands of E. H. Behrens of Chicago.

The Palace theatre, Dallas, Texas, assumed its new name, The Greater Palace, for the first time this past week, which was designated as Grand Opening Week. The Greater Palace has just completed $200-000 worth of added improvements, which include an enlarged lobby, a widened foyer, new backstage equipment, reseating and recarpeting the theatre proper and a large new electric display. The Greater Palace is controlled by Publix.

The Reed, Yemm & Hayes Circuit, with headqnarters in Duquoin, Ill., has purchased a site for a new thertre to be erected at the northeast corner of the public square in Mount Vernon, Ill. The house is to seat 1500 persons and will cost approximately $200,000.

This circuit now has 19 theatres in the following Southern Illinois towns: Benton, Centralia, Mount Vernon, West Frankfort, Marion, Duquoin, Christopher, Sesser and Ziegler.

According to an announcement by Major John Zanft, executor director of the Fox theatre chain, the new Fox house on Grand Boulevard near Washington Boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., was opened on January 31. The three Stanley houses in Troy have slashed advertising space and have done away with all outdoor advertising.

Joseph Saperstein, who recently left Albany to become manager of the new Berinstein house in Ithaca, has just been made manager of all four Berinstein theatres in the college town.

Maryland M.P.T.O. To Hold March Election

A GENERAL election of officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., is to take place next month and J. Louis Rome, president, has informed the association that he does not care to be nominated for that office again. Mr. Rome has appointed a nominating committee including Walter Pacey, chairman; Samuel Bach, Irvin Levin, E. B. McCurdy and Sam Soltz.

A broken ankle was suffered recently by Robert Kanter, proprietor of the Astor Theatre, Baltimore.

Charles E. Farson, 43, director of the orchestra at Keith's Theatre, Baltimore, formerly the New Garden, managed by J. Lawrence Schanberger, died at his home with pneumonia, Tuesday, February 5. He is survived by his widow.

Several changes in the personnel of the Baltimore theatres of Loew's Incorporated, have resulted with the resigning of Irwin Solomon, manager of Loew's Valencia. He has become associated with the Schwartz Circuit on Long Island. H. H. (Mike) Maloney, Jr., formerly assistant manager at the Stanley, will succeed Solomon as manager of the Valencia. Stanley Gosnell, assistant manager of the Valencia will move up to the Stanley as assistant manager. M. Werner, from the Century, will become assistant manager at the Valencia.

The guest organist at the Byrd Theatre, Richmond, Va., is Jean C. Hoffman.

C. S. Langue, who has been manager of Warners' Metropolitan, Baltimore, for sometime, has been succeeded at the Richmond house as manager by Samuel Bendheim, Jr.

Keith's is the new name which has been given the former New Garden Theatre, Baltimore, the home of RKO vaudeville in Baltimore.

Seattle Suburbs Boost Shows for Business

IN an effort to retrieve business apparently lost to the bigger downtown theatres that give tremendous shows for 50c and 60c, the suburban exhibitors in Seattle recently have been featuring double-feature bills to a wide extent.

G. E. Terhune, former exhibitor at Walla Walla some seasons ago has purchased the Empress Theatre at Chewelah, Washington, from D. A. Morgan.

Gossip in theatre circles here has it that John Hamrick will soon reduce admission prices of his Blue Mouse Theatre here from 50c to 35c, as he has done in the Portland territory. The Blue Mouse theatres, since the inauguration of sound films in nearly every first run house and the opening of Hamrick's new Music Box Theatres in Seattle and Portland, have not enjoyed the tremendous business that they did a season or two ago.

R. P. Collins, division sales manager for the Vitaphone Corporation, spent a short time here last week with Manager Carl Stearn of the Warner Brothers exchange.

Many of the exchange managers on Film Row last week drove to Portland to attend the funeral of Jimmy Linn, Fox exchange manager in the Oregon city, who was killed a few days ago in an automobile accident on the Coos Bay Highway.

Frank Airey, showman of Twisp and Winthrop, Washington, announced that he had purchased the equipment of the Liberty Theatre in Twisp and the Evergreen in Winthrop from the Odd Fellows Lodge, and had closed those two opposition houses. He now operates the Twisp Theatres and the Winthrop Theatre only.

Arthur H. Huot, former FBO exchange manager, left this city last week for New York. His successor in Seattle is William Matthews.

Bernard Mulligan, now operating the late George Reisner's Tokay Theatres in South Bend and Raymond, Washington, came into Seattle this week to let contracts for the remodeling and equipping of both theatres. The Tokay in South Bend will be redraped and redecorated, and the Raymond house will have an early April installation of R.C.A. Photophone, besides being redecorated and entirely reseated by the B. F. Shearer Company of Seattle.

San Francisco Report of Regional News

RUSSELL P. COLLINS, in charge of the Vitaphone acts and scores on the Pacific Coast, has returned to San Francisco after a trip through the Northwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Smith's theatre, Yuba City, were recent 'Frisco visitors.

W. R. Cox, M-G-M's office manager, has recovered from the "flu."

Julius Cantwell was married January 28th to Vera Knight.

General Brendell has been promoted to the head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Poster Department.

H. H. Hoffman, from Seattle and Portland, who has been identified with John Danz theatres, is in San Francisco and plans to locate here.

Major E. L. Fulletron, M-G-M's local publicity chief, was in Los Angeles on a trip.

A. Mooser, Warner Brothers auditor, returned to the San Francisco office after a trip to Seattle and Portland.

Claude Van Horn is working for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as San Joaquin Valley salesman.

Russell Ruggles, Columbia's poster clerk, was ill with the "flu" and Chas. Achre is working in his place.

Jack Valpey, who for several years has dealt out posters, cuts and mats in the local M-G-M Exchange, has gone, under "Sheriff" Hickey's supervision, to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sound Studios to be there several months and to acquaint himself with the making of records for sound pictures.

17 Penn Theatres Get Sound Recently

AMONG Pennsylvania theatres that have recently installed sound devices are: Capitol, Shamokin, managed by Ray Leitzel; Majestic, Tamaqua; Olympic, Altoona, which installed the Photophone on February 16, and the following units of the Comerford chain: Capitol, Mauch Chunk; Roosevelt and Poli, Scranton; Irving, Carbondale; Globe, Scranton; Lyric, Honesdale; Sayre Theatre, Sayre; Opera House, Towanda; Victoria, Danville; Holland, Old Forge; Kingston Theatre, Kingston; Grand, Edwardsville; Marino's, Luzerne, and Bijou, Milton.

The City Picture Theatre, Williamsport, closes its doors on February 1, on order of the city authorities because the recent erection of a new bank, on an adjoining site is said to have closed some of the theatre exits.

The Elks Famous Forty chorus, of Pottsville, accepted an invitation to appear as an added attraction at the Earle Theatre, Philadelphia, on February 12.

John Zotkiewicz, formerly manager of the Arcade Theatre, Mount Carmel, has been made manager of the new Imperial Theatre, recently opened in Kulhmont. Mr. Zotkiewicz is one of the owners of the Imperial.

Ross Applegate, manager of the Luna Theatre, Danville, announced on February 6 that the house will hereafter be closed except on Saturdays and holidays. The house was recently acquired by the Comerford chain. The Victoria Theatre, Danville, which recently installed Vitaphone and Movietone apparatus, will hold shows three times a week instead of twice weekly as heretofore. It also is a Comerford house.

The Park Theatre, Palmerton, which had been closed for some time, has reopened under the management of John N. Browell, son of the owner.

Luke Gring, owner-manager of the Capitol and Rosedale theatres, Chambersburg, granted use of the former house to the Chambersburg Thespian Club, on the nights of February 7 and 8.

J. G. Reiff on January 28 formally opened a new theatre which he recently built in Hanover avenue, Allentown.

A charter of incorporation under the laws of Pennsylvania was issued at the Capitol in Harrisburg on February 5 to the Parker Amusement Company of Philadelphia, organized to "operate, manage, and control theatres and places of amusement." The capital stock is $5,000, consisting of fifty shares of a par value of $100 each. The paid-in capital is $500. James J. Newman, Eleventh and Market streets, Philadelphia, is treasurer and one of the incorporators, holding ten shares of stock. The other incorporators are: Milton H. Belber, Broad and Chelten streets, Philadelphia, ten shares, and Albert M. Cohen, 5012 Walnut street, Philadelphia, ten shares.

The Clairton Amusement Company, of Clairton, Pa., organized to "construct, own, lease, sell and conduct amusement houses, theatres and other places of amusement," obtained a Pennsylvania charter of incorporation in Harrisburg on February 5. The capital stock is $5,000, consisting of fifty shares of a par value of $100, with paid-in capital of $500. W. A. Dragoski, 412 Worthington avenue, Clairton, is treasurer and one of the incorporators, owning 24 shares of stock. The other incorporators are: John S. Robb, 207 Catherine street, Duquesne, 24 shares, and Charles P. Lewis, 502 Eighth street, Clairton, 2 shares.

New Edwards Film

Gus Edwards is preparing a two-reel Movietone musical novelty for M-G-M featuring the old time Pierre and Pierrot minstrels. Charles King and Ukulele Ike will be end men, with Edwards acting as interlocutor. A chorus of 200 will be used in the musical.

Hopkins Leaves M-G-M

Robert Hopkins, title and dialogue writer, has left M-G-M after a year with that organization. Option was not exercised on his contract because of the studio's decision to not renew expiring contracts until the talker situation clarifies.

Lebedeff Recovering

Ivan Lebedeff, film actor, is recuperating in Hollywood hospital from serious operation performed to remove a bullet in his spine. The bullet has been carried by Lebedeff since the World War, and recently caused infection.

The "Talkie-Doctor"

The latest wrinkle of motion pictures has been inaugurated by Eugene Walter. He is now established as a "talkie-doctor," and is free-lancing. Walters is one of the best known playwrights in the country and recently left Fox, where he was under contract. He undertakes to fix up dialogue, dramatic situations, effects, stage direction, or entire stories. With such plays as currently running "Jealousy" on Broadway to his credit, Walters is known as one of the most prolific playwrights in the country.

"Conquest of the Alps"

American talent will be used in the making of motion pictures by the Italian government, as is evidenced by the signing of Christy Cabanne, Hollywood director. According to Cabanne, he is to sail for Italy Feb. 17 and film a special production titled "Conquest of the Alps." He says that Premier Mussolini will appear in the action and that the Italian government is to furnish airplanes, two regiments of infantry and one of cavalry for the production.

Roach Plant Reopens

Following a shutdown of almost two months, the Hal Roach Studios are resuming production next week, with "Our Gang" going into work immediately on a hundred-percent talkie. The Laurel-Hardy comedies, the Charley Chase shorts and the Roach "All-Stars" also will be synchronized 100 per cent with dialogue.

Christie-MacLean's Next

Al Christie has secured a farce comedy by Wilson Collison, "Divorce Made Easy," for the next Douglas MacLean picture. It will be an all-dialogue production and MacLean will have Marie Prevost opposite him. Work will probably start the middle of February. The current MacLean picture, "The Carnation Kid," 75 per cent talkie, will be released early in March by Paramount.

Signed for "Broadway Babies"

Sally Eilers, formerly with Mack Sennett, has been signed by First National for "Broadway Babies" starring Alice White. Another graduate of short subjects in the cast of this singing and dancing Vitaphone production is Miriam "Peanuts" Byron, formerly with Hal Roach. Mervyn Le Roy will direct.

Paramount Signs Austin

William Austin, Englishman who has become well known for comedy characterizations, has been signed by Paramount as a featured player. He will have an important part in a forthcoming release "The Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu."

John Russell Joins RKO

The latest literary light to sign with RKO is John Russell, declared by Joseph Conrad "the best short story writer in America." Russell is author of "The Pagan" now in production in Hollywood. William Le Baron plans to have Russell do both originals and story treatments.

Paramount Starts "Victory"

Paramount has finally placed Joseph Conrad's "Victory" into preparation for production. John Farrown is doing the scenario and William Wellman will direct. Tentatively cast are Baclanova, Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur and Zasu Pitts.

Seitz Chosen for "Cape Smoke"

George B. Seitz will direct "Cape Smoke" for Fox. It is based on a play by Walter Archer and Paul Dickie on the psychology of fear, incorporating voodooism and sorcery in its theme. New Guinea is the locale.

Del Ruth Renews Contract

Warner Brothers have renewed contract of Roy Del Ruth, director for the ensuing year. Del Ruth has directed a number of Vitaphone features during the past year.

Anthony Joins Warners

Walter Anthony, title writer under contract for the past five years to Universal, goes over to Warners studio next week on a long-term contract as writer of titles and dialogue.

Ziegfeld Chorus in Trailer

Arch Heath, in charge of sound production for Universal, returned from New York with Movietoned scenes of Ziegfeld's chorus in the stage musical "Show Boat." The Ziegfeld chorus plug will be used as part of the sound trailer for the film production of "Show Boat" now being completed by Universal.

Remake "Twin Beds" as Talkie

The latest addition to the list of former silent productions to be remade as all-talkies is "Twin Beds" by First National. It was originally produced some years ago with Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven in the silent version. Al Santell will direct the new dialogued adaptation and production will be started in March.

A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your "talkie" prints are on Eastman film—famous for uniformity —your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

have you protected your sound installation?

You paid a lot of money to put sound-reproducing equipment in your theatres. You expect to get this money back and reap a handsome profit besides. You count on doing this through the box-office returns on talking pictures. ¶ Playing mediocre talking pictures won't do it. The novelty of sound has worn off. Booking the product of a company with one or two outstanding talking attractions is no protection to you; you didn't install that expensive apparatus to use for three or four weeks. No, you have only one surefire insurance for your investment: Deal with a company that guarantees you a continuous flow of quality talking pictures week after week. ¶ And that narrows your choice down to one company: PARAMOUNT.

Survey all the sound pictures in the field and the prospect for months to come. Look at the facts: PARAMOUNT, with current attractions like "Interference", "The Doctor's Secret", "The Wolf of Wall Street", "Abie's Irish Rose", "The Shopworn Angel" and "The Canary Murder Case" is the one producer whose sound and talking pictures are doing consistently great box-office business today. PARAMOUNT, with 23 big quality talking pictures coming between now and August, alone supplies your vital need of consistently fine sound product for the coming months. ¶ For instance:

"WOLF SONG"

tacular screen musical romance. With Gary Cooper, Lupe Velez and Louis Wolheim. Five big song hits, including the already nationally popular "Yo Te Amo". Victor Fleming Prod. Opening at $2, Feb. 23rd on Broadway at the Embassy Theatre.

"REDSKIN"

DIX. Sound and beautiful Technicolor. Doing capacity business as $2 attraction at the Criterion Theatre, New York. Victor Schertzinger Production.

"THE LETTER"

JEANNE EAGELS. The dramatic all-talking thunderbolt! Star and author of "Rain" re-united! Opening soon on Broadway at $2. Directed by Jean de Limur.

"THE WILD PARTY"

Starring CLARA BOW. They'll hear as well as see "It" in an all-talking clean-up! By the author of "Flaming Youth". Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Another Clara Bow all-talker coming in June.

"CLOSE HARMONY"

Paramount's big talking, singing, dancing Jazz Revue. With Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Nancy Carroll, Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher and Hollywood's most gorgeous girls. Directed by John Cromwell and A. Edward Sutherland.

"THE DUMMY"

Melodramatic all-talking comedy hit. Great all-star cast. Directed by John Milton.

"CHINATOWN NIGHTS"

("TONG WAR") The thrilling all-talking drama of white women in Chinatown with Wallace Beery and Florence Vidor. Directed by William Wellman.

"THE CARNATION KID"

Starring DOUGLAS MacLEAN. MacLean does sensational come-back in all-talker produced by Al Christie. Pre-viewed and pronounced a knockout. Directed by E. Wallace Hopper. MacLean also in "DIVORCE MADE EASY", released in July.

"INNOCENTS OF PARIS"

Starring MAURICE CHEVALIER, idol of France and now entrancing New Yorkers as headliner of Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic. All-talking, all-singing super-special. Directed by Richard Wallace, who made "The Shopworn Angel".

"THE HOLE IN THE WALL"

Other mystery spine-tinglers pale beside this all-talking smash! With the stage stars, Claudette Colbert and Edward G. Robinson. Directed by Robert Florey.

LEADER · SOUND AND SILENT · Paramount Pictures

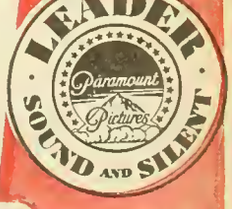
"NIGHT CLUB" "PUSHER-IN-THE-FACE" and "THE BISHOP'S CANDLESTICKS" Three all-talking gems in one big show! With such stars as Fannie Brice, Ann Pennington, Raymond Hitchcock, Frances Williams, Walter Huston and others.

"GENTLEMEN of the PRESS" From the New York stage success. With Walter Huston and all-star cast. All-talking. The most gripping drama yet seen or heard. Directed by Millard Webb.

"NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH" Starring RICHARD DIX. They'll see and hear a new Dix in this all-talking production of the well known stage hit. With Helen Kane, musical comedy star singing, Louis John Bartels and big cast. Victor Schertzinger Production. Dix also coming in all-dialog version of the famous stage success. "THE WHEEL OF LIFE". With Florence Vidor, O. P. Heggie and others.

"THE WOMAN WHO NEEDED KILLING" The fiery Baclanova as a temptress, Clive Brook, Neil Hamilton and Clyde Cook. All-talking. Directed by Rowland V. Lee, who made "The Wolf of Wall Street".

"THE MAN I LOVE" The all-talking sporting special with Richard Arlen, Mary Brian and Baclanova. Directed by William Wellman.

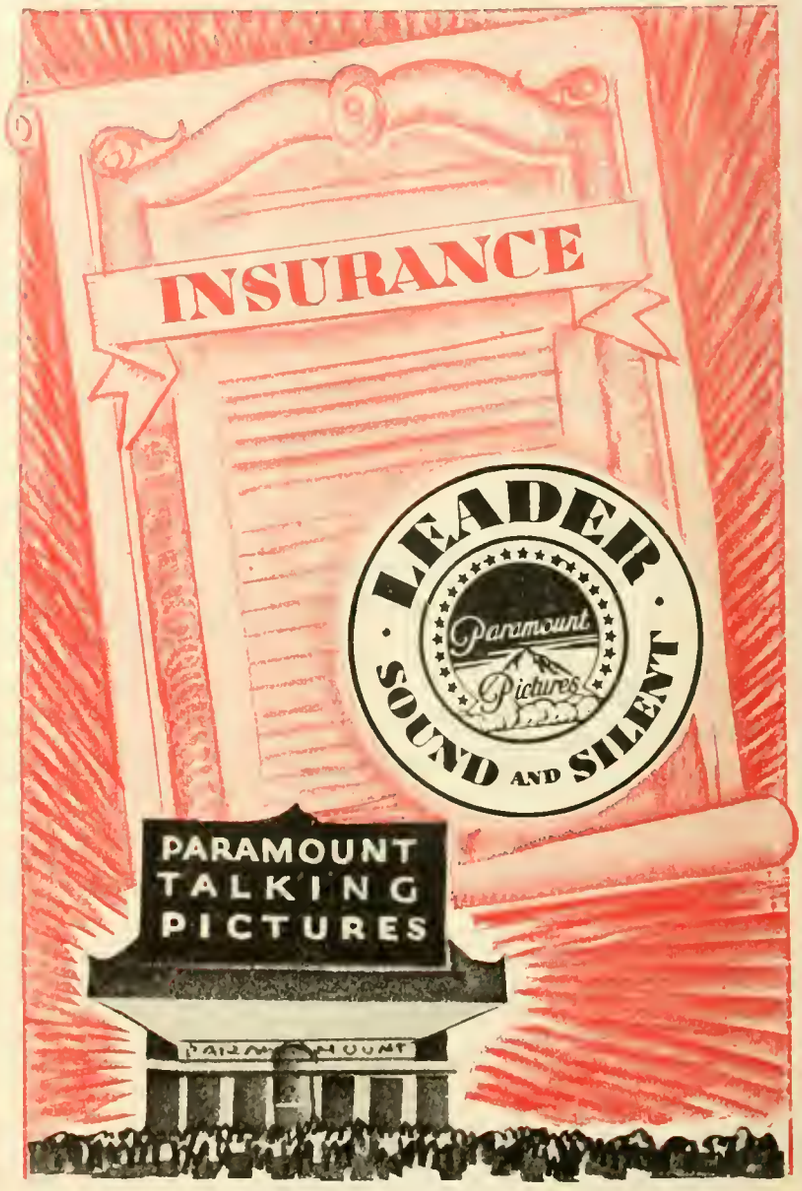


"THE STUDIO MURDER MYSTERY" A star is mysteriously murdered on a studio set. From the great Photoplay Magazine serial. All-talking, with Warner Oland, Neil Hamilton and Chester Conklin.

"BETRAYAL" Starring EMIL JANNINGS. With Gary Cooper and Esther Ralston. With magnificent music score. Lewis Milestone Production.

"YOUNG SINNERS" (tent. title) Starring CHARLES "Buddy" ROGERS. America's Boy Friend. All-talker directed by Dorothy Arzner.

"THUNDERBOLT" (tent. title) Starring GEORGE BANCROFT. With Richard Arlen and Fay Wray. A mighty drama directed by Josef von Sternberg. First all-talker made by the man responsible for the immortal "Underworld"!



ADOLPHE MENJOU A revelation in his first all-talking picture. Directed by George Abbott, co-author and stage director of "Broadway". Title and other details to be announced later.

In short talking and sound subjects also, PARAMOUNT has the class of the market. 35 Quality Sound Acts such as the already celebrated "That Party in Person", starring Eddie Cantor, which has played three months continuously on Broadway. To be followed by Eddie Cantor in "The Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic". 13 Christie Talking Plays, including the famous "Florian Slappey" stories of Octavus Roy Cohen. 6 Famous Composers musical shorts. (Ask your orchestra leader.) 5 Song Cartoons, novelties which let the audience sing too! HAVE YOU EVER READ SUCH TRIBUTES TO ANY SHORT PRODUCT BEFORE?

Just played Laurel-Hardy comedy and wish to state M-G-M deserves great praise in making comedies of this calibre. We had a big feature on bill and truthfully cannot say which was biggest draw.

THE AMAZING SUCCESS OF M-G-M SHORT SUBJECTS!

The way many theatres are building additional business is by putting more laughs into the show in conjunction with their dramatic features. The widespread adoption of this policy has resulted in a demand for Quality and Name Value in short subjects which only Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is able to supply. The emphasis which M-G-M has placed on Feature Quality in its Shorts has won over thousands of exhibitors who realize the box-office stimulus of good Short product. There has been built up by this means a public recognition that M-G-M has the best of all Shorts. We can guarantee the permanence of this public recognition by assuring exhibitors that M-G-M Quality leadership in its Shorts, as in its Features, will be scrupulously maintained.

HAL ROACH-VICTOR TIE-UP!

Now They Will HEAR as well as SEE the great Hal Roach Stars!

Hear for yourself how the tremendous added entertainment value of Sound and Effects now makes "Our Gang" Laurel-Hardy and Charlie Chase comedies more enjoyable than ever. And with new big Sound Stages already completed at the Hal Roach Studios following the tie-up with the Victor Company exhibitors are assured the best Sound and Talking comedies available in the Short Subject field.

HAL ROACH'S "OUR GANG"

"Long may they flourish," says Film Daily in its review of "The Spanking Age" which it terms "excellent and another of the delights which Hal Roach is turning out to keep the American public light-hearted." "Our Gang" on your program adds 100 per cent to your drawing power. In "The Ol' Gray Hoss," "Wiggle Your Ears," "Noisy Noises," "The Holy Terror" and "Fast Freight" you get "Our Gang" with Sound!

LAUREL-HARDY

Absolutely sensational. The public has learned that Laurel-Hardy comedies are consistently uproarious. One laugh hit after another, "Two Tars," "Habeas Corpus," "We Faw Down," "Liberty," "Wrong Again" are just a few of many joy treats. Laurel-Hardy comedies now with Sound!

CHARLIE CHASE

Charlie Chase in "Off to Buffalo" will rock your house with laughs. His comedies are sure-fire, "Ruby Lips," "Loud Soup," "Thin Twins" and "Movie Night" are great. Chase the blues with Charlie! Plus Sound!

HAL ROACH'S ALL-STARS

Something new in laughs. When Hal Roach, king of comedy producers, makes them they're the best to be obtained!

M-G-M GREAT EVENTS

"Worthy of featuring on the finest programs in the best theatres," says Weekly Film Review. Not alone beautiful because of Technicolor but thrilling drama! "Manchu Love" is the latest and another Great Events achievement.

M-G-M UFA ODDITIES

The only short subjects of their kind to merit critical attention of press. Reviewers and public agree these world-wide UFA gems the most intensely interesting novelties on the market.

M-G-M NEWS

The one newsreel that consistently gets the News! Backed by the Hearst globe-girdling news resources. It has built up an ever-growing patronage!

METRO MOVIE-TONE ACTS

Twenty-six new Metro Movietone Acts are being released during the first three months of 1929, at the rate of two each week. The success of the first twenty-six has been such as to make the demand for Metro Movietone Acts greatest in its field. The popularity of these subjects results from M-G-M's strategic position in being able to present the better known variety stars and giving them a superior production in quality and showmanship handling. Theatres now equipped with Sound are aware of M-G-M's supremacy in Movietone Acts. Those houses planning to equip for Sound should guarantee the safety of their investments with Metro-Movietone Acts.

Dear Mr. Garland:-

I fully expect my patrons at the State Theatre to back up my judgment that "TOMMY ATKINS" and "HONEYMOON ABROAD" are two worth while productions.

I am convinced that a hearty welcome awaits the entrance of World Wide Pictures in the distribution field. I have always been an advocate of "the internationalization of the screen"(with apologies to "Jaydee" Williams). Our people like variety - in fact, it is the life of the entertainment business - and they like the truth. I believe World Wide will give them both.

There is nothing too good for the State Theatre and, therefore, I expect to do a lot of business with you.

Announcing Another Important Service for Exhibitor Readers

By William A. Johnston

ANOTHER new service department for exhibitors begins in this issue: Showmen's Ad. Tips.

This is an extension of the service we initiated last week with the publication of the Weekly Box Office Check-Up, which has already met with instantaneous and gratifying response. The percentage plan of reporting on the business actually done at important theatres throughout the country is now supplemented by information from exhibitors themselves on how the picture was sold to the public. These reports are, in reality, the experiences of theatre men in the actual advertising and handling of pictures, and should, we believe, prove invaluable to their fellow-showmen.

Exploitation, in this industry, is a much-abused term. The word itself has come to be a bromide, because it has been employed to cover almost everything that has to do with many angles of the business. Also, there has been a good deal of imaginary exploitation, in which the exhibitor, in advance, has been counseled to perform impossible feats in selling the picture to the public.

This sort of material is, of course, a waste of everybody's time. A practical idea, by whomever devised, is always welcomed by the theatre man. But he is the final judge; and the means he actually employs to attract the public to his house are vital information and should be given careful attention by the trade paper.

Therefore, we have gone to exhibitors themselves for their firing line experiences, and are assembling them, beginning this week, as Showmen's Ad. Tips. The material is presented in convenient form under the titles of pictures, making it a ready reference for other showmen on what to do to make their bookings of the greatest possible interest to the public and profit to themselves.

Taken in conjunction with the Weekly Box Office Check-Up, this service offers not only the commercial rating of the feature, but also its advertising rating as regards the public.

As in the case of the Check-Up, months of expensive organization work were necessary to make sure that this information is comprehensive and accurate. But this effort is more than compensated by our knowledge that the additional service cannot fail to prove invaluable to our exhibitor readers.

Speaking Editorially

The Suburbans and Sound

A SERIOUS situation is confronting the smaller theatre as a result of the sound revolution. In many localities its existence is jeopardized; and this observation applies equally to theatres in suburbs of big cities and in villages within a reasonable distance of trading centers.

In the former case, the neighborhoods are not able to compete with sound houses downtown. This comes about for several reasons, the most important being, apparently, that patronage which went to the neighborhoods in the silent era now passes them up, to a considerable extent, for the sound equipped and larger theatres in downtown sections.

In and around Cleveland, for example, fourteen theatres have recently closed permanently or temporarily shut their doors. They are unable to meet the downtown competition.

Unquestionably, a big factor in the situation is the inability of the smaller theatre to obtain sound equipment—financial inability or because of the slowness of installations. Meanwhile, the public is keen about sound. So the heavier patronage goes to the theatres which are in a position to handle the latest phase of picture entertainment, namely, sound, and, particularly, talkies.

The little exhibitor, who has already been through many vicissitudes, is thus being faced with a new danger, perhaps the most serious in his career.

It is not for want of ability or experience, in many cases, that the smaller theatres are closing up. Some of the oldest exhibitors are feeling the sting of the new sound era, and are unable to continue. In the Middle West, especially, the situation appears to be most critical. And what the end will be, nobody can foretell.

It is clear, however, that, unless there is a radical reaction in public taste toward sound, many of these smaller houses are doomed. And the reason may be assigned, broadly, to two things: good roads, now becoming universal throughout the country and enabling the villager to drive on to the larger trading center for his entertainment; and the sound era, which has caught on with the public to such an extent, that the wholly silent house is facing a fight for existence.

In order to determine just how widespread the condition is, Motion Picture News is conducting a first hand survey, country-wide. We shall state the facts as we find them. But investigation has already gone far enough to show that the small, isolated theater is, generally speaking, in serious danger.

Yet there is, and will continue to be, a steady and emphatic demand for silent pictures. And the producing powers of the industry will make a serious mistake if they do not recognize this fact and prepare for it accordingly in laying out their studio schedules for the next season.

Condemning Sound Censorship

A STRONG pronouncement against attempts to censor dialogue pictures has been made by Mrs. Newton D. Chapman, chairman on better films for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This is especially timely in view of the Pathe fight against the New York State Censor Board, and introduction of measures in several legislatures which would, if passed, establish political inquisition over the screen.

Mrs. Chapman, as quoted in the Boston Transcript, declared:

"We are, of course, deeply interested in this effort to censor speech because it is directly opposed to the program and belief of the society which believes that selection and not censorship is conducive to the best results.

"This is, so far as I know, the first effort ever made in this country to muzzle free speech. Personally I do not see any distinction between censoring words spoken in connection with a film and words spoken on a stage. As a matter of fact, even political, educational and religious topics used as dialogue in connection with films would be subjected to censorship if this un-American practice is allowed."

This expression from a leader of a great national organization, with members throughout the country, is in line with similar views of leaders in other fields, which have been printed recently in this paper.

Erpi Announces Cut In Service Charge To Exhibs

New Schedules Will Apply According To Time Of Installation

Exhibitors whose houses are equipped with the Western Electric sound reproducing device received a letter this week from C. W. Bunn, general sales manager of Electrical Research Products, announcing a reduction in service charge schedules.

In announcing these reductions the Bunn letter says, in part:

"Schedule 'A,' our present standard service charges, will apply during the first six months after the completion of an installation. At the end of that period the charges will be substantially reduced to conform with Schedule 'B,' and will apply during the second six months of operation. The charges will again be reduced substantially after one year to conform with Schedule 'C.'

"Service charges to theatres whose installations have been in operation for six months or one year as of the week ending February 23. will be reduced to the corresponding schedule from and after that date.

"In the case of theatres on the weekly payment plan the weekly payment will be adjusted to give effect to the new schedule of service charges. Every theatre will be notified when its reductions become effective.

William Russell Dead On Coast; Pneumonia Victim

William Russell, veteran screen actor, passed away in a Los Angeles hospital during the week, a victim of pneumonia. He was 42 years old. His wife, Helen Ferguson, rushed to Los Angeles from San Francisco, but arrived there after he had passed away.

Russell was born in New York City in 1887. For many years he appeared under the Fox banner. For several years past he has been free-lancing, and in the past year he appeared in "Woman Wise," "The Escape," "Danger Patrol," "State Street Sadie," and "The Midnight Taxi."

Girl Cashier's Quick Action Foils Attempted Robbery

Presence of mind of the cashier, Jeanette McGarrity, saved the Capitol Theatre, Portland, Ore., from being robbed of the day's receipts. A bandit walked to the cashier's cage, leveled a gun and told her to hand over the cash.

Two employes of the theatre happened to be at the main door, one going off duty and one just going in. The cashier shouted to them and the robber, frightened, dashed away, minus the money, which would have been a nice Valentine.

Small Theatres In Danger As Sound Houses Get Trade; Many Already Close Doors

Delay In Equipments And Too High Prices Feared As Insurmountable By Suburban Owners

THE installation of sound equipment in some houses and not in others is playing havoc with those who have not yet been fortunate enough to secure the equipment and the result foreseen in many districts is the closing down of a large number of houses. In fact many of them have already closed their doors because they could not meet the competition of the talkies.

From different sections of the country comes word that many of the theatres have not yet been able to have their orders fulfilled, while others, particularly among the suburban houses cannot afford the installation of sound reproducing devices and fear they will have to close down entirely.

Of more than passing significance is the fact that fourteen motion picture theatres in Cleveland and in the northern Ohio territory are either closed permanently, closed temporarily, or running part time, in what is considered the heydey of the theatrical season. And the question has been raised, if so many houses cannot live through the winter, what is going to happen in the summer?

Within the past week, eight Cleveland houses are reported closed, namely the Tivoli, Kinsman, Lakewood (closing Feb. 28)—Crown, Manhattan, Cozy, Home and Castle. Two are operating two or three days a week, the King and the Penn Square. In the territory the Gem, Barberton, and the Strand, Ravenna are closed permanently, while the list of houses closed temporarily include the Electric, Irondale; Luna, Prairie Depot; Dreamland, Cardington; Ideal, Alliance; Cameo, Brilliant; Stringer, Hopedale.

Dialogue and sound pictures at the larger first run downtown theatres in Albany and Schenectady, N. Y., are playing havoc with the bnsiness of the suburban houses unequipped for such pictnres. The situation in Schenectady is particularly acute and may force some of the houses to either close or spend comparatively large snms for equipment to meet the competition of the larger houses.

Morris Silverman, one of the pioneer exhibitors in Schenectady and the owner of a particularly fine residential theatre, declared last week that his business had slumped at least 25 per cent since three of the large downtown theatres had been

Paramount Has Record Year In '28 Net Profits

$8,700,000 Earnings Surpass Previous Banner Year During 1927

Estimated net profits of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation after depreciation and taxes for the year ending December 29, 1928, including its 65 per cent undistributed share of earnings of Balaban & Katz, are placed at $8,700,000, as against $8,050,000 in 1927. This is an increase of 8 per cent and breaks the record that was established for earnings in 1927.

The net profit for the year 1928 is equal to $4.22 per share on the common stock entitled to dividend on December 29, 1928. The profits for the fourth quarter are estimated at $2,725,000.00, a new record for the fourth quarter of any year, the prior record having been the fourth quarter of 1924, when profits were $2,500,000.00. The profits for the fourth quarter of $2,725,000.00 are equal to $1.32 per share on the common stock entitled to dividend on December 29, 1928. Comparative figures follow:

4th Quarter	1926	1927	1928
Earnings	$1,960,000	$2,400,000	$2,725,000
Year Earnings..	5,600,000	8,050,000	8,700,000

Schine Deal With Fox Off; Now Dickering With Warners

The deal on the part of William Fox for the Schine Theatres in upper New York State was definitely declared off last week. The circuit is now negotiating a new deal with the Warner Brothers to take over the houses as an up-state link for the Stanley-Mark Strand chain.

Four Minutes "Time" Now Good Day Of Shooting

Footage In Daily Schedule For Talkers No Longer Is Considered

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—Shooting "time" instead of "footage" is the new studio practice with the advent of sound and dialogue pictures. Where silent pictures are made, footage is a major consideration in the daily schedules but production of sound pictures place completed "time" as the important factor in a day's shooting.

In laying out the shooting schedule of a talker, the studio production executives figure that a director is doing exceptionally well if he is able to get a total of four minutes "time" every day. This would bring the schedule within a twenty-day period of shooting, which seems to be about the general time needed to complete a talker; without later retakes.

From a check up of various dialogue pictures in production it is safe to say that the general run of directors are able to average the four minutes total of satisfactory recording and filming per shooting day. The four minutes may be broken up into ten scenes or more.

Of course, there are instances where the four minute a day does not hold true. In the case of "The Ghost Talks" on the Fox lot there was a lot of time spent in experimenting because this was the first picture

Publix Reported After U. A. House In L. A.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21. — Paramount, via Publix, is reported in negotiation with United Artists for the operation of the United Artists' Theatre in Los Angeles. Publix has only one house in this city, being the Paramount and West Coast operates two downtown, in addition to three in the mid-section of the city. The United Artists' house has been a white elephant mainly because of the quality of pictures booked into the house. Hal Horne, its present manager, has cut the overhead to a minimum and has made the house pay on exceedingly small grosses. Under his management the house has done better business than it did since opening.

Paramount has been booking all of its best product into the one theatre and feels it has a sufficient number of good attractions to make two houses pay.

Hoffman Sells His Holdings In Tiffany-Stahl

Move Seen As Forerunner of Expansion Plan By President L. A. Young

M. H. Hoffman has sold his interests in Tiffany-Stahl Productions, of which company he has been vice-president and general manager for some time, to L. A. Young, president of Tiffany-Stahl. This move by Mr. Young in purchasing Mr. Hoffman's interests in the company are regarded in the trade as being the forerunner of an extensive program of expansion that the motion picture firm is contemplating. The deal was closed in Los Angeles last week, the transaction having been handled by Grant L. Cook, secretary and treasurer of Tiffany-Stahl, and Mr. Young. Negotiations had been planning for some time. The actual amount paid for Mr. Hoffman's stock was not revealed. No indications have been given at this time as to whether other changes are planned.

In his statement Mr. Hoffman said: "I am not leaving the company immediately. I have gladly agreed to remain until it will be convenient for all parties for me to leave. I don't intend to retire. I feel too young and too active and have too many friends in the business to neglect or be neglected by. My plans, to state them now, would hardly be fair while I am with the company—but you will know them soon enough and I dare say you will find them quite interesting. I intend to take a vacation."

Home Rule Bill On Sunday Shows Ready For Ohio

Other States Will Refer Proposition Directly To Local Voters

Sunday openings of motion picture houses are being put to a vote in many cities and towns and the residents therefor will have a direct say as to whether they want their movies on the Sabbath. Home rule on Sunday is advocated in a bill introduced into the Ohio legislature at Columbus. Senator L. L. Marshall is its sponsor.

This measure provides for legalizing of Sunday pictures in any village or city upon vote of 51 per cent of the voters. It would also compel any city or village to submit the question to popular vote upon petition of five per cent of the voters. Pictures may be shown only after 1 P. M. however. Present Sunday laws forbid the showing of any motion picture within the state at any time on Sunday. In some cities however, showings are conducted in violation of the law.

Kendallville, Ind.—At a special election, the expense being borne by the theatre interests of Kendallville, Ind., to ascertain the sentiments of the city on the question of permitting motion pictures on Sunday, the vote was more than two to one in favor of shows. The vote was 1,251 yes and 540 nays.

Publix Wins Dispute Over W. B. Contracts In San Antonio, Tex.

Litigation which prevented the showing of "The Jazz Singer," "The Singing Fool" and other Warner Bros. Vitaphone specials in San Antonio, Tex., in the past year, has been settled. The litigation involved a contract with Warner Brothers, the Texas Supreme Court holding in favor of W. J. Lytle, director general of the local Publix Theatres. The Aztec Theatre management claimed a prior contract.

"The Singing Fool" will have an early showing at the Texas Theatre while "The Jazz Singer" will show at the Empire Theatre, both Publix houses.

Ann Arbor Arcade Burns Down Second Time in 2 Mos.

For the second time in just a few days over two months the Arcade Theatre in Ann Arbor, Mich., was destroyed by fire last Saturday. On December 16 the 1,300 seat house was completely gutted. The first week of February the work of rebuilding was completed. Then just two months to a day after the first fire the work of destruction was again under way. An overloaded electric line was responsible for the first blaze. The second originated from an overheated flue.

Poor Stills Are Held To Retard Local Publicity

Newspaper Editors Declare Best Of Photos Are Withheld For N. Y.

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—Exhibitors throughout the country are handicapped in securing publicity in local papers because of poor still photos distributed to local exchanges from New York home offices. This information is vouchsafed by the major portion of twenty-five daily paper film editors who were Mary Pickford's guests in Hollywood. The twenty-five, representing that many different dailies in as many different key cities, were in Hollywood in conjunction with the twenty-five "most deserving girls."

Many of the editors made individual trips to studio publicity departments and registered the complaints regarding stills to the West Coast publicity directors. The Western press agents explained that they were powerless in the distribution of stills throughout the country as they are sent to New York and from there sent to local exchanges.

Complaints Made

Most of the complaints were not directed so much against the quality of stills made in general, but the type permitted to be released for daily paper use. One editor pointed out that she saw many stills in fan magazines which she wanted to use. On asking the local exchange for reproductions of any such particular still, she was told it was held "exclusive" in New York. She could not see any reason for stills being held "exclusive" even after publication in magazines, when she was willing to use it.

Several editors were shown copies of stills on pictures which were sent to New York for distribution. They picked out many as examples of good stills which were never available to them from key city exchanges. As a result, the Western p.a.'s are taking up the complaints with production heads here to be brought to the attention of New York.

Columbia, M-G-M Plan Productions Of "Redemption"

Both Columbia Pictures and M-G-M have completed plans for the production of "Redemption" and there will probably be a race between the companies to bring it to the screen.

Some months ago Columbia announced the acquisition of the story by Count Leo Tolstoi as one of the company specials for the 1928-29 program. M-G-M announces the acquisition of the rights to the stage play of the same name from Arthur Hopkins to serve as a vehicle for John Gilbert, with Fred Niblo at the megaphone. Columbia starts production this week with Frank R. Capra directing.

Morris Plan In Agreement With General Electric, Will Finance Sales Of Projectors

System Provides Individual And Dealer Loans On Equipment Made By G. E. Company

MORRIS PLAN banks throughout the country are going in for the financing of individuals and dealers on both home projection motion picture machines and equipment to be installed in theatres.

Under a contract entered into between the Industrial Finance Corporation, parent organization of the Morris Plan Corporation of America, the Industrial Acceptance Corporation and the General Contract Purchase Company, on the one hand, and the General Electric Company, on the other, the investment and banking institutions through a liberal system of credit extension and trade acceptance will figure widely in the distribution of the various products of the General Electric Company.

Plan For Exhibitors

Contemplated in the plan of operation is the disposal of RCA Photophone home projtion machines from which may be projected both sound and silent pictures. While not a part of the contract with General Electric, Morris Plan executives also express a willingness to aid exhibitors in making their down payments on sound equipment in theatres, providing they comply with the regular system under which Morris Plan operates and secure two suitable co-makers.

Limitations in the amount of money the Morris Plan Company can lend to individuals prohibits the company advancing the full amount of the original down payments to the exhibitor, but the company, under satisfactory conditions, may advance one-half of the payments under the co-maker plan, where the one-half is not in excess of the amount they are permitted under the law to lend in the different states. And this amount varies considerably in different states.

Under the terms of a regular Morris Plan contract the full amount of interest charged (usually 6 per cent and an additional 2 per cent as a service charge) is deducted from the amount of the loan when it is made. The payment system is on a monthly basis extending over the period of a year until the full amount is paid. As an example, on a loan of $200 a deduction of $16 is made and the borrower

Talkies To Kill Opera, Says Mary Garden

"TALKIES" will kill grand opera within the next ten years, Mary Garden, in Columbus, Ohio, on tour with the Chicago Opera Company, declared.

Radio broadcasting only serves to increase interest in grand opera, the famous soprano said. Motion picture recording, however, can give the opera fan so much more for so much less admission cost that it is certain to supplant grand opera as sung today.

Recording of voice is not yet synchronized perfectly enough to compete with opera on an elaborate scale of production, but it is rapidly approaching such perfection, she said. Within the next ten years all the popular operas will be recorded by the movies, probably in color as well as sound, and the massive productions now given by the Chicago, Metropolitan, and other companies will disappear.

U. S. Findings On Interchangeability Not Yet Complete

Several Investigators Are Reported Inquiring Into Matter

(Washington Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Washington, February 20.—Investigators of the Department of Justice who are studying the sound interchangeability situation are still in the field, it was said today by officials of the Department. No reports as to their findings have as yet been received.

It is indicated that the study of the interchangeability situation is receiving considerable attention and that several men have been detailed to inquire into the matter.

How extensive these surveys might be could not be learned at the Department, but it was intimated that the case was sufficiently interesting to merit a comprehensive inquiry.

Akron T. O. Assoc. Invites Geo. Merz To Address Them

The Akron Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association at their last meeting held at Akron, O., invited George Merz, head of the Akron Industrial Foundation, to address its session. Florida Exhibitor Defeats Closing Menace By A Daring Fight For Sound And Sunday

D. V. Marquis of Bartow, Fla., Stages Special Election, Rushes Sound Order and Gets Both

JUST what the fighting attitude can accomplish on the part of a small town exhibitor is exemplified by D. V. Marquis, owner and manager of the Ernada Theatre of Barstow, Florida. Handicapped by a ban on Sunday movies in his town when the adjoining towns were privileged to open on Sundays, and further handicapped by lack of sound reproducing equipment when the same adjoining towns also had that, Marquis set out to overcome these obstacles and was successful in doing so.

Bartow is not as large a city as Tampa, and Lakeland has been offering the keenest sort of competition along with Tampa. So Marquis set out to rectify things when it looked as though his local enterprise was just about sunk. He had considerable money invested in his movie theatre, and he did not intend to see it swept away just because conditions were against him.

For a long time Marquis has been making a fight for Sunday pictures in his town. Early this month he went before the Bartow City Commission, and asked that body to revise the charter so that Sunday shows might be allowed. He followed that appeal with a petition which in a half day had over two hundred signers. Through that petition he urged the calling of a special election at which the proposition could be submitted to the local citizens.

Bartow is an up-and-coming community. They like their pictures down there, and they are not even averse to having them on Sundays, as was shown when the results of this election were flashed this week. Bartow voted for Sunday movies. The battle was a bitter one, but Marquis has been an exhibitor there for many years and about everyone in Bartow is his friend, even those who voted for six days of amusement. At any rate, two votes were filed for Sunday shows against every one filed against them.

With conditions as they were, without Sunday pictures Marquis felt that synchronized films were a bit over his head. Equipment is expensive, as is the maintenance of same. The people of Bartow like their pictures and they like 'em up-to-date. Tampa and Lakeland both have sound movies, and Tampa and Lakeland have been getting a good deal of the play away from Bartow. They may still continue to get some of that play for a short time, but it won't be long now, from all advices.

Marquis is a fighter, and he had confidence that the people of Bartow were behind him, so he anticipated election results, and he placed his order for a sound reproducing device for his theatre. He explained conditions and he has been promised an early delivery. He expects to be showing the latest sound films within the next few weeks at the Ernada, and when he does he expects to more than make up for the losses he has suffered while he has been making the desperate fight that brought him the results desired.

equipped for sound and dialogue pictures. Mr. Silverman declared that he is losing at the rate of $200 on the first four days of the week, and that while January last year was one of the best months of the year, the same month this year had been one of the worst of the winter.

In an exception to the rule exhibitors, both downtown first run and suburban, in the Kansas City district deny that talking and sound pictures have caused a decrease in the business of the small suburban houses, although an increase in downtown patronage readily is admitted.

The situation in Kansas City is this: Virtually all of the larger suburban theatres are equipped for sound pictures, while the small outlying houses have a 10, 15 and 20-cent clientele that is not disturbed by the 60-cent admission of the larger downtown houses with sound and talking pictures or the 35 and 40-cent admission of the larger suburban houses showing second run pictures.

Schmeling On Vitaphone

Max Schmeling, German heavyweight sensation in the ranks of the pugilists last week completed a Vitaphone talkie at Warner Bros. studio in Brooklyn.

All Christies Talkies Are Recorded on Film

THE Christie talkies to be released by Paramount during the coming season will be recorded on film. When the Christie sound studios first began to operate some months ago the sound-on-film method was decided upon. All of the talkies are being made on two films, one for the camera shots and the other for the sound track, this method having been determined upon by the Christies as best for achieving tone and photographic accuracy. All cutting is being done on separate picture film and sound track film and when the pictures are finally edited double printing of the picture and sound track is done so that all release prints are on one film.

M-G-M Lining Up Talent For "Minstrel Show"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is lining up a strong array of talent for the "Minstrel Show" production. Among those already engaged are Charles King, Cliff Edwards (Ukulele Ike), Bessie Love, Gus Edwards, Marion Harris, the three Brock Sisters and an Albertina Rasch ballet. Other possibities are Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel for prominent parts.

Sammy Lee, who stages dances for many of the New York revues, has signed a long-term contract and is staging the dances. Al Boasburg and Ralph Spence are doing the lyrics and dialogue, and Gus Edwards is directing.

Darmour Acquires Cal-Art Property On West Coast

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—Larry Darmour, president of the Darmour Productions, has taken over the entire physical property of the Cal-Art Studios which are to be renamed the Darmour Studios. For the past two years Darmour has been leasing the plant for the production of his RKO shorts. Prior to Darmour's occupancy, the studios leased space and stages to independents.

The new name goes over the studio this week and work on thoroughly equipping it with RCA Photophone system will be started March 15th. Beginning then, the major portion of Darmour's product will be synchronized. His pictures will be directed by Ralph Cedar and Al Herman.

Proceeds Of Plaza Shows Will Go To Old Employees

The net proceeds of the last five days, February 24 to 28, inclusive, that the Plaza Theatre, in New York, will operate before being torn down to give away to a modern business structure, will be devoted to a benefit fund for veteran employees of the house. Many of them, including Milton H. Chamberlain, house manager, have been in the theatre's service virtually since it opened.

Film Production Cost $134,343,360 For Year Of 1927

Theatrical Films Run To $92,593,732, Census Bureau Reports

A total of $134,343,360 was expended in 1927 by 142 studios and laboratories in the production of motion picture films, according to preliminary figures just compiled by the United States Census Bureau. This was an increase of 43.5 per cent over the $93,636,348 reported by 132 establishments in 1925. The greater part of the 1927 expenditures, of course, was for the production of theatrical films, 1,347 being produced at a cost of $92,593,732. Comparable data for theatrical films, 1,347 being produced at a cost of $92,593,732. Comparable data for theatrical films for 1925 were not taken by the bureau.

While the number of establishments increased 7.6 per cent from 1925 to 1927, the number of salaried officers and employees increased 27.8 per cent, from 5,945 to 7,598, and the average number of wage earners for the year increased 51 per cent, from 5,573 to 8,415. Salaries, however, increased 56.6 per cent, from $35,950,778 to $56,298,560, while wages increased 42.6 per cent, from $13,065,756 to $18,637,005.

The cost of materials, supplies, fuel and purchased power increased 4.8 per cent, from $33,258,368 in 1925 to $34,867,472 in 1927, and the amount paid for contract work, including expenditures for rented studios, together with the neeessary electric power, stage settings, labor and minor-role actors, increased 188.3 per cent, from $5,368,593 to $15,476,548. The differenee between the total cost of production and the sum of the items for salaries, wages, cost of materials and amount paid for contract work is made up of miscellaneous items such as story costs, home office overhead, stars' expenses, insurance, etc., and profit from laboratory work done for others.

Louise Brooks Refuses To Sign Pathe Contract

Louise Brooks agreed one afternoon to sign a contract with Pathe at $450 a week with the clause that she attend a dramatic school in New York. That the terms were satisfactory to her was registered at 4.30 one afternoon. Pathe had the contract drawn and presented to her the next morning and all that Louise said was "Nothing doing."

What happened in the meantime was that she had received a cable from Germany stating that the Ufa would give her a contract of $1,000 weekly and that there would be a guarantee of 30 weeks out of 52 for her services in Berlin and naturally Louise thought that would be a better bet for her.

She sails on the North German Lloyd line on Saturday and will be abroad for a year, perhaps longer.

Studio Executives Cautious, Provide For Quick Switch Back To Silent Pictures

Take Every Precaution To Have Material Ready If Public Tires Of Talkies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—Although film producers are rushing through schedules of all sound and dialogue productions, the studio executives are not going to allow themselves to be caught napping if there should be a sudden swing of public demand away from the all talker back to silent pictures.

One of the largest producing organizations on the coast issued an order to its reading department last week instructing the readers to watch carefully for material that might be adapted as outstanding silent productions, and where sound and dialogue would not be suitable. The producing eompany is partieularly anxious to have material ready to launch a program of silent pietures of epic proportions in case the talkfilms should cease to be an attraction with theatre audienees.

The head of one studio which was one of the first to put dialogue pictures on the market, is reported to have made the statement that his organization will be fully prepared to switch baek to the silent form of picture if the public tires of the talkers.

Producing "Silents"

It is interesting to note that Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, two of the largest produeers and distributors in the industry, are still carrying out a produetion program of silent pictures. Both are currently releasing the non-sounders, and are still making and preparing productions that will be all-silent. Both, however, are making a number of dialogue and sound pietures, but have not attempted to confine their activities entirely to talkfilm productions, as other produeers have done.

At the present time, Paramount, Warners, First National, Pathe and RKO have gone into exelusive produetion of talkers and sounders. Columbia and Tiffany-Stahl have both sound and silent releases. Universal is on the fenee, with all produetion of silent films suspended for an indefinite period. The only pictures being made by the latter organization are "Broadway" and "Showboat," both rated as big specials to carry dialogue and sound.

United Artists are still making both silent and talkfilms. Some releases will carry dialogue or sound, like "Coquette," "Bulldog Drummond" and "Nightstiek," but Joe Sehenck still has to be eonverted to that group of producers who believe that the talkers are here to stay.

Ad. Censorship Bill Is Disapproved

MEMBERS of the British Columbia Legislature, in session at Victoria, put their foot down on a measure introduced by Attorney-General Pooley to establish censorship for moving picture advertising in daily newspapers. So much opposition developed against the proposal that it has been substantially amended and there is a probability that it will be withdrawn altogether.

"Free Show" Ad Withdrawn When Protest Is Made

Is Removed From Columbus Theatrical Page On Exhibitor Request

A "free show" advertisment placed in the Columbus newspapers roused P. J. Wood, business manager of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio to aetion with the result that the ad was removed from the theatrical pages where it was run as a "teaser" by an automobile concern.

It is said that this ad is a part of a national eampaign in whieh are announced free sound picture programs and that the request of the advertising ageney is that it be placed on the theatrieal ad page. Upon the request of Wood the ad was removed from the theatrieal page of the Columbus papers. He pointed out that while free shows cannot be prohibited they should not be advertised alongside of regular shows.

Wood addressed a communication to all Ohio exhibitors calling attention to the ad and informing them that the Columbus "Dispatch" had agreed to withdraw the copy from the theatrieal page. He urged that all cooperate by making the same request of the advertising managers of their local papers.

Dix Returns To Coast

Having been here sinee before Christmas engaged on "Nothing But The Truth," his new talkie-faree soon to be released by Paramount, Richard Dix left New York last Sunday on his return trip to Hollywood. He will begin produetion there soon on "The Wheel of Life," his next picture.

John G. Bachman, who supervised "Nothing But The Truth," aecompanied the aetor and additional members of the party ineluded Victor Sehertzinger, Ned Sparks. In another week, Edward Cronjager will follow them.

Public Invited For First Time To A.M.P.A. Ball

Leading Picture Stars And Broadway Figures For Event At Astor

The A. M. P. A. Hollywood Masque Ball to be held at the Astor Theatre in New York on the night of March 2 will be open to the public for the first time in thirteen years. Leading agencies in the Times Square district are handling the tickets.

An elaborate and extensive program is being arranged for the event and Nils T. Granlund of radio fame will serve as master of ceremonies. He will introduce a great array of screen and stage stars and Broadway personalities. Among those who will entertain are Texas Guinan and her gang of girls, Harry Richman of the Scandals, Clayton, Jackson and Durante, Will Oakland and his Oakland Terrace Show, and scores of other headliners.

Six jazz orchestras and bands, including two Harry M. Mills orchestras, will play for the continuous dancing. The A. M. P. A. Newsreel, a satirical feature of sound units, will as usual be among the features of the entertainment. The grand march will be lead by two of the best known personalities in the world of music and it will be followed by the unmasking and the awarding of prizes.

There are to be prizes of all sorts; for the most beautiful chorus girl, for the best talking film prospect, for the bathing beauty parade, for the bathing beauty contest, the girl with the smallest feet; for the personality contest and for the prettiest girl in show business.

A full course dinner will be served at 1.30 A. M. and dancing and acts will continue through the night. At 5 o'clock in the morning "N.T.G." will put on his "breakfast show" with the leading Broadway talent.

Four Minutes Time Good Shooting Day

of an all talking nature that the company did. Yet this was shot in twenty-eight days. As against that Eugene Walter, the playwright who turned director for a time, shot 2,200 feet of all talk in three days. He did that by rehearsing his entire company in the playlet "Friendship" for three days prior to the shooting, so that actually six days were taken for the making of the picture.

The greatest loss of time in the shooting of dialogue pictures is in getting the three cameras set on a set so that the lightings are correct for all three of them. Hours and hours are lost because of this.

A report from the east is to the effect that at the Paramount Long Island Studios "Nothing But the Truth" was shot in 16 actual shooting days. The picture would have been ahead of schedule had it not been for the fact that Richard Dix, the star, contracted the flu.

M-G-M Readers To Go Into New Quarters

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 20.—The reading department of M-G-M Studios, composed of about ten members, will shortly be moved into new quarters on the lot. The readers will all work in one large room, much in the layout of a school room, with the head of the department stationed at the front. Two typewriters will be available for the readers, each in a sound proof room adjoining the readers' quarters and time on the typewriters will be scheduled in advance. The move is supposedly in the interest of efficiency.

At present the readers have individual offices scattered through the scenario department building.

Unions Making Rapid Strides In Eastern Studios

Laboratory Technicians And Assistant Directors Are Latest Organized

Unionizing of various branches of the motion picture industry in the eastern studios is well under way and progressing rapidly, with indications that others will fall into line in the near future. The latest to organize are the Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, the Cinema Cosmeticians and Assistant Directors' Association.

The Laboratory Technicians has a membership of 160 and presents a strong front in affiliation with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Motion Picture Machine Operators.

There are about thirty members of the Assistant Directors' Association and they are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Francis E. Ziesse, business representative of the International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industries, was instrumental in the organizing of the new bodies.

Ziesse reports the contracts of cameramen in the eastern studios have been renewed. Under the new scale the first cameraman gets $250 weekly, the second $150, assistants $60 and still cameramen $100.

General Making Rapid Progress With Features

General Pictures Corporation, of which Oscar A. Price is president, is making rapid progress on its production program. The first of a series of four pictures starring Richard Talmadge has been completed. It is titled "The Bachelors' Club.."

Two other features of a series of four have also been completed. They are "Back From Shanghai," a mystery melodrama, starring Vera Reynolds, So-Jin and Leonard St. Leo, and "The Heroic Lover," a comedy starring Barbara Bedford, Stuart Holmes and Leonard St. Leo.

"Syncopation Festival Week" Arranged For RKO Feature

Mark A. Luescher, chief publicist for the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Theatres, and Hyatt Dabb, director of advertising and publicity for RKO, have combined in planning a nation-wide exploitation campaign on "Syncopation," feature 100 per cent talking film music extravaganza. The outstanding feature of the campaign will be "Syncopation Festival Week."

One hundred and fifty managers of Radio-Keith-Orpheum chain of theatres from coast to coast are to be linked into this "Syncopation Festival Week." The individual theatre managers will be the key men in their respective communities. He will hook up with a Victor Talking Machine tieup through 8,500 licensed agents, and will arrange window tieups and cooperative melody-hit sales drives with them. In addition he will benefit by the 300,000 car card campaign in behalf of "Syncopation" and its song hits to be made by Victor.

Merchants, department stores, dancing schools, blue singers and many others are to be drawn into the drive.

Home Rule Bill On Sunday Shows in Ohio

Two more Florida cities are voting on the question of Sunday movies this week. Winter Haven voted Tuesday. Only 17 per cent of the registered voters went to the polls, due to a campaign conducted by those opposed to the proposition. The count showed 354 in favor of Sunday shows and only 7 opposed to them.

Prior to the election a petition was circulated, signed by the Mayor, three ministers and many business men, calling upon "all -law-abiding citizens" to stay away from the polls.

Bartow voted on the Sunday question Friday the 15th, with the largest vote ever cast in a municipal election, giving a total of 614 in favor of Sunday shows and 398 opposed to them. As soon as the returns were announced the local theatres threw open their doors to the public and both houses were packed until closing time.

Citizens of Bradenton will vote on the Sunday movie question in March, the city commissioners having set the date this week, Tuesday the 12th.

Gottschalk To Synchronize Sono-Arts "Rainbow Man"

George W. Weeks, vice-president of Sono-Art Productions, has signed Louis F. Gottschalk, composer and conductor, to synchronize the music and conduct the symphony orchestra for the all-talking and singing production of "The Rainbow Man," starring Eddie Dowling. Gottschalk will work in collaboration with James Hanley.

Players' Voice Tests Running Up Production Costs

Large Amounts Expended In Selecting Talent Not Featured

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—Player voice tests, necessary for proper selection of talking picture casts, are adding considerable overhead to the production cost of each dialogue picture being made by various companies.

Studio executives are finding it necessary to test several players for each individual part, outside of featured roles, with resulting costs running into large amounts. Aside from the amount of money involved, the voice tests tie up valuable electrical recording apparatus which is in continual use for shooting the sound pictures.

It is reported that the Fox organization has spent approximately $28,000 so far for voice tests of an all-talker soon to go into production, with all of the cast not definitely selected. Other producers are said to be having the same experience in selection of players with suitable recording voices for particular parts.

With all producers using their present sound equipment to the limit for production of talkfilms, there is little time left for the shooting of voice tests. One executive declared that the test problem would be remedied when the producers obtained delivery of all their needed recording apparatus from the electric companies, and at that time, costs of the tests would come down considerably.

Victor Shapiro Goes With Fox On West Coast

Victor M. Shapiro, lately resigned as advertising and publicity director of United Artists in New York, has been signed to a contract by Fox, and will make his headquarters in Hollywood. He leaves for the Coast within the next few days.

Shapiro will join up with Glendon Alvine, director of advertising and publicity for Fox, and the two will lay out extensive publicity campaigns on the Fox product. Shapiro is regarded one of the most expert publicists in the industry, where he has served for the past twelve years with Vitagraph, Pathe, Samuel Goldwyn and United Artists.

Huston Will Appear In Short Dramas For Paramount

Paramount has signed Walter Huston to make a two-reel dramatic sketch the latter part of this week at the Long Island studios of the company. The vehicle, not yet titled, was written by John Meehan and will be directed by him. Huston recently completed the leading role in "Gentlemen of the Press," the Paramount all-talkie.

Holiday Helps B'way Houses During First Week Of Lent; "Melody" Breaks Astor Record

Bancroft Ahead Of Jannings By $50,000 In Three Weeks; "Weary River" Creates Record

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY with the box-offices advancing their prices to the holiday scale and putting in extra shows, offset the advent of the Lenten period as far as Broadway is concerned for last week. Even bad pictures managed to show box-offices figures above the average percentage of the houses in which they were playing. These pictures under normal conditions should have been decidedly off as far as box-office percentages are concerned.

All of the grind houses with the exception of one scored over the 100 per cent mark last week. The exception was the Rivoli where the "Sins of the Fathers" figured 95 per cent with a box-office return of $26,900.

It has been interesting to watch the business battle between Emil Jannings at the Rivoli and George Bancroft at the Rialto in "The Wolf of Wall Street." In the three weeks that the two pictures have been on Broadway the former has done a gross of $94,681 while the Bancroft picture has $145,092 to its credit for the identical length of run. That is the case even though the Rivoli has the advantage of about 300 seats in capacity. Last week, "The Wolf of Wall Street" returned $42,400 which is only a $2,300 drop under what the second week was.

Another interesting feature of the week's business was at the Paramount where "The Doctor's Secret" was in its second week, establishing a precedent for that house. The first week the feature played to $82,800 and last week was $80,900, less than $2,000 difference, the gross on the two weeks being $162,700.

The outstanding feature film of the new comers on the street last week was "The Flying Fleet" at the Capitol where the picture pulled $82,106.40 and was held over for this week. The Roxy held "True Heaven" which did $107,270.75 giving the house 104 7/10 per cent when figured against the average business of the theatre, but in this case the house and the regular clientele built up by the stage shows will have to be credited with pulling the business.

Another instance of a house cashing in on the strength of the crowds on the street

King Vidor Gambling On "Hallelujah"

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21. — Three years of plugging was required by King Vidor, M-G-M director, before he finally convinced officials of that company that a dramatic story of negro life could be made into a box office picture. Then Vidor had to sell the idea to Nicholas M. Schenck. head of Loew's, Inc., after studio executives had turned it down.

In making the deal to write an original story and direct the picture with an all-colored cast, Vidor is reported to have waived salary payments for his work as provided in his contract, until after the picture should be completed and released. If the picture hits, Vidor then receives his salary plus a prcentage of the production's gross business.

After Vidor had practically finished the picture, titled "Hallelujah," M-G-M officials became enthusiastic over its possibilities, and decided to have Vidor remake certain scenes to make it practically an all-talker. Production is slated to finish within the next ten days

Woman Censor Talks Against Censorship Bill

After Serving Six Years In Oregon Sees No Need For It

State censorship of motion pictures is heartily condemned by Mrs. F. O. Northrup, who served for six years on the board at Portland, Oregon. She was among many others who appeared against house bill No. 408, which is being fought by the Oregon exhibitors.

Mrs. Northrup said that during her last year of service on the Portland board very little censorship was required as the pictures were constantly improving in character. Among her remarks were the following: "We had sixty to seventy viewers to assist us and I can tell this committee that the work is very hard, and that no three persons, as provided in this bill, could view the films to be shown in Oregon."

Oregon exhibitors were represented at the hearing by Attorney Dan J. Malarley. He showed that there was no public demand for state-wide censorship of modern pictures. He stated there were only seven states in the union that have motion picture censorship.

"Wolf of Wall St", "Arizona" And "Barker" Are Leaders At Box-Office in Southern Houses

"Bellamy Trial" Fails To Click As Expected In First Run At Atlanta

ATLANTA, Feb. 20.—A number of pictures stood up well in the south during the past week, though reports varied generally in different parts. Heading the list of pictures in popularity in the different states were George Bancroft in "Wolf of Wall Street" and "Behind the German Lines" here; "In Old Arizona" in Memphis, and "The Barker" at the Ritz in Birmingham.

Quite an extensive campaign was put forth by the Howard here on "The Wolf of Wall Street."

On the stage was "Jazztown," with Louie Lowry Howard, band leader.

Following closely second Keith's Georgia had a very good week with "Captain Lash," starring Victor McLaglen, plus a fair vaudeville bill.

The Capitol drew a disappointment in "The Bellamy Trial," which fact may be attributed to the several recent pictures of this type, especially "Interference" and "On Trial." It failed to click as expected.

The Rialto enjoyed the best week in several with "Behind the German Lines," acclaimed the official war film of Germany. Attendance of school students was quite noticeable. At the Metropolitan, Sally O'Neil drew fair houses in "Hardboiled Angel," she being the whole picture. Loew's Grand came in also for a fair gross with second run of "Mother Knows Best" the first three days and "Singing Fool" the last part.

Memphis.—Rain and the Junior League Follies, annual society musical show, did their bit to make the sum total of Memphis' loop theatre business rather below average for the week ending Saturday, February 9. No house reported better than a "fair" run for the week.

Loew's Palace started out fast with "In Old Arizona," Fox all-talking film drama, but slowed later in the week as the weather grew colder and damper and as the Follies competition increased.

Loew's State reported a less than average week with Paramount's "The Case of Lena Smith" and the usual five-act vaudeville program, with Gitz-Rice and his Northwest Mounties as stage headliner.

Pantages did about the same with "Court Martial," Columbia, starring Jack Holt, and its five stage acts. Loew's Strand fell to "poor," with Fox's "Captain Lash," starring Victor McLaglen.

The new Orpheum, with "Love Over Night," Pathe, with Rod LaRocque, backed by a strong vaudeville bill headlining Sylvia Clark and Danny Duggan's dance act, did slightly less than an average week.

Birmingham.—February started off strong, with business coming back better than it has for four or five months. Again the Ritz, R-K-O vaudeville house, led the procession with a near record-breaker in "The Barker" in sound. The vaudeville was really just a presentation with all of the exploitation, including trick street stuff and plenty of billboards, directed to the picture.

"The Doctor's Secret" at the Publix ace house, "The Alabama," was normal, backed up by the second Emmett Rogers' spot show, "Jazztown."

The Empire was the only house off during the week, but the picture didn't have the stuff. It was "Marriage by Contract," which got plenty of exploitation, but after Monday it wouldn't bring patrons in. Buddy Rogers at the Strand put this house in the moneymaking class for the first time in two months, playing in "Someone to Love." He was the main attraction. The Trianon, the smallest of the first runs, was a little short of what was expected with "Me, Gangster."

First W. E. Equipped German House Opens

THE first theatre in Germany to be equipped with a Western Electric sound reproducing device opened Thursday night of this week, according to a cable from J. E. Otterson to the electric company headquarters in New York. The house is UFA's Palast in Berlin.

Gallup Assigns Special Duties To U. A. Staff

Bruce Gallup, recently named publicity and advertising director for United Artists, has so organized the staff in the office that a specialist is in charge of each phase of the work, with all, of course, under the supervision of Gallup. The latter will continue to handle directly his own specialty, advertising and sales promotion.

According to the new arrangement exploitation is being handled by Fred Schaefer, press sheets by Edward Finney and publicity by Warren Nolan. Each member of the staff has had wide experience in his particular line.

Ruth Chatterton Will Be Seen In "The Constant Wife"

Ruth Chatterton is to have the title role in Paramount's all-dialogue picture, "The Constant Wife," in which Ethel Barrymore starred on the speaking stage. The picture will be directed by Robert Milton.

Publix Theatre Does Big Gross To Lead Seattle

"Canary Murder Case" Has Capacity Business Of $21,000

Seattle, Feb. 20.—Publix's Seattle Theatre walked away with the show business of Seattle last week, in spite of cold, snowy weather that has been in force for two weeks. The occasion was the showing of "The Canary Murder Case" which packed the house to capacity and registered a gross of more than $21,000, breaking all house records since the theatre opened almost a year ago. Anita Stewart in person and Publix's "Oh, Teacher" unit on the stage aided in the business, but the picture was sold by a fine compaign handled by Eddie Hitchcock, and was directly responsible for this record-breaking business.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre, usually running neck-and-neck with the Seattle, dropped considerably into the background with "The Ghost Talks," which failed to get by with most audiences. Sally O'Neill in person with Fanchon-Marco's stage unit was somewhat of a draw, but business here was noticeably off.

Other picture theatres suffered also. John Hamrick's two houses had new attractions, "Lucky Boy" at the Blue Mouse and "Stark Mad" at the Music Box. Both of these films played to average business, but failed to click like former attractions have, and will probably last only about two weeks, instead of the usual four or five. At the Coliseum, "The Great White North" had a certain appeal through its pictorial value and natural interest. It was backed by a program of good shorts, and played to fairly good business.

The vaudeville houses were up and down. At the Orpheum, the stage bill featured "Olsen and Johnson" and played to business several thousand dollars above average. "Geraldine" was the film feature, but it was not given much recognition. On the other hand, Pantages dropped off with "The Girl on the Barge" and a weak vaudeville line-up.

Ziegfeld "Frolic" Shot In Sound Film By Paramount At L. I.

The new Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., "Midnight Frolic" was shot by Paramount under the direction of Joseph Santley at the L. I. Studios on Sunday a week ago. The actual shooting time required for the two reeler was three hours. A set was built in advance at the studios that was a reproduction of the New Amsterdam Roof. Eddie Cantor acted as master of ecremonies and played the same role that he does on the roof nightly.

Eddie Cronjager, who handled the camera for the production, laid out the shooting schedule in advance with the director and the picture was rushed through.

Showmen's Ad. Tips

A New Service Department for Exhibitors Telling How Leading Theatres Sell the Picture to the Public

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"

Fame of stage play and Anne Nichols counted. Human interest and comedy are worthwhile playing up.—Manager Ray Tubman, Regent, Ottawa, Ont.

Fact that it is talking picture of a famous stage play is a strong selling angle. Bears appeal for all classes.—Manager Kingsmore, Loew's Parkway, Baltimore, Md.

Popularity of stage play was used as ad medium. Picture played to cosmopolitan audience on strength of stage play's representation.—Harry Weiss, Loew's State, Syracuse, N. Y.

The angles to advertise are very obviously the play and the book from which the picture is taken. The title will sell the picture to theatregoers. Audiences during its run here were composed of men and women of moderate circumstances, and a good number of children.—William Mick, Manager Strand, Milwaukee, Wisc.

The public garnered in the course of the life of Abie on the stage is helping the film. Added to this is the popularity of Buddy Rogers and Nancy Carroll, who should be featured.—George D. Tyson, Circle and Indiana, Indianapolis, Ind.

Best selling point is its cast, which was heavily advertised without undue stress on the racial differences of the characters as was emphasized when the play was first produced on stage. Is suitable for all types of houses, but should be more successful in neighborhood houses than downtown.—Loew's Ohio, Cleveland, Ohio.

"ADORATION"

Billie Dove's name was depended upon largely in advertising, but she failed to draw. Best results might be had by playing up aristocratic romance and making bid to beauty loving public.—Manager Ray Brown, Strand, Akron, O.

Addressed ads to the matinee trade.—Worth, Fort Worth, Tex.

"THE AIR CIRCUS"

Exploit airplane angle and advertise that it is not a war picture. Audience appeal: for all, especially children and with a little mother appeal.—Albert P. Kaufman, Manager Empire, Syracuse, N. Y.

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE"

Exploited William Haines for his greatest role, that of a safe-cracker willing to sacrifice all in a climax of high heart interest.—Ray Brown, Manager Strand, Akron, O.

Sell William Haines and Barrymore if they mean anything in your neighborhood.—Manager Frank Kleaver, Keith's, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Can best be put over at this stage of its career by advertising it as the first talkie of the play. The story and play are so well known that this new feature adds novelty. William Haines' name as leading character also has merit as a selling point. The patronage accorded the picture included practically every type, young and old, men and women from all classes.—Herbert Israel, Manager Majestic, Milwaukee, Wisc.

Exploit its sex appeal and the fact that it was adapted from the successful stage play about a reformed crook. Audience appeal: for all ages and classes because it is an all-hokum film.—E. W. Smith, Manager, Broadway, Springfield, Mass.

A good one for any house equipped with sound. The fact that the play was one of the big successes should not be overlooked in the film's exploitation.—Manager Peck, Victory, Tampa, Fla.

Best bet from box-office point is Bill Haines. He is an excellent draw here. Secondary point is the name of the play. The star's humor goes big with female patrons.—Texas, San Antonio, Texas.

"ALL AT SEA"

Feature the name of Dane and Arthur in all the ads and play up the clean comedy. Audience appeal: those who like farce comedy and the Dane-Arthur team.—Russell Bovim, Loew's Theatre, Canton, O.

"ANNAPOLIS"

The chief exploitation angle is that it is a beautiful production against the colorful background of the naval academy. Large cut out board cannons displayed in the lobby with cut outs of the star seated upon the cannon were effectively used to create the atmosphere surrounding the romance.—Capitol, Dallas, Tex.

Has universal appeal; sell as a good love story centered in patriotic naval academy.—Rialto, Louisville, Ky.

"ANYBODY HERE SEEN KELLY"

Exploit the cast of players in this one. Audience appeal: to the middle classes.—J. L. Schanberger, Manager Keith's, Baltimore, Md.

"THE AWAKENING"

Exploit the picture's similarity to "The White Sisters" and play up its romantic thrills. Audience appeal: for fans of high school age up and to all classes.—Al Anders, Manager, Bijou, Springfield, Mass.

"THE BARKER"

Did up exterior of house in ballyhoo style with main entrance fixed as a big show entrance, side show tents over marquee and circus banner over the facade. Strong selling point is that it is part dialogue plus general interest of everyone in circus life. Sills difficult to sell despite excellent work in this due to recent flops he's had. Pleases all classes because all are interested in circuses from grandpa to baby.—Manager Kingsmore, Loew's Stanley, Baltimore, Md.

Exhibitors can cash in on the stage play of same name and advertise accordingly. The name is known by most people of this section as play played here. There is a remarkable cast to exploit plus the advantage of hearing this carnival in sound, if the house is wired.—Manager, Plaza, Paris, Tex.

Played up to all ages and came within short margin of breaking house record. Considered for second run. Carnival life, plus Sills (good local star), plus sound played up. Printed balloons given away and street ballyhoo with stilt walker and special newspaper space used.—Vernon Reaver, Manager, Ritz, Birmingham, Ala.

"THE BELLAMY TRIAL"

Advise all exhibitors to play up the murder mystery story. Advertising campaign carried "Who Killed Mimi Bellamy?" as the catch line and patrons were urged from the screen not to tell their friends who the murderer was. The fact that it has no big stars and is not an all-talkie is against it. Mouth to mouth advertising played a big part in the picture's success here.—Manager W. V. Taylor, Loew's State, Houston, Tex.

Play up strong dramatic angles with emphasis on courtroom thrills. Also feature the mystery angle: Who killed Bellamy? Audience appeal: for adults of all classes.—M. J. Cullen, Manager, Loew's State, Providence, R. I.

Exploit as thriller from Saturday Evening Post serial. Play up love letters, blackmail and mystery angle. For all classes of adults, or high school students.—Walter Maloney, Manager, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo.

"THE CANARY MURDER CASE"

The feature's air of mystery was stressed. Midnight adv. showing of "Redskin" helped the week's receipts.—Manager Pincus, The Portland, Portland, Ore.

Was sold to the public as a picturization of S. S. Van Dine's mystifying story and was featured from the all-talkie angle. Stress was laid on its fine cast. It was suitable for every type of audience and broke all house records at this theatre.—Bob Blair, Manager, Seattle, Seattle, Wash.

"THE CIRCUS KID"

Manager Peck believes feature would click in smaller cities and in Class B houses in the larger cities. The younger generation will like the picture and in his opinion it would pay to make an effort along that line in the houses mentioned.—Victory, Tampa, Fla.

Only appeal the picture has at all is to the children. It interested parents solely because of their youngsters and many parents who saw the film came back later in the week and brought the kiddies. The only selling points are the appeal to the kids and the lure of the big top.—Manager Bremer, Majestic, Houston, Tex.

"CONQUEST

Best selling angle is that it is the first Warner Bros. all-talkie outdoor picture. Appeals to all classes, particularly to men.—C. S. Lange, Manager, Metropolitan, Baltimore, Md.

Exploitation angles are that it is an all-talkie, an adventure in the Polar regions, and a thrilling drama of the rivalry of two aviators for the heart of a girl.—Melba, Dallas, Tex.

We used a Byrd tie-up.—Vita-Temple, Toledo, Ohio.

Was widely advertised as a feature dealing with aviation.—Liberty, Spokane, Wash.

"COURT MARTIAL"

Exploit Jack Holt, carrying out the idea that the picture is very much like his Westerns. Exploit Betty Compson, who is cast in the role of a guerilla, a very unusual character for her. Audience appeal: For the younger people and those inclined to like melodrama.—Walter McDowell, Manager, Strand, Syracuse, N. Y.

Ad. Tips For Your Bookings

"THE CASE OF LENA SMITH"

The star, Esther Ralston, and the director are its best plugs.—Princess, Toledo, O.

Made its appeal to the public as a film about a girl betrayed in love—the sort of thing that makes thousands of readers for the Mrs. Maxwell column. Consequently picture appealed to the ladies. Will appeal to thinkers and not so strongly to those who go to the theatre for relaxation.—Loew's Ohio, Cleveland, O.

"CAPTAIN LASH"

House manager bases its best box office pull on the star. Quick action also a draw—Majestic, San Antonio, Tex.

Public is growing lukewarm toward rough and ready stories but Victor McLaglen of "What Price Glory" fame is worth mentioning. Snappy sub-titles helped to put it across.—Centre, Ottawa, Ont.

Stress Victor McLaglen and Claire Windsor in a thrilling story of the sea. Emphasize the novelty of love existing between a society crook and a stoker. Audience appeal: for everyone.—Roy Rogan, Manager, Rialto, Joliet, Ill.

Feature the fact that the title player rules his men with an iron hand but is a meek lamb among women. A compelling romance of the sea with the thrills that only the sea can furnish. The feature will appeal to the family and transient patronage.—Majestic, Dallas, Tex.

"CRAIG'S WIFE"

Based advertising on fact that it was Pulitzer prize play and on the attractiveness of the players. Compared it with "Sorrell and Son" as acterization of Irene Rich. Teamed well with Mack Sennett's all-talkie comedy on the same bill, "The Bride's Relations." Played primarily to adult audience.—Manager Joe Calla, Strand, Canton, Ohio.

"DANCING VIENNA"

Emphasize it as a sound picture—a song of life in jazzy tempo. Play up Ben Lyon in his first foreign-made picture with the foreign player, Lya Mara. Audience appeal: For the younger set and particularly to German and Austrian element.—Howard Price Kingsmore, Manager, Loew's Valencia, Baltimore, Md.

"THE DOCTOR'S SECRET"

Should be exceptionally good matinee money-maker, as it has strong appeal to feminine world, but exhibitors should be careful not to reveal the nature of the secret in advertising the film, as that is real pulling power. Both family and transient patronage can be attracted, but the prospects for the latter are better.—L. J. Finske, Manager, Newman, Kansas City, Mo.

Drew much the same type of audience that patronizes the spoken drama and legitimate stage productions. The greatest selling points are the author of the play. J. M. Barrie, and the names of the leading members of the cast.—W. O. James, Manager, Wisconsin, Milwaukee, Wis.

Exploit its original source, the stage play "Half an Hour," its author, and the featured players: Ruth Chatterton, Broadway actress; Robert Edeson, H. B. Warner and John Loder, all stage actors. Audience appeal: For women especially, as they expect to hear or see something unusual.—Harry Weiss, Manager, Loew's, Syracuse, N. Y.

The talkie angle was played up as well as its title with its lure of mystery. A street hallyhoo and extra outdoor billing in advance were found effective.—Olympia, New Haven, Conn.

The stars were played up; it had general appeal.—Capitol, Des Moines, Ia.

Fact Stuff

These reports give actual experiences of exhibitors in putting over pictures to the public.

Not theory—but facts.

A real service for the busy theatre owner or manager.

Good for high school age and over. Special angle cast and author of story, plus all-talk. No special display, yet good week recorded.—Charles G. Branham, Alabama, Birmingham, Ala.

In this territory, picture has but two good selling points, namely, the fact that it is an all-talkie throughout and has well-known stage artists in the cast. Appeals almost wholly to the intelligentsia with little for the masses. Barrie's name in connection with the film draws little, chiefly because the title change antagonizes Barrie admirers.—Emil Bernstecker, Manager, Metropolitan, Houston, Tex.

Offers many society angles. London society and the name of Barrie both appeal. For all except the youngsters.—Manager Montague Salmon, Rialto, Macon, Ga.

"DREAM OF LOVE"

Cast contains names of well-known screen players, and Joan Crawford is worth a boost for her acting. Romantic angle is bound to attract women and young people.—Manager Tubman, Imperial, Ottawa, Ont.

Best for women audience; for best results should be emphasized as love story.—Manager, Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"THE FAKER"

Lay stress on the possibilities of the title—the man who tried to fool the world. Audience appeal: For adults of all classes.—Edward Reid, Manager, Strand, Providence, R. I.

"FANCY BAGGAGE"

Advertised as a talkie and played it up as a light comedy of youthful appeal. Mentioned Audrey Ferris and excellent cast. Will appeal mostly to young people and family trade.—Manager Manson Floyd, Kirby, Houston, Tex.

In the way of publicity, the newspapers, billboards and window cards were resorted to.—Roger Sherman Theatre, New Haven, Conn.

Played up the fact that the cast is almost identical with that of "The Little Wildcat," a previous hit here.—Manager Harry Gould, Palace, For Worth, Tex.

Should be sold to flappers especially, although suitable for family audiences. Manager would advertise it as a romance of modern type.—Alama, Louisville, Ky.

Stress George Fawcett and Edmund Breese in their humorous bickerings; also hilarious comedy element in this picture. For all ages and classes.—Joseph Jordan, Manager Stanley, Atlantic City, N. J.

"THE FLYING FLEET"

Combined romance and adventure elements in appealing to both family and transient patronage. A few invitations to naval officers proved a source of good verbal advertising. Ramon Novarro also should be played up as the star, as his name alone proved a great drawing card. —Walter Maloney, Manager Midland, Kansas City, Mo.

Stressed air scenes as the best yet shown on the screen and plugged Novarro. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—Manager Walter Norris, Keith's, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Is of general appeal; suitable for all classes from elite to neighborhood. Stress the spectacular air maneuvers in the picture and the fact that it's Novarro's best film since Ben Hur. Feature fact that it is the first big commercial aviation feature.—Loew's and U. A. State, Louisville, Ky.

Has a universal appeal due to the aviation theme. There are just as many old and middle-aged people seeing this picture as there are younger ones. They are all interested in flying stories.—J. F. Flex, Manager, Loew's Palace, Indianapolis, Ind.

Exploit the navy aviation hookup in the film and Novarro's name appeal. For all ages and classes.—Andrew D. Mustard, Manager Strand, Atlantic City, N. J.

"FUGITIVES"

Publicity angles used were: that it is a romance with plenty of action ranging from Broadway to Africa and that it is a Richard Harding Davis story. The audiences to be sought are the juvenile and transient.—Majestic, Dallas, Tex.

Big selling points of this are Madge Bellamy and the author, Richard Harding Davis. Audience appeal: all classes.—William E. Stumpf, Manager New Baltimore, Md.

Exploit as tense drama rich in comedy and love romance. Appeal should be made to the younger generation. For all ages and classes, especially the young folk.—Lawrence Lehman, Manager Mainstreet, Kansas City, Mo.

"THE GHOST TALKS"

Billed heavily as mystery comedy; puppy love theme was also stressed. Made appeal to all who like laughter and a good time.—Manager Keith's Hippodrome, Cleveland, O.

Played up the laughs and thrills angles but the film wasn't there in audience appeal. Best type of audience would be juvenile thrill seekers not too particular about their film fair.—James Clemmer, Manager Fifth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

"THE GIRL ON THE BARGE"

Rupert Hughes, the author of the story, can well be stressed in the advertising as he is sufficiently well known to have a commendable following. The picture drew the regular week-to-week patronage.—Harry Wren, Manager Alhambra, Milwaukee, Wisc.

"GIVE AND TAKE"

Emphasized the fact that the film is crowded with laughs, laughs and more laughs.—Grand, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"THE GOOD-BYE KISS"

Emphasize the emotions displayed in this flaming romance of youth. Carries an appeal to all those who like romance.—Princess, Joliet, Ill.

"THE GREAT WHITE NORTH"

Exploit its educational value. Audience appeal: elite.—James Skiffington, Manager Fox, Springfield, Mass.

Was billed as an astounding arctic adventure film with unusual photos of battles with bears, whales, sea lions, etc. Tied up with Stefanson. Good for all except flaming youth audiences if surrrounded with good shorts.—Coliseum, Seattle, Wash.

By Exhibitors For Exhibitors

"THE GREYHOUND LIMITED"

Exploit as thrilling romance of railroad life featuring Monte Blue and the fact that many of his lines are spoken. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—Clare Woods, Manager, Royal, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploit Monte Blue and feature it as the first railroad talkie. Audience appeal: for all ages and classes.—John Blunk, Manager, Alama, Louisville, Ky.

"HARDBOILED"

Played up first angle of revealing secrets behind the scenes of Broadway shows, secondly, the story by Arthur Somers Roche, and, thirdly, the players. Best suited for adult audiences.—Manager Joe Calla, Valentine, Canton, O.

"HIS PRIVATE LIFE"

The presence of Adolphe Menjou and Kathryn Carver in the same picture made a good selling angle. Names in the cast were played up.—Manager J. M. Franklin, B. F. Keith's, Ottawa, Ont.

"HOME JAMES"

Exploit Laura La Plante and comedy angles. Good for all classes and ages.—Manager L. J. Shields, Ritz, Macon, Ga.

"IN OLD ARIZONA"

Advise emphasis on all-talking angle and that it is the first picture with sound to be taken out of doors. This excites the curiosity. Audience appeal: for all ages, all classes.—Manager Grover Ranch, Majestic Gardens, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Lay stress on the romance and the costumes. Spaniards passing out handbills at schools and Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.
streets went well here. Exploit the adventure.

Since it is the first outdoor talkie, its greatest selling angle is advertising it as such. Its appeal is general and it attracts every type of audience.—Joe Leo, Vice-President of Midwesco.

The outdoor dialogue feature angle was played up in the publicity.—State, Toledo, O.

Featured in the ads was the fact that this is the first outdoor talkie and that it would appeal to all classes of patrons. Also the fact that it would appeal especially to lovers of the spoken drama.—Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Can be best sold by appealing to universal patronage. The fact that it is the first out-of-doors talkie should be played up big and the singing of Warner Baxter. Don't be afraid of the Western background but emphasize the love element.—Strand, Louisville, Ky.

First out-door talkie. Play up big three figures, Lowe, Baxter and Burgess. Audience appeal: for all ages and all classes.—C. C. Attkinson, Manager Strand, Louisville, Ky.

"INTERFERENCE"

Was helped by special Paramount ad campaign. A strong selling point to play up is that it is all-dialogue adapted from successful play. Appeals to all classes, including the highest.—Manager Kingsomer, Loew's Valencia, Baltimore, Md.

Billed attraction as "Broadway brought to Main Street." Stressed fact of its being first unit show to be moved direct from Criterion in N. Y. where it played $2 top. Excellent cast lent appeal as well as it being an all-talkie. Played to an elite audience.—Ralph W. Thayer, Manager, Eckel Schine, Syracuse, N. Y.

Exploited it as an all-dialogue production of the famous stage play. Audience appeal: every class including the best.—Howard Price Kingsmore, Manager, Parkway, Baltimore, Md.

Inasmuch as the streets of Cedar Rapids have been the subject of considerable local controversy involving the city street department, a ten-inch display ad in the local papers four days before the opening of the feature and calling on the street department to make Third Avenue, which the Capitol faces, a "one-way street" to accommodate the crowds that would attend the showing of "Interference," was decided upon as good campaign ammunition by Managing Director Evert R. Cummings. An "apology" ad followed on Monday.—Capitol, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Exploit everything on this film: its talkie angle and its similarity to the stage play, its mystery angle and Evelyn Brent, Clive Brook, Doris Kenyon and William Powell (if they have local followings). Hit hard on the film's reputation. Audience appeal: 14 years and up; all classes.—Herbert Chatkin, Manager, Piccadilly, Rochester, N. Y.

The name of Clive Brook helped in the exploitation. Ballyhoo it as a widely-heralded film of the better type. Audience appeal: for all classes but children.—Matthew Riley, Victory, Providence, R. I.

Was widely advertised as the first unit-production to show here and publicity on Ruth Etting and Eddie Cantor were definite drawing cards.—Liberty, Spokane, Wash.

"LADIES' NIGHT IN A TURKISH BATH"

Selling points: good comedy feature and the name of Jack Mulhall. Appeal to men and juveniles.—Manager Robertson, Fern, Ottawa, Ont.

"THE LAST WARNING"

Was featured as an eerie mystery, daring drama that will chill one with its thrills and containing sudden laughs with plenty of heart throbs. The audience to be sought is a family patronage.—Capitol, Dallas, Tex.

Good mystery with frequent laughs. Exploit Laura La Plante and mystery angle. Fine for all classes and ages.—Manager H. S. Ames, Capitol, Macon, Ga.

"THE LION AND THE MOUSE"

This story is a standard in the stage world and the picture has two popular stars, May McAvoy and Barrymore. Manager P. J. Nolan used it with sound effects and got 100 per cent results.—Rex, Ottawa, Ont.

"THE LITTLE WILDCAT"

Was featured as a mad rollicking mix-up of a human wildcat out to get her man. All publicity should appeal directly to the juvenile class as this is the audience to be sought.—Old Mill, Dallas, Tex.

Service

Use "Showmen's Ad. Tips" in connection with "Weekly Box-Office Check-Up," which begins on Page 553.

"LOVE IN THE DESERT"

Exploit the romance and adventure to be found in the story. Audience appeal: for fans 14 years of age and up.—Charles Lake, Manager Keith's Palace, Rochester, N. Y.

"LUCKY BOY"

Exploited George Jessel's singing of "My Mother's Eyes." A mother-love actor, society romance.—L. B. Cool, Manager Colonial, Akron, O.

A big selling point is fact that this presents George Jessel in his first talking and singing vehicle. Carries appeal to all classes, particularly to Jewish trade.—Frank Price, Jr., Manager Rivoli, Baltimore, Md.

Exploit this as George Jessel's first talking and singing picture. Audience appeal: all classes and especially the Jewish trade.—Frank Price, Jr., Manager Rivoli, Baltimore, Md.

Exploit George Jessel as Broadway vaudeville and dramatic star and that this is his first all-talkie and singing feature. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—Ralph W. Thayer, Manager Eckel, Syracuse, N. Y.

George Jessel himself was the strong attraction and then came the interest in his songs. Picture will go big where houses are wired for sound as it is bright, funny, entertaining, and presents no mental strain.—Hippodrome, Cleveland, O.

Was featured as a picture on the same type as Jolson's successes, but care was taken in the advertising to compare it as being just as good. Best for adult family audiences.—John Hamrick, Manager Blue Mouse, Seattle, Wash.

"THE MAN IN HOBBLES"

The idea of a man who married an entire family was exploited. Audience appeal: strongest for women.—Marc Wolff, Manager Palace, Canton, O.

The fact that it is taken from the masterpiece of literature by Victor Hugo is a fine selling point.—Clemmer, Spokane, Wash.

"THE MAN WHO LAUGHS"

Play up the fact that it is Victor Hugo's great story and the spectacular elements of the picture. Audience appeal: for all ages and classes.—Louis Charninsky, Manager Pantages, Kansas City, Mo.

"MAN, WOMAN AND WIFE"

Exploited tense moments in prison and attempted escape through machine gun barrage and flood light—romantic appeal.—J. B. Allman, Manager Allen, Akron, O.

Sociological standpoint of film is good selling point. Has great appeal for young lady office workers.—I. V. Hart, publicist for Keith's, Baltimore, Md.

"MARKED MONEY"

Should be advertised as a colorful drama of daring youth. Strong appeal can be made to younger generation that will attract both family and transient biz.—Louis Charninsky, Kansas City, Mo.

Aviation angle should be stressed. General audience appeal.—J. H. Boswell, Manager Rialto, Louisville, Ky.

"MARQUIS PREFERRED"

Played up Adolphe Menjou's name; attracted family audiences.—Russell Bovim, Manager Loew's, Canton, O.

Exploit for Menjou fans as a typical Menjou vehicle. Appeal: general.—J. H. Boswell, Rialto, Louisville, Ky.

Ad. Aids From First Runs

"MARRIAGE BY CONTRACT"

Star and the story are its best selling angles. Play up Judge Lindsey's dictum on marriage. —Frank Merritt, Empire, Birmingham, Ala.

Only passing mention given this film, the ballyhoo being spent on the vaudeville.—Majestic, Fort Worth, Tex.

"ME, GANGSTER"

Exploit it as an underworld drama providing thrills and excitement.—James Skiffington, Manager Fox, Springfield, Mass.

"MY MAN"

The name of Fannie Brice gets them in to see this feature. The songs featured in the film are the subject of much valuable word-of-mouth advertising in succeeding showings of this all-talkie. Fannie Brice and the song, "My Man," should be exploited.—James D. Kennedy, Manager, Apollo, Indianapolis, Ind.

Exploit star's name and the comedy angles. Good policy to mention names of the various musical numbers in the ballyhoo. Audience appeal: for all ages and all classes.—Sol Braunig, Manager Majestic, Providence, R. I.

"NAUGHTY BABY"

Best angle of this feature is that it is a portrayal of the jazzy jubilant actions of modern day youth. A girl that has pep and can step the gait and is endowed with "it." The audience to be sought is strictly the juvenile patronage, as the picture has all the high lights to bring them in.—Old Mill, Dallas, Tex.

Should be exploited as light and snappy with accent on the star's Show Girl connection. Collegiates will like it.—Strand, Providence, R. I.

"THE NIGHT BIRD"

Exploit Denny and comedy angle. Good for all classes and ages.—Manager L. J. Shields, Ritz, Macon, Ga.

"NOISY NEIGHBORS"

Cannot be plugged from any special angle; about only exploitation possible is to advertise that this is an opportunity to see late Theodore Roberts.—Manager Grand, Paris, Tex.

"PHYLLIS OF THE FOLLIES"

Has no angle from which to exploit. About only thing to do is to play up Follies angle as much as possible and let it go at that.—Manager Grand, Paris, Tex.

"ON TRIAL"

Stress it as a talkie feature with an element of crime. Exploit Pauline Frederick in the stellar role. Audience appeal: for all classes, particularly those who like drama.—Sam Bendheim, Manager Capitol, Richmond, Va.

Realism of its murder trial scenes and of the flashbacks giving the murder evidence are its outstanding selling points.—Ernest Emerling, Manager, Loew's Strand, Memphis, Tenn.

"THE RAINBOW"

Play up the love interest rather than the western angle; keep away from the shooting in it. Appeals to those who like outdoor life. —Manager Nat Keene, Hippodrome, Baltimore, Md.

"THE REDEEMING SIN"

Dolores Costello was advertised as outstanding feature of film. Any audience which likes underworld pictures should be satisfied with this one.—State, Cleveland, Ohio.

Manager Andrew Saso declares Dolores Costello is always a good bet. Although it was in its second week, the feature registered fairly well with all classes.—Music Box, Portland, Ore.

Exploit Dolores Costello as playing a new and different part which shows the extent of her talents. Audience appeal: To the masses and the better element.—C. S. Langue, Manager, Warner's Metropolitan, Baltimore, Md.

Its star, Dolores Costello, recently became the bride of John Barrymore, and this was played up big in the Stanley advertising. Also the fact that it is an all-talkie.Stanley, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"RED HOT SPEED"

Manager Peck believes feature would click in smaller cities and in Class B houses in the larger cities. Reginald Denny offers best bet to feature, not overlooking the fact that he talks.—Victory, Tampa, Fla.

All classes of people were drawn into the theatre, young people to see Denny and older folks to see Sale's characterization in "Marching On." Denny's clean comedy warranted children's patronage. Youngsters should be appealed to, as they are future customers of theatres. Elaborate lobby display and special built fronts captured the eyes.—Manager Kaufman, Empire, Syracuse, N. Y.

Exploit its speed angle: its motor trouble versus heart trouble; also emphasize Reginald Denny. Audience appeal: For the whole family.—T. R. Earl, Manager, Imperial, Asheville, N. C.

Exploit speed and adventure angles. One stunt of a wrecked car being towed through streets with appropriate posters went well here. Stress the romance angle. Audience appeal: For all ages and all classes.—Thomas D. Sorerio, Rochester, N. Y.

Emphasized the fact that this was Denny's first talkie and was surprised at the business.—Manager Harry Gould, Palace, Fort Worth, Tex.

"RED LIPS"

Played up fact that the story was written by Percy Marks, and that it was collegiate propaganda. Played to adult and youthful audiences. —Palace, Canton, Ohio.

"RED WINE"

Conrad Nagel is the best selling point, with the light comedy character of the story as the second. The title is worth little.. Its appeal is to the general patronage.—Manager Eddie Bremer, Majestic, Houston, Tex.

Appealed to those who like the lighter type of entertainment. The women in this vicinity like Nagel.—Sam L. Bandheim, Manager, Capitol, Richmond, Va.

"THE RESCUE"

Exploit as sound production and a mighty conflict between passion and honor, with Ronald Colman in a story by Joseph Conrad as his first starring vehicle. Also emphasize Herbert Brenon's direction and Lily Damita, new foreign player. Audience appeal: To the higher element, because of its psychological aspect.—Howard Price Kingsmore, Manager, Loew's Stanley, Baltimore, Md.

A great deal of merit lies in advertising the feature as having been adapted from Joseph Conrad's story. Ronald Colman always draws feminine patronage.—Herbert Israel, Manager, Majestic, Milwaukee, Wis.

Film of high calibre, and was of that type which appeals to those who like romance and drama.—Harold W. Evans, Manager, Loew's, Richmond, Va.

Especially appealing to lovers of adventure stories. Best selling point is the fact that story was written by the master teller of sea tales, Joseph Conrad. Another selling point is Ronald Colman as one of the screen's first lovers.—Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Two publicity angles to be used are that it is based on Joseph Conrad's novel of the same name, and that it is a vivid tale of love and adventure. It appeals to juvenile and transient patronage.—Melba, Dallas, Tex.

Played up fact that the film was Ronald Colman's first starring vehicle. Introduced Lily Damita, new French actress. Dedicated picture to the matinee trade and emphasized Conrad authorship.—Worth, Fort Worth, Tex.

Played up first of all fact that it is Colman's first independent stella vehicle, then the fact that it marked Lily Damita's American debut, and finally the original story by Conrad. Appealed to general family audience, because of combination of romance, adventure and thrills. —Russell Bovim, Manager, Loew's, Canton, O.

"RINTY OF THE DESERT"

Audience appeal: For the men and the younger element.—Joe Calla, Manager, Valentine, Canton, Ohio.

"SAL OF SINGAPORE"

Ballyhoo it as the strangest triangle ever formed. Appeals to those who like their dramas a bit wicked.—Patrick McManus, Princess, Joliet, Ill.

"SALLY'S SHOULDERS"

Light entertainment. Recommended for adult patrons, especially young people.

Selling point: Play up the leads and modern youth angle. Be sure to inform patrons of its frothy entertainment qualities.—Manager J. M. Franklin, Keith's, Ottawa, Ont.

"SCARLET SEAS"

Barthelmess the big selling point of film. All seemed to like it. It appeals to all classes, men particularly.—Howard Kingsmore, Manager, Loew's Century, Baltimore, Md.

Exploit Richard Barthelmess and love aboard a ship threatened by an irate crew. Audience appeal: For adults.—T. R. Earl, Manager, Imperial, Asheville, N. C.

The popularity of the two stars—Barthelmess and Betty Compson—and real sea thrills are good selling angles. The picture also appeals to everybody, old and young alike, and even the sensationally avid. The possible exception is the juvenile audience.—Manager Manson Floyd, Kirby, Houston, Tex.

"SEVEN FOOTPRINTS TO SATAN"

Sold this feature on the spook stuff.—Pantheon, Toledo, Ohio.

"THE SHOPWORN ANGEL"

Play up the romantic and pathos interest. Hit human interest angle hard. Biggest hook-up here was "shopworn sales" at stores, which advertised the show. Audience appeal: From 14 years of age up.—Marvin Murphy, Manager, Eastman, Rochester, N. Y.

Has universal appeal. Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper have excellent roles.—Roy Rogan, Manager, Rialto, Joliet, Ill.

Best publicity angles on the film are that it is an all-talkie, a great romance, with the ability to make you laugh and cry. The audience to be sought is a juvenile patronage. The younger of the business men and women will contribute a large part of the receipts.—Greater Palace, Dallas, Tex.

Broadway Show Reviews

By Fred Schader

"The Barker" Tops Strand's Talking Bill

Fannie Brice's Trailer For Short Vitaphone

"The Barker," with Milton Sills, Dorothy Mackaill, Betty Compson and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., featured, is topping the bill at the Strand this week, and the show shapes up strong enough to be held over at the house, as it looks to be clicking at the box-office in good shape. In addition there are two Vitaphone shorts and a trailer for "My Man," which Fannie Brice uses to advertise her fortheoming appearanee in the picture at the house, and this trailer is as good as any short that the Warners have turned out. The trailer runs six minutes, and Fannie gets a lot of laughs out of it.

The feature runs about an hour and twenty minutes and the rest of the show including the trailer is about ten minutes short of two hours, which will permit of a fast turn over for the house.

There is a terrifie eontrast offered in two sound newsreels here this week. There is a single shot from the Pathe Sound News and as this is followed immediately by the Fox Movietone News one eannot but make a eomparison in the sound values in both with Fox having by far the best of the argument. The news in sound runs eleven minutes.

The Neal Sisters in a elever little combination of song and music under the title of "Blondes That Prefer Gentlemen" scored nicely. The girls, there are three of them, harmonize nicely in their opening number which is the one that gives title to their reel. This is followed hy a piano, violin and eello number and another song at the finish.

Giovanni Martinelli in "Vesti La Guibba" from "Pagliacci" served just ahead of the feature. Some of the earlier sound pictures made by the Warners of this operatic star were much more effective than this one.

Grace La Rue To Sing In Special Act For Vitaphone

Vitaphone has signed Grace La Rue, famed star of the musical comedy stage to appear in a short Vitaphone presentation to be produced at Warner Bros. eastern studios in Brooklyn. In the act Miss La Rue will sing some original songs written especially for her. She will be directed by Bryan Foy.

Non-Talking "Ned McCobb's Daughter" Hit Of The Week's Bill At The Colony

THERE are so many of the publie squawking that they do not like the "talkies" that I think it would have been a smart thing to have advertised "Ned McCobb's Daughter" at the Colony this week as a non-talk feature. The pieture is a eorking silent film that will please audiences anywhere, although it is a mighty hard job seemingly to pull audiences into the Colony. There is a fault there, and while a great many people say that the house would do business if it got the pictures, it would seem that some sort of a consistent poliey in regard to its stage shows would have some effect at the box office. The shows that the house has been playing sinee the first of the year are neither fish nor fowl. They are not good, neither are they rotten, possibly mediocre is the word that describes them most aptly. When they have a good band they have poor specialties and then when the band is not so good the specialties are better.

If the house cannot afford good entertainment why not cut it out altogether and just give the audienee pictures and an organ, either that or go to a whooping jazz stage show that will at least keep up with the others offered on the street. There are two policies and a third might be to get away from the jazz entirely and get a high elass string quintet, with eoneert singers and go in for the classical stuff.

This week's stage show is a flop. There is a new band at the house, eleven hot players under the direetion of Alex Hyde. They are a good musical combination and Hyde manages to move them along nicely. But there are a eouple of girls that are terrible and a master of ceremonies that is awful.

The orchestra opens with "Where The Shy Little Violets Grow," winning a hand on it. Then Eddie Moran, "The 100 Per Cent Talking Comedian," steps front and center and starts a routine of old gags that would make any audienee weep. If the old Western Burlesque Wheel were still in existenee Eddie Moran would possibly be a third rate comedian with one of the shows on it. "She's Funny That Way," by the orchestra, follows and then Ann Woods does a number. Possibly Ann is a comedienne, but no one would ever know it from her performance at the Colony. She does "That's All I Want to Know" with Alex Hyde doing straight for her and it goes over and lays there. Walter Donahue, a dancer, was the best thing in the stage entertainment. He handed the audienee a routine of steps that left them asking for more. Hotsie Totsie, a blue singer in the bill, is enough to make anyone blue with her singing. Alex Hyde also does a violin solo during the show and managed to pull a hand for his efforts.

The Pathe Sound News with Reba Crowford, the Salvationist as a feature, the Yale Prom and the cross eountry flight filled in nicely. If some coast producer doesn't grab Reba for a talking star then they don't know nothing, a condition of which they have oft been accused. The news ran about 10 minutes, the feature, "Ned McCobb's Daughter," an hour and seven minutes and the stage entertainment a little more than half an hour. A cartoon "Oswald" comedy got a few laughs.

Paramount Show Not Satisfactory As Entertainment For Broadway

THE program at the Paramount this week is a flop in almost every particular. That goes right down the line from the feature to the presentation unit, the organ solo by Jesse Crawford and the Paramount News. There is but one bright spot and that is a eomedy short subjeet of Donald Ogden Stewart entitled "Traffie Regulations."

The show is scheduled to run two hours and nineteen minutes. Rubinoff and the house orchestra open it with a medley of Johann Strauss Melodies which gives Ruby a chance to fiddle a solo and as long as that opportunity is given the boy he'll say that the overture is great. The news weekly is entirely silent from the Paramount News, running three minutes.

Donald Ogden Stewart has the next seven minutes and manages to make the audience laugh during the entire time. The release, "Traffie Regulations," is a topieal one for New York only as it deals with eonditions with which New Yorkers are familiar.

Jesse Crawford in his organ recital offered three numbers. They were "Blossoms," "My Angelina" and "I'm Sorry Sally." Not one of these is ever destined to be a popular hit with the public, judging from the reaction on the part of a crowded house on Sunday. "Blossoms" is the theme song for Douglas McLean's "The Carnation Kid" which is to be the feature at the house next week.

"Carnival Coektail" is the title of the

Rothafel's Stage Show Overshadows "Ghost Talks", Current Week's Feature

THE manner in which S. L. Rothafel manages week after week to frame a stage entertainment for the Roxy that will keep the crowds coming in spite of the fact that the usual screen entertainment falls below the average that the other big houses on the street get, has long been the talk of the wise inside showfolk on the Main Stem. This week is just another example of smart showmanship on the part of the master showman of them all when it comes to figuring out a surefire bet in getting the public to walk up to the window and lay their money on the line. It is a case of where the stage entertainment once again overshadows that which the screen offers, even though the screen production is a 100 per cent talker.

The funny part of it all is that the public in general are pretty much as wise as the Broadway show mob as to what is pulling the big grosses at the Roxy.

For the current week the screen feature is "The Ghost Talks" a Fox Movietone 100 per cent talker. It runs an hour and ten minutes and gets some laughs but in the main it is far from being satisfactory entertainment on the screen. The entire show runs two minutes over two hours, with fourteen minutes given over to the newsreels, making it an hour and 24 minutes of screen show and 38 minutes of stage entertainment, yet the latter carries the burden.

At the opening of the show the center of the three organs rises into view with Reine Valerie perched atop of the console and Emil Velazco on the player's bench. Miss Valerie sings "Me and the Man in the Moon" to Mr. Velazco's organ accompaniment and the audience likes the innovation. The little novelty has three minutes of the time.

A combined overture and tableau are next offered. The composition selected for the orchestra being "My Country" by Mortimer Wilson. It is a medley of strains of national patriotic songs especially arranged and during its concluding minute a tableau showing Gen. George Washington praying on the snow covered ground at Valley Forge is revealed. This was surefire for applause this week. Eight minutes in all.

"A Quaint Bouquet" was the title of the first stage unit which was in two scenes. Opening with a solo dance by Patricia Bowman in butterfly costume, she flitting down from a huge profile of roses, the scene is changed to eighteen huge blossoms on a platform which a moment later is revealed as the eighteen ballet girls, who step down for a very effective ballet and then make way for the 32 Roxyettes to step to the strains of "Where The Shy Little Violets Grow" and you have never heard this number really played until you hear the big Roxy orchestra render it. Then for the finale there is a floral grouping that pulled a terrific hand from the house. Twelve minutes was devoted to this, with Aldo Bomonte and Jeanne Mignolet vocalizing during one portion of it.

Two silent shots opened and closed the Magazine with Fox Movietone holding the balance. The opening shot was from the Fox silent news showing the Prince of Wales making his visit to the starving miners, the closing shot being a clip from Paramount News of Lindy's Central American flight. Five Movietone shots sandwitched between had two subjects that got over tremendously with the audience, the first of these was the cat fight on the back yard fence and the other was the battle between the fox terrier and the rooster. The news ran 14 minutes.

"Gigolette" was the title of the final stage flash. It is a glorified presentation of the once popular "Apache Dance" but staged in such manner as to revive its popularity. The only fault that one could find with its staging is that there is too much action on the scene during the first few minutes of the action.

Holiday Helps B'way Theatres As Lent Starts

is the Strand where the Warner Bros. were presenting "Conquest." This picture was a weak sister and all the daily papers panned it, yet with $37,321 to its credit at the box-office it shows up as 7½ per cent above the 100 per cent average of the house business.

Both the Colony and the little Cameo were in the class of over 100 per cent in business. At the former house Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnston were making a personal appearance with their South African Hunt film "Simba" and business there was $14,500 on the week. At the Cameo "The Lash of the Czar" did $8,064 and was held over for this week.

"The Broadway Melody" at the Astor came in on its first week and broke the existing record for that house which was held by "The Big Parade." That picture for the week ending Jan. 2, 1926 turned in a box-office return of $23,733 and this included the New Year's Eve and holiday week of business. Last week at the Astor "The Broadway Melody" hung up figures of $25,448.50, which bettered the "Big Parade" record by $1,715.50.

Richard Barthelmess in "Weary River" also hung up a record for the Central Theatre last week by doing $23,001.25 which gives that picture a rating of 107 9/10 per cent, the compilation being made on the three weeks that the picture has been in the house because of the fact that the admission scale has been advanced to $2.50 top over the week ends for this engagement.

"Redskin" at the Criterion came through with $13,071 on the week while "The Bellamy Trial" which is in the final week of a three week's run turned in $7,928.50. Lupe Valez in "The Wolf Song" comes into the house Saturday night.

A box-office surprise in percentage figuring came to light in the receipts of "The River" at the Gaiety where the picture did $12,165 for its ninth week on Broadway and rated 136 per cent against the average business of the house.

"My Man" finished its run at Warner's with the five days ending last Thursday night and showed $11,299.75, while "The Singing Fool" in its 23rd week showed $32,562.25 at the Winter Garden.

Charles Niegemeyer Publix Unit playing the house. It has twelve Foster Girls and they are by far the best of the offering. The girls in addition to handling several song and dance numbers during the revue go to rope aerobatics and the flying rings for the finish. Three principals are carried, a comedian, straight man and a "blues" singer. The latter with two numbers, "I'll Never Ask For More" and "Do It Again" proved to be very bad. She couldn't handle the first number at all, going off key continually, and faring but little better with her second effort. Frank Marsh was the straight man with the act and carried a burden. The comedian, Joe Besser, worked along burlesque lines. "Strange Cargo" was the screen feature.

Million Dollar House Equipped, Runs To Silents

Kansas City Plaza Manager Says Patrons Like Good Old Style Films

There is one theatre in Kansas City, at least, which is not falling in line with the popular craze for sound and talking pictures. It is the new $1,000,000 Plaza Theatre, second run suburban house, which had its formal opening not long ago. The theatre is equipped with Vitaphone and Movietone, but so convinced is H. A. Jones, manager, that his patrons like good silent pictures that he recently has billed several features with this line inserted in his advertising:

"This is not a sound picture!"

"I have nothing in particular against sound pictures," Mr. Jones said, "but many of my patrons have told me that they preferred a good silent picture to the scratching and numbling of a talking or sound picture. The truth of the matter is, I think, that the silent picture leaves more to the imagination of the audience. We have no thought of discontinuing sound and talking pictures, but it will be our policy to mix them up a bit and try to please all types of people in our audience. After all, that is all any theatre manager can hope to accomplish, isn't it?"

Matthews New Sales Manager For Scoredisc

Arthur J. Abrams, president of the Scoredise Service Corporation, manufacturers of a device to be used in connection with non-synchronous sound reproduction machines, has named George I. Matthews sales manager for the company. Matthews for many years has been a sales executive in the motion picture industry.

In adition to his duties as sales manager, Matthews will also serve the company as vice-president. He will start on a tour of the key cities of the country in the near future to arrange for sales representatives and plan demonstrations.

Warner, First National To Concentrate First On All Talking Versions

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—With all Warner Brothers and First National pictures carrying full dialogue in the future, Jack Warner has instructed production executives at both studios to concentrate entirely on the talking versions of all releases, and disregard the silent pictures until after the Vitaphone talker has been finished.

This is a radical departure from the previous method of making Warner and First National talk versions. It was the rule to shoot the silent picture first, and then insert the dialogue where needed. In this manner the silent film would be used as a basis for the talker. By the new method, the system is reversed, with the talker being used as a basis for the silent version, with a few added scenes and titles inserted in the silent version to make it acceptable for the unwired houses.

Morris Plan, In Agreement With General Electric, To Finance Sales

is handed $184. He pays the full $200 in twelve equal payments.

The contract of the Industrial Finance Corporation with the General Electric Company provides for the financing of sales of home commodities. Among the principal products to be launched will be the home motion picture projection machines, which the RCA hopes eventually will be as numerous within the homes as the radio is today.

RCA Photophone is planning an extensive program of short subjects to be seen and heard within the home. These, it is contended, will not in any way interfere with theatre attendance as the subjects, it is claimed, will be of an entirely different nature than those displayed on the screens of motion picture houses. It is said they will be largely of an educational nature with variations now and then in the form of entertainment that will in no way conflict with theatre programs.

RCA's Position

RCA executives contend, as a matter of fact, that the home projectors will stimulate theatre trade in that the films they provide for the home will make new converts to the movie houses; that many who are not now interested will, after seeing films within the homes, want to see the more important feature films of the theatres.

The plan of loans to be adopted for the home projectors will be different than any that might be made to the exhibitor. Equipment for the theatre does not become the property of the owner of the theatre as it is acquired only under lease from the electric companies, the lease extending over a period of years. The theatre equipment, therefore, cannot be used as collateral.

The home equipment, on the other hand, will be sold outright and will be considered as sufficient collateral for the advancement of the down payment or such other percentages of the original payment as is agreed upon. The financing of these home projectors, it is said, will be done both through dealers and to individuals.

"Reduction of financing cost to a minimum and permanent stabilization of consumer credit in order that the nation's purchasing power may be maintained at its present high level," was explained by Arthur J. Morris, president of the corporation involved, as the underlying purpose of the proposed new system. Continuing he said:

"The consumer banks will make personal loans, discount installment paper, write life and property insurance, negotiate amortization mortgages on homes, sell high grade securities on the installment plan and offer other credit accommodations suited to the requirements of the individuals.

"Labor saving and other devices that are now sold on the time payment plan through the Industrial Finance Corporation and its subsidiaries, will cost the purchaser less than in the past. Through local operation, the service to consumer and dealer will be improved."

Vitaphone "Advance Agents" Gives Complete Campaign To Exhibitors

VITAPHONE has prepared a pamphlet mimeograph form that is termed an "Advance Agent" and it should be of incalculable value to the exhibitor who will follow its content carefully.

It is a campaign that is to be inaugurated thirty days before the first showing of a Vitaphone picture and it takes the exhibitor step by step through every intervening day until the opening of the first sound picture.

Starting thirty days in advance it tells the exhibitor to order his block paper to hill the surrounding towns and to start a "whisper" campaign by telling prominent residents about the marvel that is coming to town.

In regular order day by day come the following instructions:

"Confer with the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce on means of interesting residents of other towns in your opening. Arrange with local merchants to run a line in their copy welcoming Vitaphone. Call on the Mayor. Get him to issue a statement to the newspapers on the value of Vitaphone to your city; also secure permission to stretch banners across principal streets.

"Check up with your bill posting on the best locations. Call on the leading clergymen. Tell them about Vitaphone and how through it the sermons of the leading clerics may be perpetuated for posterity. Sell them the idea of talking about Vitaphone from the pulpit.

"Your opening is only twenty days ahead. Make a trip personally to the newspapers in surrounding towns; talk to the editors and plant your advance stories. Country editors should get advertising copy ten days in advance of your opening. Mount beaver board cut-outs on either end of your marquee. Set your window displays. Start sniping campaign on all country roads beginning ten miles out. Start newspaper advertising campaign.

"Ten days in advance follow up on Chamber of Commerce, Lions, Rotarian, Civitan and Kiwanis club luncheons. The engineer in charge of the local telephone office can discuss Vitaphone for you. Place stand in your lobby containing opinions of New York critics. Mail invitations to your city officials with requests for written replies. Invite newspaper reporters to your theatre to meet and interview engineer sent to you by Western Electric Company.

"Four days in advance dress your lobby for the opening. Arrange with Commissioner or Chief of Police for detail to your house on opening night. Two days in advance a special Western Electric operator will arrive to work with and instruct your own operator in operation of equipment. One day in advance arrange for editorials in all daily papers with statements from the mayor and heads of civic organizations."

Gus Sun Sees Vaudeville Coming Back To Its Own

Declares Picture Houses Already See Need Of Variety

Gus Sun, veteran vaudeville agent, declares that the vaudeville theatre is coming back into its own despite the popularity of sound pictures. He says that the fear some vaudeville managers once had that the talkies would put vaudeville out of existence need no longer be entertained.

Speaking through Homer Near, his general manager, Mr. Sun says:

"In the first place, when sound pictures first started and the houses that played vaudeville installed them, we thought it would eliminate vaudeville, and thought it was really going to work a hardship on vaudeville. But we are hearing from managers who have already installed sound pictures, and had them in some time, and they are advising us to go ahead and book vaudeville along with the sound pictures, as their patrons want stage attractions as well as sound pictures, silent pictures, etc. So we are really encouraged. We do not think for one minute but that sound pictures are here to stay, but when the newness and the novelty idea of it wears off, some of the managers find they still need vaudeville also. We could name you probably twenty-five towns that installed sound pictures in the past six to nine months, and they are now playing vaudeville, either alternating with sound pictures or playing them with same. There is no question but what sound pictures will hurt the proposition of vaudeville in almost every vaudeville house the first three to six months they are installed, but after that practically every house in the average size town finds they invariably have to use vaudeville also. The big cities are, and will always have, their straight picture houses playing sound pictures the same as they had straight picture houses playing silent pictures, though they are not going to eliminate vaudeville in the regular vaudeville houses to the extent that we at first thought."

RKO Studios On Coast Undergoing Much Expansion

An extensive program of physical expansion of Radio Pictures RKO studios is under way on the Coast. In addition to a new sound stage and two more sound chambers in existing stages, there will be created a complete special effects department, in which will be included all of the intricate detail necessary for designing and building special effects for Radio Pictures.

A new power house is to be erected and a considerable amount of additional incandescent lighting equipment will be purchased. Two projection rooms will be immediately treated for sound reproduction. Construction of a building for the storage and maintenance is planned.

Awards of Merit Made by Academy

Judges Decide Upon Leaders In Picture Phases

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—The first annual Awards of Merit by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were announced this week. Nominations for the honored individuals and companies were made by the members of each branch of the industry to the judges of that branch. The final selections, following eliminations, were turned over to a central board of judges who made the awards.

Awards of this nature will be an annual feature of the Academy's work. No set rule of conditions govern making selections, because of the variable conditions in the industry due to talking pictures. Twelve awards, to the five different branches of the industry, were made, plus two special awards of a nature not included in any one branch. The branches are productions, acting, writing, direction, and technical.

The Central Board of Judges for Merit Awards comprises Alec B. Francis, Sid Grauman, Frank Lloyd, Tom Geraghty, and A. George Volck. The period for which awards are made includes all pictures during the year ending August 1, 1928. The individual awards follow:

Emil Jannings—first award for his performances in "The Way of All Flesh" and "The Last Command." Honorable mention to Richard Barthelmess for his performances in "The Noose" and "The Patent Leather Kid."

Janet Gaynor—first award for her performance in "Seventh Heaven," "Sunrise" and "The Street Angel." Honorable mention to Gloria Swanson for her performance in "Sadie Thompson," and to Louise Dresser for her performance in "A Ship Comes In."

Frank Borzage—first award for directing dramatic picture "Seventh Heaven." Honorable mention to Herbert Brenon for directing "Sorrell and Son," and to King Vidor for directing "The Crowd."

Lewis Milestone—first award for directing comedy picture "The Two Arabian Knights." Honorable mention to Ted Wilde for directing "Speedy."

Ben Hecht—first award for writing the original story "Underworld." Honorable mention to Lejos Biro for writing "The Last Command."

Benjamin Glazer—first award for adaptation of "Seventh Heaven." Honorable mention to Alfred Cohn for adapting "The Jazz Singer," and to Anthony Coldewey for adapting "Glorious Betsy."

Joseph Farnham—first award for title writing. Honorable mention to George Marion, Jr. and Gerald Duffy.

Charles Rosher and Karl Struss—first awards for cinematography of "Sunrise". Honorable mention to George Barnes for cinematography of "Sadie Thompson," "The Devil Dancer" and "Magic Flame."

William C. Menzies—first award for art direction of "The Tempest" and "The Dove." Honorable mention to Rochus Gliese for "Sunrise" and Harry Oliver for "Seventh Heaven."

Roy Pomeroy—first award for engineering effects in "Wings." Honorable mention to Nugent Slaughter and Ralph Hammeras.

Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation—first award for the production of the most outstanding picture—"Wings." Honorable mention to Fox Company for "Seventh Heaven" and to the Caddo Company for "The Racket."

Fox Company—first award for production of most unique and artistic picture—"Sunrise." Honorable mention to Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation for "Chang," and to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation for "The Crowd."

Special first award to Warner Bros. for producing "The Jazz Singer" the pioneer outstanding talking picture, which has revolutionized the industry.

Special first award to Charles Chaplin for acting, writing, directing and producing "The Circus."

In making the above awards the Board felt that Warner Bros. and Charles Chaplin should be considered separately from the other classified achievements owing to the unique character of their accomplishments.

Paul Perez

Paul Perez' titles decorate the First National production, "Why Be Good?"

Additions to Pathe Stock Co.

Two youthful beauties, Dorothy Ward and Violet Morgan, both in their teens, have been added to the Pathe stock company at the studios in Culver City. The first is a blonde protege of Phyllis Haver while Miss Morgan is a brunette newcomer, having worked on neither stage nor screen.

Cecilia B. De Mille

Cecilia B. De Mille, daughter of Cecil B. De Mille, appears in a conspicuous role in "The Godless Girl," her father's personally directed production for Pathe.

Change in Schedule

Because of the necessity of shooting scenes in the snow season, Pathe has placed "High Voltage" ahead of "The Flyin' Fool" on the production program. Howard Higgins and a unit have just returned from Montana, where they shot scenes for the Bill Boyd vehicle.

In "Dynamite"

George Fawcett, Robert Edeson and Joel McCrea have been signed by Cecil B. DeMille for roles in his "Dynamite" production for M-G-M. Fawcett is taking the part originally assigned the late Theodore Roberts.

Reunited Again

The combination of Louis Wolheim, William Boyd and Director Lewis Milestone, who made "Two Arabian Knights" for United Artists, will again be reunited, this time in an all-talking comedy about soldiers, "Take It Easy." Lupe Valez will appear as the girl in this film, which will also be a United Artists release.

Talkie Version

The silent version of "This Is Heaven," United Artists, completed, Samuel Goldwyn is now making the dialogue version of this, his newest Vilma Banky vehicle.

Darryl Francis Zanuck

J. L. Warner has elevated Darryl Francis Zanuck to the post of associate executive in charge of production.

"Time-Place-Girl"

Gertrude Olmsted was engaged recently by the Warner Bros. to play the romantic lead in the Vitaphone picture, "The Time, The Place and The Girl," which Howard Bretherton is directing. The radio announcers, Gerald King and Bill Raym, formerly at Station KFWB in Los Angeles, will have speaking roles.

"Alimony Annie" Titles

Joseph Jackson is writing titles for Warner Bros.' "Alimony Annie."

Davy's Radio Debut

David Lee, the Warner Bros. youngster star, made his first radio appearance recently over Station KFWB in Hollywood.

Guinn Williams

Guinn Williams' (formerly "Big Boy") work in "My Man" was so well liked by Warner Bros. that the company has signed him to play in two more Vitaphone pictures.

Warners Engage Two Stars

Betty Compson and Edna Murphy, stars of the silent and audible screen, have been signed to Warner contracts.

"The Squall" Cast

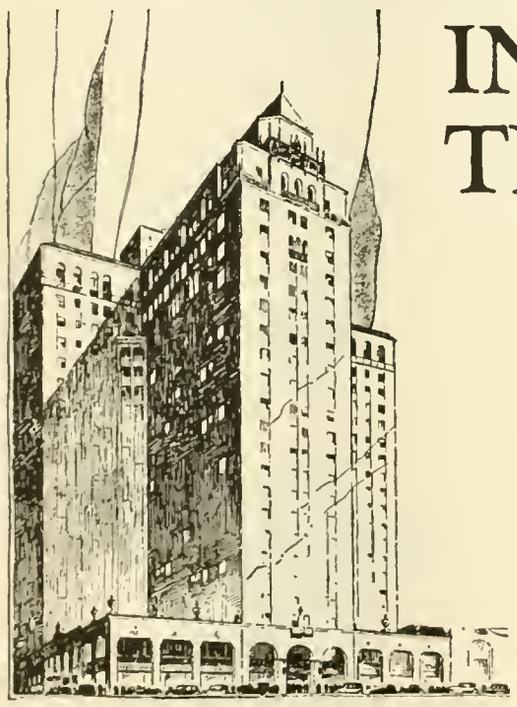
In addition to Myrna Loy, as the gypsy girl, "The Squall," First National's forthcoming special, will have George Hackathorne, Knute Erickson, Harry Cording and others in various roles.

New Burbank Director

First National has acquired a new director, Ralph Dawson by name, a former film editor for Warners, who edited "The Desert Song" and other films. He is a graduate of Univ. of So. Cal. and will be assigned a production shortly.

"White Collars" Rehearsals

Rehearsals for the film version of "White Collars," William de Mille directing, are now in progress at the M-G-M Western studios. Conrad Nagel, Bessie Love and Leila Hyams are the leads.



M-G-M's "Madame X"

"Madame X" wil be an all-talkie production, with Ruth Chatterton in the title role, which M-G-M will shortly produce at Culver City. Raymond Hackett will have a part.

"The Single Standard.

John S. Robertson will direct "The Single Standard," starring Joan Crawford, for M-G-M. The story, serialized in the Hearst papers, is by Adele Rogers St. John. Alice D. G. Miller is now adapting.

Moulin Rouge

Splendid Picture, Well Done

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IF this first release of World Wide Pictures is a fair sample of what may be expected in the way of British importations by the J. D. Williams concern American producers are going to find some real competition from abroad.

"Moulin Rouge" has just about everything from a box-office standpoint. It is not so foreign as most of these imported pictures and it is produced on a lavish scale in all the natural surroundings called for in the story. It is the work of E. A. Dupont.

The synchronization by RCA Photophone is done by both the film and disc process and is as good as the picture. The score is by Joseph Littau of Roxy's and the recording by the RCA Photophone Orchestra. The picture serves to introduce Olga Chekova, European star, and she is a real artist, good to look at and with an abundance of screen talent.

The story has the background of Paris theatrical life. It shows the famous Paris-New York Revue, popular with all visitors to Paris. It is gorgeously mounted, with costumes that will have a tremendous appeal to the feminine movie goers, and a bevy of beauties that will have as great an appeal to the masculine fans. In addition it has thrills, suspense, heart interest and just about everything else that is necessary.

The romance may be a bit far-fetched, but it is not unnatural for a youth to become enamoured with a famed stage beauty even if she is his prospective mother-in-law. That is the story. Here is the seion of one of the wealthiest families in Paris who is to marry the daughter of this darling of the theatre. The girl is just back from school and brings her sweetheart with her to the theatre to see the mother perform. The mother is the toast of Paris. The youth seated in a stage box becomes infatuated with her. His infatuation becomes desperate love. The father of the youth objects to his marriage to the daughter of the star, so the latter makes a personal appeal to the father and he capitulates. Then the devoted mother finds out the true circumstances, that she is the one the youth loves. Here is a powerful situation with the doting mother caring only for the happiness of her daughter, the daughter desperately in love with the youth and the latter thinking all his love is for the mother. It is all logically and satisfactorily worked out in a splendid portrayal of Paris night life.

Drawing Power: It is a picture that should have appeal to all classes. The story is good, lavishly produced and has all the necessary elements to click at any box-office. It lends itself readily to exploitation.

Looping The Loop

A Good Silent Program Feature

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

HAD this picture come along a couple of years ago it would have undoubtedly have been placed in one of the Broadway houses for a run by Paramount, but coming as it does at this stage of the game with the industry wild over sound features it was shifted into the Hippodrome over on Sixth Avenue. But it is a mighty good silent picture.

The story is based on the fact that there is no place in the world of romance for a clown. All that he is good for with women is to give them a laugh. Then setting out on this basis the story disproves this fact.

Werner Krauss, the nearest approach to Jannings left in Germany today, plays the role of the clown. Warwick Ward, who was the heavy in "Variety," has a similar role in this production. He is the handsome acrobat for whom all the girls fall. He is having an affair with a little girl, when she walks in on him and finds him in the embrace of the sharpshooting girl in the show, and as she has left home she stands outside of the theatre in the rain, when the clown leaving the show house sees her and takes her home. Although he has had one disastrous experience in matrimony, he sees in this girl something that he has always longed for—a true wife, but fearing that should she learn that he was a clown she would only laugh at his protestations of love therefore he informs her that he is an electrical engineer and compelled to be at the power house each evening. He showers her with expensive gifts, but one night discovers her in a falsehood. He has given her tickets to the opera but instead she has turned up at the circus especially to see the performance of the prineipal clown so that she may have a good laugh. But the clown believes that she has gone so that she may see the acrobat, and as a result of the spat that follows she runs away and goes to London with the acrobat as his partner. The clown follows, and when the acrobat is injured at the opening performance, he discloses who he really is to the girl and there is a happy ending.

The picture is a UFA production and that speaks for the quality of the film. In direction and camera work it is perfection itself. The cast as far as the two principal men are concerned could not be improved on.

Drawing Power: It will please audiences most anywhere that they haven't gone crazy about talkies. In fact it might be a good idea to play it and advertise it in advance as a silent picture, one that they can see without being annoyed by the "squawkies."

Produced by UFA and distributed by Paramount. Length: 6,676 feet. Running time, an hour and six minutes. Released, March 16, 1929. No direction credited on screen.

The Bridge of San Luis Rey

Looks Like a Detour

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

ALTHOUGH Thornton Wilder's novel is rated as a best seller in the book world, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" does not show enough to make it much more than an ordinary program release.

Caught in preview form of about nine reels, the slow tempo may be speeded up considerably with additional cutting, but nevertheless, there are a number of faults in direction and characterization that will keep the picture out of the "special" classification.

The screen story follows the novel rather closely, except that the film adaptation includes a few heated love affairs that were not in the author's original. Basically, the novel was far from good screen material. There were too many separate narratives that had to be developed to reach the climax.

Lily Damita, as the fiery, sexy, gold-digging dancer, runs riot all over the sprocket holes. She gives a characterization that seems to be a combination of Doraldina, Gilda Gray, Raquel Meller and an Apache dancer. Perhaps that is all right; but one stops to wonder how those living in the eighteenth century could have heard of the dance fame of Gilda and Doraldina. Miss Damita over-acts and overemphasizes to such an extent that the preview audience laughed in ridicule on many occasions.

If the picture does nothing else, it will confirm the opinions of many that Raquel Torres will find a place in the starring ranks of pictures. Her performance as the neophyte is one of the brightest spots of the entire production. Henry Walthall, Michael Vavitch, and Ernest Torrence provide their usual high standard of acting.

Something should be said about the photography and settings. Both are of high excellence; with a number of particularly effective "shots."

Drawing Power: May attract the intelligentia and those that have read the novel. But it looks like a hard task to sell the average picture theatre audience in its present form. There is a likelihood that the picture will be re-cut and perhaps certain sequences re-taken to put it into better releasing shape.

The Redeeming Sin

First Night Audience Razzed It

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"FLEURETTE, you are a bad actress," said George Stone in the role of a Sewer Rat to Dolores Costello in one of the scenes of "The Redeeming Sin" at Warner's last Friday night and the first night audience agreed with what Georgie said and made it plain that it was thinking the same thing long before the line was spoken. The audience from that point on started in to razz the picture and laughed uproariously at what were intended to be tense dramatic moments.

There is one thing certain and that is that "The Redeeming Sin" more than any other production that the company has made does reveal the limitations of Vitaphone production as far as exterior scenes are concerned. In this case the sets that were used for Paris Montmartre scenes were so obviously sets that it looked as though the picture had been shot back in the days of 15 years ago.

L. V. Jefferson is responsible for the story of "The Redeeming Sin" which was adapted by Harvey Gates, while Joseph Jackson furnished the titles and the dialog. It was these titles and the dialog that were as much responsible for the changing of what was intended to be a melodrama into a howling comedy as anything else, except possibly the acting of Warner Richmond.

Richmond plays the role of a knife-throwing Apache and so overacts as to make everything that he does appear absolutely foolish. The Broadway crowd howled their heads off at him. They did the same at both Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, the latter giving one of the worst performances that he has turned out since his return to the screen in talking productions. Miss Costello was markedly bad whenever she tried to speak lines, but in the silent sequences she was her old self.

It is hard to reconcile a vivacious street gamin of one moment on the screen with a woman who speaks with very much of an Elsie Ferguson manner in the talking sequence that is a continuation of the same scene. As a matter of fact the Warners might take Miss Costello out of the type of roles that she has been playing and give her the type of things that Miss Ferguson did on the stage and possibly create an entirely new following for her.

The two best performances of the picture were contributed by Georgie Stone and little Phillipe DeLacy, with Nina Quartaro not at all bad in the scenes in which she appeared and spoke.

Another thing that talkie producers want to bear in mind and that is that the motion picture audiences are not in readiness to accept stories laid in a foreign scene in straight English dialog as would be acceptable to the audiences of the legitimate theatre. The picture audiences want their atmosphere and therefore for the time being, until they are educated, when a picture of this type is produced the players will have to assume accents if they haven't them naturally.

Drawing Power: Dolores Costello's name, and then the audiences will be disappointed.

"Frank Orth And Company"

("Meet the Wife"—Vitaphone)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

FRANK ORTH is presenting his vaudeville sketch of similar title as a Vitaphone short subject, being assisted by a company of two people. There are any number of laughs in the skit and Orth personally makes good as a screen comic of the dead pan variety. There are two scenes in the offering, the first takes place in the club where Orth meets the bridegroom of a day and cannot understand how one so recently married is not with the bride. He is invited to the home of the newlyweds at 4 A. M. and the bride offers to cook them a meal, to give up her bed for the guest and never once reproaches the husband for being out late. It is too good to be true and Orth shoots her for a blackout laugh. The running time is nine minutes and the laughs are throughout. It's good program entertainment.

She Goes To War

And Makes It A Tedious Trip

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

THE equation of sound will undoubtedly improve "She Goes To War" tremendously. The fact that it still is to undergo cutting of several hundred feet from the version previewed in Alhambra, Calif., last week is also encouraging. Nevertheless, taking these things into consideration, there's no getting away from the thought that Inspiration Pictures and Victor and Edward Halperin had the makings of a very unusual story in "She Goes To War" and lost it en route.

According to the title, and what has been led to expect, "She Goes To War" was to give a new insight on war angles. It was to tell of women's work during the great conflict of how they cast aside pride, social standing, or any other false status of breeding and got down on their hands and knees to scrub floors and labored to make the boys more comfortable. This is what "She Goes To War" started to do. Then, evidently some one got cold feet and suddenly discarded all that for the hokum of having the heroine don her cowardly lover's uniform to save his face; go forth into battle; and kill the machine-gunner who was holding up the advance.

There is no denying that it has been well told, but the trouble is simply that it isn't worth telling. With sound it will go great. That it will draw money into box-offices where people haven't tired of war pictures is also conceded. That money, however, will be attracted by the unusual possibilities for exploitation, rather than by mouth-to-mouth advertising. What annoys this reviewer, and will bother others, is simply throwing away such a fine opportunity to do something different which is at the same time box-office. All "different" pictures do not, necessarily have to be box-office flops. And it seems that was the fear which caused the sudden change in plot here.

There's quite a bit of drag to the earlier sequences. This being the second preview, it will undoubtedly be corrected. Eleanor Boardman is fine in the title role. Inspiration's new discovery, John Holland, shows great possibilities for future b.o. values.

Drawing Power: Depends most on how your audiences feel about war pictures. Plenty of exploitation foundations, particularly in the title and what the theme starts out to be.

THEME: Story of a society girl whose future husband turns yellow. A gas-station operator from her home town who has always loved her, is captain of the regiment. She goes to France for canteen work, is assigned to the same town with that regiment. When her fiancee passes out with liquor before a battle, she replaces him in uniform and saves the battle.

Produced by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., in association with Victor and Edward Halperin for distribution by United Artists. Directed by Henry King. From the novel by Rupert Hughes; scenario by Howard Estabrook; adaptation by Fred de Gresac. Titles by John Monk Saunders. Length, eight and a half reels.

The Ghost Talks

He May Talk But He Won't Walk

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is the first full length 100 per cent talking picture that was shot on the Fox lot on the Coast. It was made before "In Old Arizona" but held back in releasing. The reason is apparent. The picture shows that it was made when the making of 100 per cent talkers on film were still in the experimental stage, and since that time other companies have released talkers so far superior to this one that there is no need to make comparisons. There are spots in this picture where the recording is very bad, particularly the scenes where Stepin Fechet, the colored comedian, has lines. There are but one or two scenes in which the audience can understand what he is saying. From a box office standpoint there is one way to look at this picture and that it that it will do business at about the same ratio that an ordinary program production would in the silent days. As against the lately released talkers this stacks up as a program picture and nothing more. Had this picture been turned loose on the public as far back as last November it would have been a riot for it would then have been the best to date, holding it back let the other and better pictures come ahead of it and took the edge off the offering.

"The Ghost Talks" is a screen version of the play "Badges" by Max Marcin and Edward Hammond. The dialogue for the screen talker was finally completed by Harlan Thompson and Frederick H. Brennan and Lew Seiler directed the production. It is known that they worked under handicaps, especially Seiler who had an improvised sound stage in which to do his work. Atop of that the leads were two players who had never worked in front of a camera. Incidentally Seiler handled those two kids, Helen Twelvetrees and Charles Eaton, in a manner that has brought them through with flying colors. It is unfortunate that Helen Twelvetrees was assigned to a role that calls for a lisping Miss, because a number of people that see her will think that it is her voice that records imperfectly, while in reality she records clearly and the lisp, which most of the companies have to fight against in a great many of their players, is in this case part of the characterization.

The story is one that is going to appeal particularly to the youngsters. Little Charlie Eaton is a correspondence school detective who is acting as a night clerk in a hotel where the little heroine seeks shelter until she can recover $1,000,000 in bonds which her dead uncle stole. She wants to return them to the Government and there are a quartet of crooks trailing her to get their hands on the loot. Naturally the kid detective suspects two of the crooks but believes the others to be Government postal inspectors, but in the final moments of the film he learns the truth and rounds them all up.

It is a picture that is built for laughs and there are a couple of moments where the old hoax of the skeleton ghost caressing the head of the half asleep negro will bring howls from the audience.

In the cast Earle Foxe distinguishes himself, while Carmel Myers as a vampish crook also makes good. Joe Brown, who slipped over a hit in "Dressed To Kill," proves that he is "there" when it comes to the talkers as does also Henry Sedley. Clifford Dempsey, a stage actor of note, handles the role of the regular house detective at the hotel in a convincing manner and gets over.

Drawing Power: Play it up as the first feature length all-talking comedy with the screen's two latest and youngest talking stars to be.

Produced and distributed by the Fox Films Corp. Running time: an hour and ten minutes. Released: Feb. 16, 1929. A Movietone production, directed by Lew Seiler.

"The Paragons"

("In the Tropics"—Vitaphone)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THERE is no trick to this one; it's nothing but a straight singing quartet. Vitaphone is trying to make it look like a production by putting four American soldiers in a song and dance honky-tonk in the canal zone. It is a saloon with a piano player and a soubret who steps up to the piano and chirps "Come On Baby" in a rather suggestive manner and without any melody or voice. Then the four boys step up and run through three numbers in close harmony.

Strange Cargo

Draggy Mystery Play With Dialogue

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

SEEMINGLY picture producers are of the idea that as long as they have talk in a picture it is certain to do business no matter how bad it is. If that is the case they certainly are going to kill the goose that is laying the golden egg. With pictures like this they are going to drive the public away from talking pictures. The only reason that the first run exhibitor will have for playing this is the fact that his house is established as a theatre playing talking features and because of the lack of better pictures with talk to keep up the policy he will have to put it in.

Benjamin Glazer is credited with being both author and director for "Strange Cargo." After viewing it the advice to him is that he stick to writing and leave direction to some one else, for in trying to do both as in this instance he has done a bad job both as a writer and director.

The story deals with a mystery murder of an English nobleman, formerly in the Indian service of his government, aboard his own private yacht. The first reel is utilized in planting suspicion and reason for the crime prior to it having been committed. Then the balance of the footage is devoted to running down the murderer with most everyone under suspicion.

Sir Richard Barclay, the role enacted by Kyrle Bellew, has while in the Indian Service roused the enmity of the Indian priests and they have assigned one of their number to bring about his death. As the picture opens, the scene being the main saloon of the yacht, Sir Richard is forcing his attention upon a young lady who is the guest aboard of his sister. One of the male guests comes upon the scene and threatens Sir Richard in the event that he again molests the girl. Then Sir Richard a few moments later has a scene with the ship's doctor which later tends to throw suspicion on that person. Also aboard there is a stowaway, who is the brother of the wife that Sir Richard has just divorced and who has sworn vengence. But none of these are guilty. For finally the yogi is discovered hidden beneath one of the settees in the saloon and when brought out of his trance promises to re-enact the scene at the time of the murder and bring about the return of the missing man. He goes into what seems a trance, again turns out the lights, pulls the body of the dead man out of a suit of armor and tries to escape in the confusion that follows, but is captured and thus endeth the tale. A draggy affair, with tiresome dialogue, and devoid of action.

A cast of fourteen stage players were enlisted for the various roles, with Frank Reicher, Ned Sparks and the actor playing the steward, possibly Harry Allen, carried off the honors. Neither of the two women in the principal ingenue roles, Lee Patrick and June Nash, show any particular promise for the screen. Josephine Brown in a character role handled her assignment very nicely.

Drawing Power: The fact that it is a talking picture, that is all.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Length: 0,000 feet. Running time: an hour and twenty-eight minutes. Released: Jol. 00, 1900. Written and directed by Benjamin Glazer.

"Traffie Regulations"
(Donald Ogden Stewart Paramount Talkie)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a monolog by Donald Ogden Stewart covering the new Grover Whalen traffic regulations instituted in the theatre district in New York. It is decidedly funny to New Yorkers and will be to people living anywhere within a radius of possibly 200 miles. Outside of that territory it is hard to predict just how audiences will take it. But where they are familiar with New York and the new Whalen plan it will be a howl from start to finish. Stewart has a corking comedy style in delivery and he makes his points tell. A map of two side streets in the district together with the cross avenues furnish him with a scene for operations and he makes the most of it. The short reel opens a possibility for local topical subjects that is being touched here for the first time. Runs seven minutes.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' "The Iron Mask" had its world premiere at the New York Rivoli Theatre on Thursday evening, February 21, the performance beginning about nine o'clock. All seats were reserved with a scale of prices ranging from one to five dollars. Following the opening night it was presented at the Rivoli at popular prices, eliminating the regular run at a dramatic theatre at the usual $2 scale.

"Mal Hallett Orchestra"
(Vitaphone Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

MAL HALLETT'S trick moustache gets a laugh from the audience when he faces the camera. Otherwise this is just another jazz orchestra in a series of three numbers. They open with "Doin' The Racoon," which is followed by "Tin Pan Parade" with the boys trying for comedy and not getting over, and finally "We Love The College Girl" and here two of the members of the band, using two dumpy figures dressed as college flappers, manage to get a laugh with a little comedy. The band, however, did not seem to record very tunefully in this particular instance. Possibly it was the fault of the number.

ARTHUR LAKE "pops up" again in another release of the "Horace In Hollywood" comedy series. This latest number rolls along on the usual Lake par, and although nearly all the gags are familiar, the film will satisfy the average audience.

Horace (Arthur Lake), and his rival, Hatch, are both wild about the girl Rosy. The boys 'phone Rosy at the same time and their wires cross. She promises to spend the day at the beach with the first arrival at her home. Horace captures the prize, but Hatch follows. At the beach, Hatch gets in his revenge, for he backs a huge truck into Horace's hired ford. He then persuades a bathing vamp to make love to Horace, so that he might have Rosy for himself. He succeeds in this, but Rosy gives him the slip and makes up with Horace. Back in the city, Horace is at a loss as to how to square the damaged car with the garage owner. Just as he is about to confess, a big car hides the smashed lizzie, and Horace makes a getaway.

"Beyond The Smoke"
(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

EDMUND COBB has the starring role in this Universal Western featurette, megaphoned by Director Mitchell. The story of this one has been set against a very pleasing mountain background, and the action, typical of all the outdoor films, offers plenty of hard-riding, and fighting, and a little romance. This number will click with fans of the Western.

A District Attorney and his daughter Myra are peacefully camping in the mountains, when two thugs ride in and attempt to force the Attorney to accompany them to the hangout of "Diamond Jim," a bootlegger who had been indicted in the Attorney's court. The neglected camp fire in the meantime has set things ablaze, and Cobb, a Ranger, arrives on the scene, and learns of the Attorney's plight. The real action of the film occurs, when the Ranger starts out to round up the gang, and finally corrals them in "Diamond Jim's" cabin, where a terrific battle ensues. The law-breakers are brought to justice, the Attorney is relieved of his troubles, and the Ranger gets the girl.

"STEAMBOAT BILL JR."

This picture has appeal for young and old alike excluding, perhaps, the ultra-elite.—Loew's State, Providence, R. I.

"SUBMARINE"

Its title was stressed and the thrills were mentioned as the first of its kind to be brought to the screen. Emphasis was also laid on its sound synchronization and its trio of stars. Audience appeal: for the entire family; strong for men.—Joe Calla, Manager Strand, Canton, O.

Picture, while somewhat of a thriller type, appealed strongly to both men and women and was a high-class film of unusual appeal and drawing power for the box office.—W. J. Coulter, Manager Byrd, Richmond, Va.

"SUNRISE"

Newspaper and billboard advertising should be based on the theme: "What's the lure that makes a man forget home and hearth for passing pleasure?" Film offers exceptionally strong appeal to married folk and should be played up accordingly.—Claire Woods, Manager Royal, Kansas City, Mo.

"THE TRAIL OF '98"

The book by Service offers some exploitation possibilities. Exploit Dolores Del Rio and the spectacles of the snowsilde and fight climaxes in the picture. The story is strong drama and contains action. Audience appeal: for ages and classes.—Harold W. Evans, Manager, Loew's, Richmond, Va.

Featured the title and the author's name and played up the thrills and the names of the stars, especially that of Johnny Downs, who lived in Canton several years ago. Audience appeal: a family picture.—Russell Bovim, Manager, Loew's, Canton, O.

Exploited the spectacular scenes in the feature.—Loew's Valentine, Toledo, O.

A tremendously spectacular and effective dramatization, mingling an historical epoch with a romance and an unusually strong theme depecting the power of gold.—Grant Pemberton, Manager Pantages, Salt Lake City, Utah.

"TRAIL MARRIAGE"

Most advantageous selling point is Sally Eilers; play up as a new star of films as she is very good. Film had strong appeal to regular family trade.—Nat Keene, Manager, Hippodrome, Baltimore, Md.

"THE WOLF OF WALL STREET"

Picture has universal appeal. Advertising was directed toward all types of fans.—Manager L. B. Cool, Colonial, Akron, O.

The selling points in the order of their importance are: George Bancroft, the fact that it's a talkie, the likeliness of a Wall Street yarn; its appeal is to the elite and general patronage. The picture should be especially plugged as Bancroft is in a new kind of role, white collar; if properly played up, the picture will do unusual business. Manager Emil Bernstecker, Metropolitan, Houston, Tex.

Exploitation angles are that it is an all-talkie and a gripping romance of love and speculation with Wall Street background. The patronage to be sought is the young business and juvenile audience.—Greater Palace, Dallas, Tex.

Exploit as a vigorous, vital, gripping 100 per cent talking melodrama, in which every character speaks. Play up George Bancroft as the mighty monarch of money. Audience appeal: a play for everyone. All acclaimed it great.—Howard Price Kingsmore, Manager, Century, Baltimore.

Exploit it as offering the first opportunity to hear George Bancroft on the screen. Audience appeal: for the elite trade.—Walter Markel, Manager, Capitol, Springfield, Mass.

Exploit George Bancroft in his first talking picture, also the singing of Baclanova. Play up the millions at stake in the story. Audience appeal: for all classes.—Des Moines, Des Moines, Ia.

Will pull like plaster in any house. All classes will enjoy it. Feature the star with his wonderful talkie voice and make mention of the clever cast supporting him.—Manager Roy, Tampa, Fla.

Heavily advertised as an all-talkie with special stress on Bancroft as the leading player. Popular melodrama which should do exceptionally well in neighborhood houses where patrons like their emotions expressed in action.—Loew's Ohio, Cleveland, O.

Exploit Bancroft's dominant personality, the strong drama, the excellent dialogue and sound in wired houses. Nancy Carroll's fans will appreciate her appearance. For all ages except children and all classes.—Harry Klein, Manager, Virginia, Atlantic City, N. J.

Stress the thrills of the stock market and the fact that the theme deals with the race for gold and the arms of Bancroft's beautiful wife. For all ages and classes.—L. J. Finske, Manager, Newman, Kansas City, Mo.

"WEARY RIVER"

Barthelmess' singing and talking voice stressed in ads as of more importance than story. Plot adaptable to all kinds of houses and of interest to all ages.—Mgr., Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, O.

"WEST OF ZANZIBAR"

Typical Lon Chaney attraction. By advertising star heavily and playing up locale of story, it should be put over.—Manager, Grand, Paris, Tex.

Feature Chaney's name and dramatic value of story. Recommended for juveniles and male crowd.—Ambrose Nolan, Manager, Avalon, Ottawa, Ont.

Stress the romance and adventure in the plot. Audience appeal: for all ages and classes.—Marvin Murphy, Rochester, N. Y.

Lon Chaney's name and its dramatic value are the foremost selling points. It is recommended for juvenile audiences and the male crowd.—Avalon, Ottawa, Ont.

"WILD ORCHIDS"

Made the old triangle complication seem new. Should go over better in those houses which cater to adults. Stress was made on its romance and the cast in detail.—Allen, Cleveland, O.

Did not carry such wide appeal as sound offerings. Charlotte Greenwood's stage appearance helped the bill considerably. Dance on mezzanine on Monday and Thursday helped the gross on those days.—Manager Maxwell, The Broadway, Portland, Ore.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

By Charles E. Lewis

Theatre Managers--Will They Become Mere Robots?

In a most interesting conversation the other day with Mr. Johnston, whose effort on behalf of the theatre manager is very well known, I found that despite the fact that he is a trade paper editor and his interests must cover the entire industry, he knows what the theatre manager of today is up against. He understands the tremendous effect that the mergers and consolidations of today are creating on the industry in general. And last, but not least, he knows the threatening gesture of theatre mergers on the smothering of the individuality of both the manager and the theatre he runs.

Leaving the big key cities out of this discussion entirely, reveals that the success of many theatres have been, and still is, dependent upon the personal contact between the manager and his community. In the majority of the towns and cities, the average patron wants to be greeted with a friendly gesture when he enters the theatre. They MUST NOT get the impression that they have paid an admission price and having seen the performance they can go home either pleased with what they have seen or dissatisfied with the theatre and the show.

The continual shifting of managers from town to town gives them no chance to become acquainted with their clientele, with their community or with their theatre and the result is that the community spirit is lost in the shuffle and with it, in a large measure, the friendly feeling that is so essential to the theatre's success in its particular city.

The most recent idea among many chain theatre heads that they are in a better position to operate the theatres from their office, located in many instances hundreds of miles from the theatres, is perhaps the most harmful of all ideas that have been the outgrowth of chain theatre acquisition. (The moment you deprive the manager of his individuality you have deprived the theatre of its most valuable asset.) The manager must be a recognized factor in the successful operation of the theatre and to him must be left a large amount of the theatres operation tactics and policy, best suited to the individual needs of the community in which it is located. If he becomes mechanical then he ceases to be human and, after all, it's human beings we want to run the theatres of today. C. E. L.

Let's Get Acquainted

MR. CHARLES E. LEWIS, exhibitor member of the staff of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS maintains an office with the NEWS and will be glad to make the acquaintance of Club members or readers of the NEWS. If you happen to be in the neighborhood, don't hesitate about coming in and getting acquainted. We are always glad to see the managers.

Box Office Check-Up Wins Approval Of Club Members

Immediately after the appearance of the new Box Office Check-Up in last week's issue of the Motion Picture News, the CLUB received many reports from various members commenting upon this new exhibitor aid. To those managers who really want to know how a picture is going over, either in the first- or second-run houses, a glance at the check-up reveals some interesting facts. The Box Office Check-Up of the Motion Picture News is the greatest step ever made by a trade publication in going through great trouble and expense to arrive at something that actually helps the exhibitor. Use the Box Office Check-Up for all it is worth, because it is WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

We Should Hear More Often From Manager Kusel

If pictures speak for themselves, then the CLUB is certainly lining up a fine group of peppy managers. Here we offer, for your information and approval, Harry Kusel, manager of the State Theatre, in South Ozone Park, L. I., N. Y. Harry has won a warm spot in the hearts of the theatre-going public out his way and manages to keep them that way through the excellent shows and service he renders. But knowing Harry is a real "live-wire" means that we should hear from him more often and also that his fellow members want to know "how he puts it over," suppose you sit down and write me how you do it? We are all waiting for something "hot off the griddle" from South Ozone Park. Let's hope we won't be disappointed.

How Belcher Used A Form Letter On "Daughters"

In working out a campaign that differed from the ordinary, W. E. Belcher, of Schine's Riviera Theatre, in Rochester, N. Y., decided on a form letter for "Our Dancing Daughters." But he created a letter that carried a real punch from the first line right down through the entire letter. To start to read it was to go right through to the end. And those who are constantly on the lookout for something new and different, this one will hold a real appeal. Just a suggestion: Drop a line to Mr. Belcher, direct to the theatre, and I am sure, that upon request, he will gladly send you a copy of this letter. We would gladly publish the entire letter, but Mr. Belcher will have to bear with us this time as we are catching up with our mail bag. Get that CLUB spirit of intercommunication and get acquainted with Mr. Belcher direct. "One for all and all for one," (with apologies to Dumas.).

McDonald Qualifies As Real Horatio Alger Character

Charles McDonald, assistant manager of the Tivoli, Chattanooga's de luxe theatre, could well qualify as a hero in that famous author's books. His rise from head usher to the post he now occupies, in the short space of three years, makes one stop to marvel at the efficiency of the young man of today. It would not surprise us to learn that he has been appointed a regular house manager and the fact that he is but eighteen years old, at this writing, means nothing, if he possesses the ability and the desire to "get there."

We wonder whether Charlie has anything to say that would make interesting reading for the members of the CLUB. Surely, after the great strides he has made he ought to be able to write a short letter telling us of his experiences and how he succeeded in his efforts. Let us have it Charlie, also your photo, and CLUB application.

Lloyd Townsend of Oakland, An Active Club Member

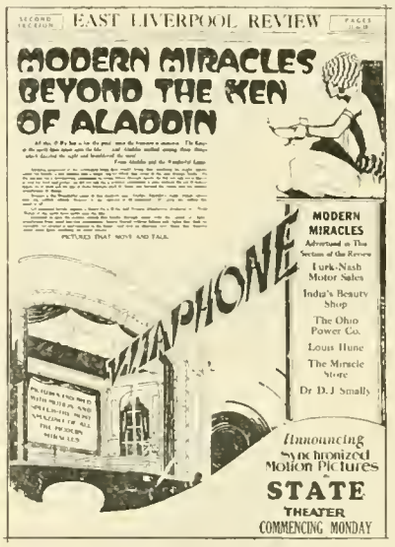
This picture will serve to introduce to the other members, Lloyd Townsend, manager of the New Piedmont Theatre in Oakland, Calif.

Lloyd has just recently joined the "army of showmen" already identified with the CLUB and the CLUB, in turn, is glad to welcome him into the organization. Mr. Townsend has been affiliated with the show business for many years and his ability to properly handle any size house is already well known on the Pacific Coast. He knows how to organize and train a house staff to render the best service possible to his patrons. He knows how to make up ads and readers that sell the picture. He can supervise the program so that it is projected and presented in a neat, showmanlike manner. All these things count in measuring the ability of a manager today and we are confident that we have a real active member in Lloyd. Time will tell.

Special Letter Is On Way To Round Table Members

A special letter has been sent out asking you an important question about advertising. You would be more tickled than your Chairman if you only knew the importance attached to your opinions on questions put up to the members.

I am bringing this matter to your attention, here, for the sole purpose of asking that you send your answer to me by return mail. I want a candid expression from EVERY member. Thank's, boys, for your wonderful cooperation.—C. E. L.



Marpole Beats Club Pulmotor By Very Scant Margin

We were just about to apply the CLUB pulmotor to the town of Lodi, California, but Jack beat us to it by shooting in a real peppy letter which proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that he is very much alive and on the job. Let him speak for himself—"Greetings from 'way out west' again. Have been religiously reading the NEWS since I wrote you last, and especially the Managers' Round Table columns, and must say that I have derived a lot of good ideas from the article written therein."

And then Jack goes on to tell us that he is sending us something interesting, so we will see—what we will see.

Puts Sound Debut Over With 8 Page Newspaper Tie-up

One of the most effective newspaper tie-ups ever brought to our attention to inaugurate "sound" comes to light from East Liverpool, Ohio. The State Theatre and E. E. Bair, the manager, in that city worked up a special section together with the East Liverpool Review, one of the leading papers of the city and between them they produced an eight-page edition which is worthy of more than passing attention. A large number of local advertisers were sold on the idea and practically every one of them worked the name "Vitaphone" into their ads, as well as the special edition slogan "Modern Miracles." The front page, in itself, is an attractive piece of advertising that ought to go a long way towards creating that interest in "sound" entertainment that is so essential at the start. A glance at the first "sound" program shows exceptionally good taste in building up an interesting few hours of entertainment.

The State Theatre was remodeled last summer at a cost of over $100,000, and only recently re-opened. It was impossible to re-open with "sound" as the installation was delayed, but it now swings into the type of shows that should register 100 per cent in East Liverpool.

If the manager of the State, Mr. Bair, is as progressive as his associate, Wm. L. Hendricks, over in Steubenville, then we should hear from that town again very soon.

Indiana Manager Signs Up With Round Table

Alvin Spainhaur, manager of the Indiana Theatre, in Washington, Ind., has just sent us his application for membership in the CLUB. We have heard some nice things about him and now that he is "one of us" we should be receiving some idea of how he puts over the pictures in Washington, Ind. Too bad I did not know him last summer or I would have stopped off in his town for a visit. But we won't pass him up next trip.

Read This Excerpt From W. H. Hall's Recent Letter

In acknowledging our welcoming letter to him as a new CLUB member, W. H. Hall, of the Columbia Theatre, in Baton Rouge, La., writes us a very fine letter. There are some parts of that letter which we are going to use in a future issue of the NEWS, but we will select just the following for your information—"My first suggestion to every manager, who is not reading your columns on theatre operation and publicity is surely overlooking some real valuable suggestions. I predict its (Club's) steady growth and offer my felicitations. . . . "

So now we can all feel that another active member has joined our ranks. What we mean by the word "active" is: to keep us informed of his advertising and exploitation campaigns and send us copies of his newspaper ads. We shall see—what we shall see.

Meet The Youngest Manager On The Chakeres Circuit

Boys, let me make you acquainted with Lee J. Euering, manager of the Majestic Theatre, in Springfield, Ohio, and known throughout the Middle West as the youngest theatre manager in that section. Mr. Euering runs a Vitaphone and Movietone house and, his reputation has been exaggerated, then we can look forward to seeing some mighty fine exploitation ideas for "sound" pictures.

In addition to being a cracker-jack manager, Lee's theatre boasts of one of the finest staff of ushers in the state of Ohio. They are positively an asset to the Majestic and form part of his well-run scheme of how to surround a good show with proper atmosphere and service. We are watching the mail from now on and hope it won't be long before Lee comes through with some stuff.

Manager Alfred F. Weiss Contributes Novel Photo Stunt

When the Florida Theatre, in Jacksonville, selected the following stunt to boost "Shopworn Angel" they hit upon a real live proposition. Manager Alfred F. Weiss, Jr., enclosed torn photos of Nancy Carroll in his mailing list (which happens to be rather large and covers a good portion of Jacksonville). These 8 x 10 photos were cut into three separate parts, the upper part was sent to one section of the town, the middle to another section and the bottom to still another section. These pieces of photos were attached to a letter giving a brief description of the picture and in the last paragraph it was suggested that the communicate with their friends to see if they couldn't match up complete photos, which, when presented at the Box Office was good for a free admission on a specified date. From reports we find that this stunt created lots of talking and when they "talk" they generally come to "see." So additional business was the result. We are wondering whether Mr. Weiss has any more "stunts" up his sleeve that brought some life to the B. O. If so we would like to number him among the "active" members of the CLUB.

You'll Soon Know How Paul Forster Sold The Organist

Ever since we wrote that little story last summer about Paul Forster, in Syracuse, we have been called upon from all over the country to tell "how he does it." So, in response to our request, Mr. Forster has written a brief and well worded story which is just what YOU will want to read and to have both your organist and orchestra leader look through carefully. We find ourselves crowded for space in this issue, due to unusually heavy mail, but we shall make it a point to feature Mr. Forster's story in next week's issue. Look for it and be sure and read it. And thank you, Mr. Forster, for your courtesy.

All The Managers On The Schwartz Circuit To Join Club

According to a letter just received by your Chairman, every house manager on the A. H. Schwartz Century Circuit is going to join the CLUB. The letter was written by William H. Applegate, Jr., Supervising Manager of the Circuit, and he advised us that he was—but wait we will quote from his letter—"I think the CLUB pages in the NEWS are very good and I find them interesting and sometimes profitable."

This is just another example of what the circuit heads think of the CLUB.

Famous Leases Springfield, Mass., DeLuxe House Now Being Constructed

AT what is said to be a figure reaching the $1,500,000 mark, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, of New York, has leased from the Dunlap Realty Trust for 14 years, the theatre now under construction in the Massasoit building in Main St., opposite Lyman St., Springfield, Mass.

The theatre, which when completed will be known as the Springfield Paramount is to be completed by the Dunlap Realty Trust, but is to be furnished and equipped by the Famous Players organization. Within a short time a large force of men will be at work, and Famous Players plans to establish a headquarters in Springfield for its engineers and architects, who will carry along their work as for as possible while the main construction is being done.

The local work, under the supervision of Ernest F. Carlson, is scheduled to be finished by June 15, after which the Famous Players will require about a month to complete its work of installing equipment and furnishings. Furnishings and decoration work will be under the direction of Paramount engineers and artists. That the new theatre will be a distinct credit to Springfield and Western Massachusetts is shown by the fact that the Famous Players have seen fit to call it Paramount. For it is a well-established custom for that organization to name only its Class A, or de luxe houses "Paramount." The company itself will spend considerable money to make the house rank with the best.

The theatre decorations will be of Spanish design. Although no definite information is obtainable as to the opening date, it is believed the house would be ready before Sept. 1. Under the terms of the lease the theatre may be used for motion pictures ,vaudeville or legitimate productions, but the present plans are said to call for first-run film attractions, presented on a high-grade scale with tableaus and presentations such as presented in the New York Paramount. The house will be operated on a par with the best of the 300 or so houses with which Famous Players is affiliated in its Coast-to-Coast chain.

The Springfield Paramount is to be affiliated with the New England chain, which has its headquarters in Boston. Other houses of the New England chain are locate in Boston, Lowell, New Bedford and a number of other cities at the eastern end of the state and in Pittsfield. The Springfield house will have a seating capacity of about 3,000 with 1,700 seats in the orchestra, 1,000 in the baleony and 300 in the loges. The cooling and ventilating system alone will cost practically $100,000, and will provide a maximum amount of comfort at all seasons of the year.

Construction Notes and Theatre Openings

The site owned by Howard Williams at 6803 Pacific Boulevard, Huntington Park, Cal., has been cleared to make way for the erection of a six-story theatre and hotel building to be erected for Williams.

Construction on the new $70,000 American Theatre on Broadway, Idaho Falls, Ida., is progressing according to schedule. Since the arrival of the ornamental stone for the front, operations have taken on a new aspect and the structure is beginning to assume a more imposing appearance. Interior decorators were expected to begin work sometime in March, and at the same time installation will be made on the pipe organ. Concrete flooring has been poured, and the building it is said, will be fireproof throughout and wired for talkies. L.DeYoung, of the firm of H. J. McKean, Inc., of Salt Lake is in charge of the work.

The Parkway Theatre in Butte, Mont., will probably be opened late this Spring, after having been remodeled and improved to the extent of $45,000, according to announcement from William Steege of Great Falls, state manager of the West Coast company. Vitaphone and Movietone equipment costing $25,000 will be installed in the Parkway. The remaining $20,000 will be used to remodel and redecorate the interior. When completed this house will seat 1,800.

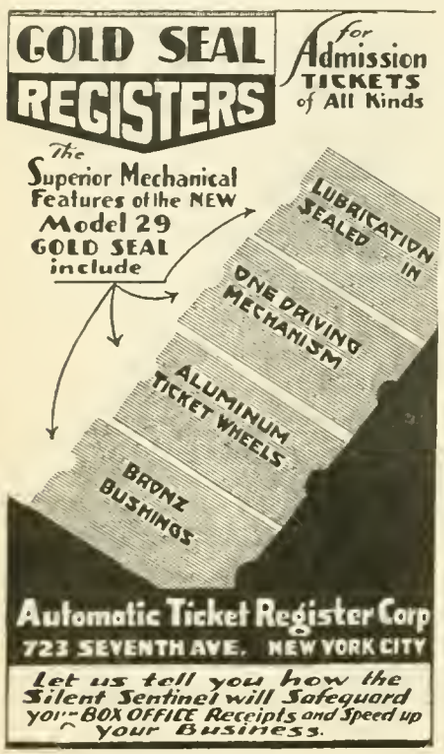
Movietone and Vitaphone installations will also be made in the American Theatre, Butte, and $30,000 will be spent on redecorating this and the Rialto Theatre. It is estimated that about $100,000 will be expended on the three West Coast theatres in Butte. Harry Stone will be manager of those houses.

Actual building work has been started on the new Strand Theatre, Middletown, Ohio, foundations having been poured as workmen completed tearing down the old building and clearing the debris. The theatre is to cost $320,000 and is to be a combined vaudeville and talkie motion picture house.

The motion picture theatre, the Red Lantern at Brea, Cal., has re-opened under new management after having been dark for two months, according to officials of the Brea Amusement Company, owners of the theatre building. W. W. Whitmer of Los Angeles, former operator of the theatre and the owner of all equipment including the pipa organ and furniture has sold these and the balance of his lease to the investment company. The theatre has undergone extensive re-painting and re-decorating.

Keith Syracuse House To Undergo Renovation

In conjunction with the program of the Radio Keith Albee Circuit, to expend several million dollars in improvements, etc., in the chain, the B. F. Keith Theatre in Syracuse will undergo renovation.



Improvements anticipated are: Complete ne wcooling plant, a new marquee and imposing electric display; new carpets on the mezzanine floor of the theatre and installation of new seats throughout the house may follow.

Eventually, of course, Keith's theatre will be equipped with Photophone(it is now the only first run house in Syracuse not wired).

Fox Theatre Is Opened At Redondo Beach, Cal.

The new Fox theatre, Rodono Beach, Calif., opened its doors to the public on Feb. 22, Harold Ben Franklin of Fox-West Coast Theatres, has announced

This new structure is most modern in design and embodies every convenience known to the theatrical industry. Only one show was held on the opening night and all seats were reserved. The regular policy of operation is three shows a day—a matinee and two shows nightly, with continuous performance on Sundays. Pop. prices at the gate.

Installation of a "talkie" machine is in progress at the Appleton Theatre, Appleton, Wisconsin. This theatre is also being remodelled and redecorated.

Brin Theatre, Inc., has filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of the State, to take control of the fifteen theatres in Wisconsin now controlled by L. K. Brin.

The incorporators are A. J. Schmitz, Carl J. Reuter and F. R. Ives. The house included in the new circuit are the Garden and Majestic, Milwaukee, the Fon du Lac at Fond du Lac, the Home and Portage at Portage, the Appleton, the Parkway, Strand and Madison at Madison, and theatres at Appleton, Oshkosh and Menasha. Plans are under way at present to acquire more theatres in the state, according to Mr. Brin.

Active Theatre Buying In Iowa Territory

NEWS of theatre transfers feature the regional news from Des Moines territory this past week.

The Miller theatre, at Elston, previously owned by L. Miller, was sold last week to G. R. Nichols.

Shipley and Synes last week bought the Alamo theatre, at New London, Iowa, from A. G. Richardson.

O. R. Laird has bought the Grand theatre at Nashua, Iowa, which was owned by Mrs. M. Larson.

Clarence Lacey, who has had the Rialto theatre, at Anita, Iowa, for more than three years, last week sold the house to A. C. Johnson.

Another house to change hands last week was the Rockford theatre, at Rockford. This theatre is one of the houses controlled by the Other Iowa Theatres Company. The new owner is Clare E. Mosher.

Wall Lake, Iowa, saw a change in ownership of the theatre there, which is known as the Opera House, when it was bought last week by Claude Hoff.

H. G. Holscher is the new owner of the Crystal theatre, at Earlville. O. N. Lumas, who has had the house for several years, sold it last week.

The theatre at Fairbanks, Iowa, was closed last week. Peters Brothers gave the reason as lack of business. They may re-open in the later months.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Blank left Des Moines, with their son Myron, for Miami, Florida, to remain for several weeks.

Manager Thiele, of the Des Moines Theatre Supply Company reports the sale last week to Ralph Pratt owner, Fox theatre at Washington, Iowa, of two strong low amperage lamps and two Kaplan picture machines with two strong De luxe changeovers and two half size Snaplite lenses. Mr. Pratt also plans to install sound.

The Wolstock theatre, at Wolstock, Iowa, closed last week.

The Des Moines Film Board of Trade will concentrate for the convention social affairs upon the picnic and get-together usually held in August or September for the exhibitors and exchange men of the state instead of having two parties during the year as previously.

Abe Frankle, owner of Riverview Amusement Park, who retains as his sole theatre interest the Casino theatre in Des Moines, will act as manager of the park with its opening on May 15th.

W. J. Miller, theatre broker in Iowa for close to fifteen years, is not retiring from the theatre business, as was previously announced.

Ohio Censorship Head Speaks At Luncheon

JOHN L. CLIFTON, state director of education, and head of the Ohio censor board at Columbus, addressed the Better Motion Picture Council at one of their recent noonday luncheons on the subject of "Film Censorship." Much interesting discussion was aroused and many definite opinions expressed both pro and con by those present, but nothing of a tangible nature developed that is expected to have any special bearing on censorship of talking pictures.

The New Lyceum Amusement Co., Cincinnati, will remove the lobby from the Lyceum Theatre, 126-128 West Fifth street, and convert same into a retail store.

Jack Lustgarden, manager of the Roosevelt Theatre, Cincinnati, and Florence Weinberg, a non-professional, of Chicago, were married in the latter city a fortnight ago.

William M. James, Columbus, Ohio, has sold his Pythian Theatre to the Columbus Theatre Co., Inc., this being the last house owned by James, who was formerly executive head of a chain bearing his name, and controlling several houses in Columbus and elsewhere. James is serving his fifth term as president of the M. P. T. O. Ohio and his seventh term as president of the National Amusement Managers Association. He states, however, that when his terms of office in both organizations expire, he will quit the game for good.

The State Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, has discontinued its orchestra, and will hereafter feature only organ music. Willard Osborne, formerly conductor of the State orchestra, has been made manager of the Regent Theatre, at Springfield, one of the houses in the new Schine-Chakeres chain.

Manager John McManus, of Loew's, Dayton, Ohio, has played host to several hundred newsboys from a local daily recently, while Moe Blattner, manager of Keith's Colonial, Dayton, also entertained the youthful news vendors at a special matinee.

Third Toronto House Now Being Wired

LOEW'S THEATRE, Toronto, one of the largest in the Ontario capital, is being wired for sound presentations, following a trip to New York by Manager Jules Bernstein. This will make the third big house in Toronto to be wired.

The Capitol theatre, London, Ontario, has adopted the Saturday open plan, thus falling into lines with scores of theatres in Canada in this respect.

The Capitol theatre, Windsor, Ont., has been purchased by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, the price involved being $292,500. The sale was concluded following a meeting of the preferred and common shareholders of the Windsor Capitol Theatre Company, Ltd., at Windsor, on Feburary 14, when the shareholders voted unanimously for the proposal. Famous did have a theatre site in Windsor but made an offer for the Capitol instead of building the new house.

Manager James Adams, of Loew's theatre, Montreal, Quebec, hesitated before booking "Dawn," the much-discussed British production, but what eventually happened was that the feature drew the largest gross of any picture in Montreal during the week of February 9. Loew's did even better than the wired houses.

George J. Forhan, manager of Griffin's theatre, St. Catherines, Ontario, has conducted many different stage competitions as added attractions and his ideas in this respect never seem to be exhausted. For the presentation of "The Woman Disputed" during the week of February 11 he staged a "Pretty Foot Contest" for the ladies and crowds stormed the theatre. Plenty of prizes were contributed by shoe stores and hosiery manufacturers.

One of the youngest theatre managers in the Dominion is Ivan Ackery, of Vancouver, B. C. He was born in Bristol, England, 27 years ago. He obtained a job as usher at the Capitol theatre, Calgary, in 1919, later becoming an usher at the Vancouver Capitol. In 1927 he became manager of the Victoria theatre, a suburban house in Vancouver, and he has now been appointed manager of the Dominion, one of the large downtown theatres of Vancouver.

Fire Damage Heavy To Grand, Greensburg, Pa.

MIKE MANOS' Grand at Greensburg, Pa., was badly damaged by a fire which recently wiped out the greater part of an entire block of buildings.

Nat Ehrlich is a new Pathe sales man in the local territory. He came here from Albany where he worked for Fox.

Al Glazer, owner of the Lorenz Theatre, Elliott, has returned from a mid-winter vacation, which he spent at his folks' home in Scranton.

Albany Reports Many Upstate N. Y. Closings

THAT many small motion picture theatres are closing their doors these days is generally known, but may perhaps be better realized in the fact that in one section alone in northern New York covered by a film salesman out of Albany, no less than sixteen theatres in as many villages, have closed indefinitely.

William Smalley, opened his Cooperstown house with sound last Thursday. He plans to equip other houses in his chain. The Playhouse in Hudson, operated by Frieder and Grossman, also opened recently with sound.

F. H. Murphy, of New York City, play date representative for Universal, was in town during the week. L. W. Kniskern, connected with the Pathe forces in New York, was also in town.

W. H. Sample, of Schaghticoke, was obliged to close his theatre for a few days last week on account of illness.

Ray Smith, Universal salesman out of Albany, had his automobile quite badly smashed last week. Mr. Smith was not injured.

The Grand in Watervliet, has been sold by Peter Elliot, to Auston E. Battaglia.

Al Guteck, former manager for F.B.O. in Albany, has accepted a position with Pathe in Philadelphia.

Harry Papayanakos, of Potsdam, and James, his brother, who also operates a theatre in Gouverneur, are reported planning sound.

Benton's three theatres in Plattsburg, Saratoga and Glens Falls, are being wired for sound pictures. Fred Maussert, who operates the State Theatre in Glens Falls, is also having his house wired.

Frank Learnan, of Albany, who formerly managed the Strand in Schenectady, and Liberty in Watertown, is now handling the new Ritz Theatre, Scotia.

Joe Wilson, former booker at the F.B.O., Albany, is now booking at home office of R.K.O., in New York City.

Sam Hochstim, of Hudson had been confined to his bed for nearly two weeks with the flu.

Since Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany became equipped for sound pictures, its business has nearly doubled, according to management.

Sue M. Weller, of Alexandria Bay, will devote her entire time from now on to her motion picture theatre.

Vic Warren, of Massena, who has been touring the Mediterranian with Mrs. Warren, was obliged to return suddenly to this country on account of the illness of their daughter.

Kolstaphone Gets 4 New Ore., Installations

KOLSTAPHONE installations are being made in a number of Oregon houses, and this local synchronization is becoming very popular according to Secretary J. J. Fleming, who reports the following installations: Arcade Theatre, LaGrande, Ore.; Edward Theatre, Reedsport, Ore.; McLean Theatre, Wallowa, Ore.; Hyland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore.

Douglas Kimberly, has been appointed house manager of the Colonial Theatre at Tacoma, Wash., and David Richards, formerly of the Broadway, Portland, is now manager of the Rialto Theatre, Tacoma.

The Dream Theatre corporation of Coeur d'Alene, Ida., has elected N. E. Huff as president and general manager. Other officers elected were Roger Wearne vice president; John H. Bonneville, secretary-treasurer.

Jack Allender, manager of Ritz Theatre, Spokane, Wash., has installed Cinephone.

Buck Wade, representative at Butte, Mont. for the M-G-M left for Utah points during a heavy blizzard and was badly frostbitten.

Daylight Saving Up Again In Baltimore

DAYLIGHT saving may become a fact in Baltimore again this year if the bill which Delegate Gray, Fifth District, Baltimore City, plans to introduce in the Legislature at Annapolis, becomes a law.

According to Gray's bill the clock would be advanced at 2 A. M. on the first Sunday in April and would remain that way until 2 A. M. on the last Sunday in September. This bill is designed only to affect Baltimore city and the counties of Maryland would not be affected at all by it.

The nominationg committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., of which Walter Pacey is chairman, has selected the nominees for the general election to take place in March.

The nominees are: H. A. Blum, president; Louis Garman, vice-president; Frank A. Hornig, treasurer; William E. Stumpf, secretary. Warners Bring New Stage Policy To Philly

WARNER BROTHERS' advent in Philadelphia was inaugurated by a new policy of stage presentations at the Stanley Theatre under the personal direction of Charlie Melson, who made his first appearance this week. Melson, who is from California, has been receiving enthusiastic praise for the quality of entertainment he provides and as master of ceremonies he has won the reputation of creating an atmosphere of geniality and informal ease. The new policy will be marked by elaborate stage presentations with handsome and effective backgrounds, for which the entire Stanley stage is used, the built-in and elevated platform having been removed. Clark Robinson, who helped to prepare some of the stage shows at Roxy's in New York, has charge of the staging.

The Apollo Theatre Building, New York Ave. and Boardwalk, Atlantic City, N. J., has been leased by the Nixon-Nirdlinger Amusement Co. to the Burnes Corporation for a long term, at an aggregate rental of approximately $250,000. The deal was negotiated by the real estate firm of Mastbaum Brothers & Fleisher, Philadelphia.

The Parker Theatre, Darby's newest, largest and handsomest theatre, with a seating capacity of 2,100, was formally opened to the public on February 11th. The house will be operated by Warner Brothers and Equity Theatres, Inc. The decorations are modernistic in design and rich wood paneling sets off the rich colors appearing in the decorative scheme of gold and rose. Large chandeliers, also modernistic in design, diffuse a subdued light over the interior. A large and enthusiastic audience attended the opening exercises and greeted the prominent citizens who participated. M. Goodwin, a representative of the theatre ownership, acted as master of ceremonies. The policy of entertainment will consist of talking and silent pictures, elaborately staged presentation acts, Vitaphone numbers and musical novelties.

New York and New Jersey Regional

A BANDIT armed with two pistols, entered the manager's office of the Embassy theatre, Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., one day this past week and without alarming about 1,600 patrons attending the performance, took $800 in receipts. The manager alone in his office at the time the robber entered, was bound with telephone wire and gagged.

Hollywood—Continued

Herr Reinhardt

Max Reinhardt is due in Hollywood shortly to direct Lillian Gish in "The Miracle Girl." The story is by Hugo Von Hofmansnstahl, European dramatist. The picture will be made at the United Artists' studio and will be released through that concern.

Tandler Heads Reisenfeld Band

Adolf Tandler has been signed by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld as assistant director of the latter's recording orchestra in the United Artists studios. Tandler was for many years director of the old Los Angeles Symphony; conductor of the International Mozart Festival in Salzburg and more recently director of the Little Symphony in Los Angeles.

Betty Boyd With Lane

Betty Boyd has been appearing with Lupino Lane in his Hollywood Music Box Revue playing at Music Box. She sings in one or two sketches.

May Remain with Fox

Lucien Littlefield may remain with Fox for another picture, having completed his work in "Making the Grade" cofeaturing Edmund Lowe and Lois Wilson.

From the Social Whirl

Hal Roach has dug up another society girl for his roster, this one from Chicago. Her name is Jean Harlow and will be used in the new series of "all-stars."

Gertrude Lawrence Arrives

Gertrude Lawrence arrived in Hollywood this week. She will be starred in the Fox Follies, an all-Movietone feature. The musical comedy artist will remain in Hollywood only for the one production.

Three More "Cocoanuts"

Cyril Ring, Basil Ruysdall and Sylvan Lee, dancer, of musical show fame, have been added to the featured players of the Paramount all-talkie, "The Cocoanuts," in production at the Long Island studios. Robert Florey and Joseph Santley are directing.

Finishing Touches

Title writers are bringing final pictures on Warners 1928-29 schedule to the last of production stage. Harvey Gates is doing "The Desert Song"; Joseph Jackson, "No Defense," and James A. Starr, "Kid Gloves." Gates and Francis Powers will both work on "From Headquarters."

Columbia Signs Writers

Wellyn Totman, Lilian Ducey and Leonard Praskins have been added to the scenarion department of Columbia Pictures Corp. All three have been prominently identified with other picture producers.

RKO Adds Two Authors

Sampson Raphealson, author of "The Jazz Singer" and "Young Love," has signed with RKO for "My Boy," and Vina Delmar, whose "Bad Girl" made such a hit with subway tabloid readers, will contribute "Dance Hall" to the Radio program.

Mankiewiez Renews

Herman Mankiewicz, prominent Paramount writer, has signed a new long-term contract with the company.

F. N. Gets Halsey's Plays

Forrest Halsey, who wrote the last four Corinne Griffith's vehicles, has been placed under a year's contract by First National. This contract includes screen rights for First National to all plays and originals written by Halsey in the past. Among them are "The Matriach" and "Foam," the latter in collaboration with Barney Glazer.

Neville Writing Gilbert Vehicle

Jack Neville is writing an original screen story for John Gilbert for M-G-M. Neville wrote the original story of "Desert Nights."

Peggy Prior's Progress

Peggy Prior, formerly Mrs. Theodore Von Eltz, has been placed under contract by Pathe, following her completion of a scenario for "Listen, Baby," in three days. She started with Pathe last year as a script girl, and since then has written "Square Shoulders" and Geraldine."

Fisher's Melodies for "Women"

Fred Fisher, well-known song composer, has been signed by M-G-M to write the music for Clarence Brown's production "Wonder of Women." Four melodies, all with a direct bearing on the story plot, will be composed by Fisher for use in the picture, slated as a Movietone talker.

Owen Moore Back in Pictures

Owen Moore returns to pictures from the stage to appear in Pathe's "High Voltage." William Boyd is starred, with balance of cast, including Caryl Lombard, Dione Ellis, Billy Bevan and Phillips Smalley. Howard Higgin is directing, from story by Elliott Clawson. Ralph Block is supervising production.

"Our Modern Maidens"

As in "Our Dancing Daughters,' Joan Crawford and Anita Page will be the feminine leads in "Our Modern Maidens," sequel to the former picture. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Rod La Rocque are the two male leads.

New M-G-M Contracts

Robert Montgomery, juvenile leading man in Edgar Selwyn's play, "Possession," has been signed to contract by M-G-M; John Mack Brown and Anita Page, players, and John Robertson, director, have also been signed to new contracts.

"A Free Soul"

Willard Mack will direct Norma Shearer in "A Free Soul," an all-talking version of his play which originally was made from a serial story by Adela Rogers St. John.

A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your "talkie" prints are on Eastman film—famous for uniformity —your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

"RED" KANN writes in The FILM DAILY:

Of the approximately 20,000 theaters in the United States, about 1,500 are wired for sound pictures. The industry, riding high on the hysteria wave otherwise known as sound pictures, is, of course, reflecting the public demand for this type of entertainment. Against that, there can be no argument. One serious consequence, however, has been the gross neglect facing unwired houses which total thousands in number and which represent the bread and butter accounts from which distributors will tell you they eke their profits . . . for the vast army of unequipped houses the silent film continues as the court of last resort. Yet nobody seems particularly concerned.

Your own "little old paper" is perhaps the best proof, Mr. Kann, that there is no neglect of silent pictures as far as the SHORT FEATURE LEADERS are concerned. Just check a few recent issues and note again what that Scotch reviewer of yours says about the current Educational Pictures releases.

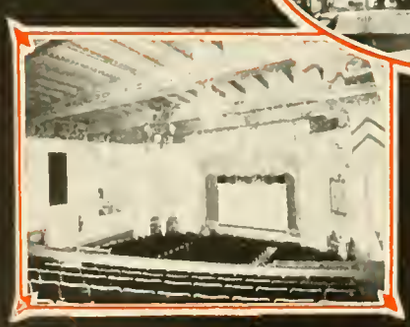
Gentlemen;

As you know the Plaza Theatre which is Kansas City's newest and most modern playhouse has been opened for thirty days.

I take this opportunity to express my thanks for your earnest co-operation in installing the "WURLITZER UNIT ORGAN." We have installed the Vitaphone and Movietone and not until your beautiful Wurlitzer Organ was installed did we feel that every needed attraction had been fulfilled.

We thank you again for the numerous favors and your hearty co-operation.



Very truly yours,

THE PLAZA THEATRE COMPANY.

Coronet TALKING COMEDIES

BY ALL ODDS THE SMARTEST SHORT TALKING COMEDY THAT HAS APPEARED FROM ANY SOURCE

"ASK DAD"

*Gives Edward Everett Horton a supreme chance which he utilizes to the best advantage. This is by all odds the smartest short talking comedy that has appeared from any source ..... It is reminiscent of the Drew comedies at their very best, with the added value of smart and clever dialogue. While the first Coronet Talking Comedy was good, this is ten times better.

—ARTHUR JAMES
in EXHIBITORS DAILY REVIEW and MOTION PICTURES TODAY

A personal triumph for Edward Everett Horton, who shows a high brand of artistry that marks this as just about the classiest comedy of the season. Joseph A. Jackson wrote the skit and the dialogue and did a remarkably fine job. The beauty of it is that it is not so classy as to be subtle. Even the ordinary crowd that feeds on pure slapstick can appreciate this, for Horton is so darn human and the spoken lines are simple and very understandable in the humor they carry with an awful wallop ... A "natural" that will score wherever folks enjoy fine comedy.

PERFORMANCES OF COPYRIGHTED MUSIC

By Mechanical Devices,

"VITAPHONE", "MOVIETONE", "PHOTOPHONE", "BRISTOLPHONE", PHONOGRAPHS, MECHANICAL ORGANS, PIANOS, Etc.

INFORMATION

In the rapid development and increase in the use of mechanical means of performing music, some exhibitors have received the impression that such renditions, in public performances, are not subject to license of the copyright owner.

The impression is entirely erroneous. License must be secured from the copyright owner, in respect of a public performance by means of any mechanical device just the same as if the performance were by a human orchestra.

The Copyright Law makes no distinction as regards the means used for accomplishing the rendition of copyrighted music; if it occurs in a public performance for purposes of profit, license of the copyright owner must be secured or an infringement of the copyright is committed.

Renditions by means of "Vitaphone", "Movietone", "Photophone", "Bristolphone", or any of the various synchronizing devices, or by means of phonographs, mechanical organs, or any sort of contrivance which will mechanically reproduce music, are subject to exactly the same conditions as regards license from copyright owners, as renditions by human players.

Exhibitors and others are therefore cautioned regarding the necessity of securing, or continuing in effect if they already have it, the license of this Society before effecting renditions by the above means or otherwise, of compositions copyrighted by our members. Infringements of these copyrights will be prosecuted.

Existing agreements between E. C. Mills, as Agent and Trustee of various copyright owners, and Electrical Research Products, Inc., and R. C. A. Photophone, Inc., stipulate that renditions of copyrighted musical works by means of the latters' synchronizing apparatus shall occur only in theatres having license of this Society. Such license is available, in respect of such renditions, under the same conditions as if renditions are by human means. This Society is not a principal party to such agreements.

In all fairness this notice is inserted in publications of general circulation amongst exhibitors, to the end that they may avoid the commission of infringements through unlicensed illegal public performances of copyrighted musical works by means of any type of mechanical device, and thus become liable to the penalties provided by the law.

If you have a license from the Society, and intend to include compositions copyrighted by our members in your programs, you should be careful to continue the license in effect, regardless of the manner in which such renditions are effected, mechanical or otherwise. If you do not have such license, and desire to use such works in your programs, you should immediately apply for license, and thus avoid the hazard of suits for infringements of copyrights.

Further information, list of members, and address of our office nearest to you will be mailed promptly upon request.

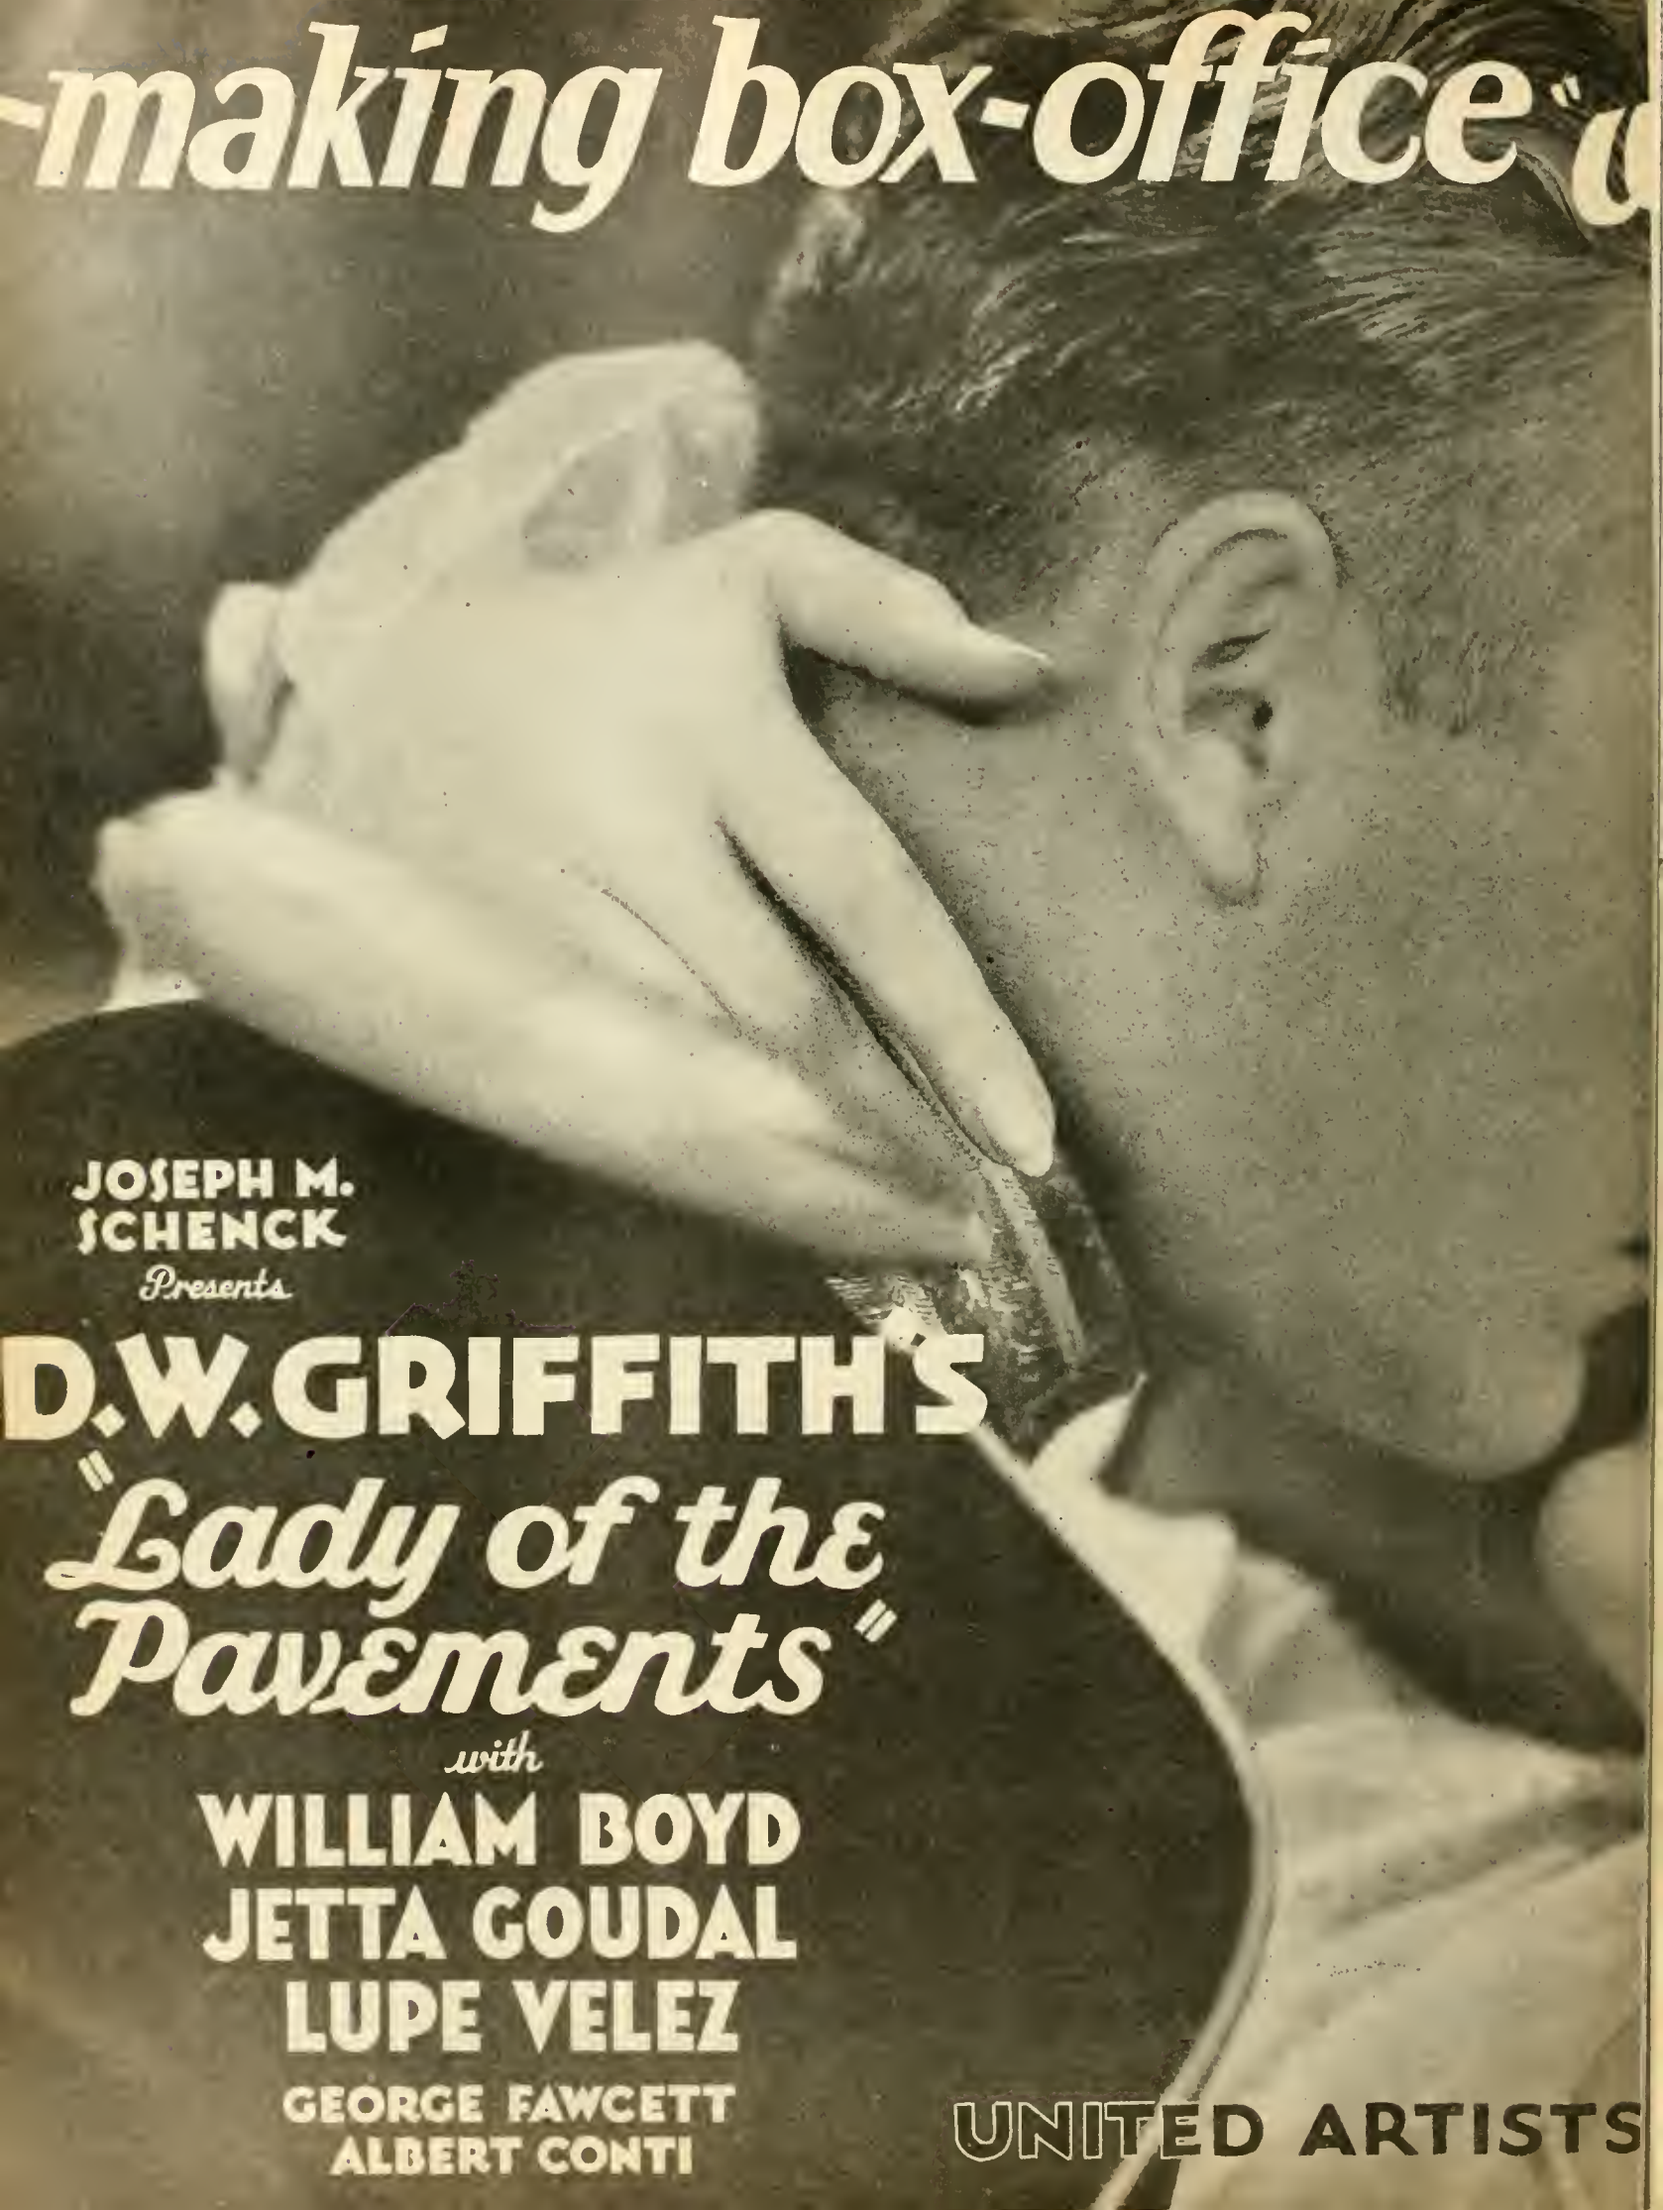
What are the Four Big Bets for 1929?

(No. 625—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation)

THERE ARE FOUR GREAT BIG OUTSTANDING BOX-OFFICE BETS FOR the year of 1929 and Universal has all four of them!



NO. 1 IS "SHOW BOAT." THIS IS SO PACKED WITH BOX-OFFICE NAMES and values that it staggers the imagination! Edna Ferber's best-selling novel, plus the cream of the cream of Ziegfeld's hugely successful stage version of "Show Boat," plus Jerome Kern's music, plus Oscar Hammerstein's lyrics, plus Helen Morgan's singing, plus Jules Bledsoe's singing, plus the Plantation Singers, plus Harry Pollard's direction, plus Laura La Plante, plus Joseph Schildkraut and so on and on and on. No such piece of property has ever been owned by any producer in the moving picture business. No such box-office values have ever been dreamed of before.

NO. 2 IS "BROADWAY." THIS PLAY ESTABLISHED NEW RECORDS FOR dramatic successes in New York. Universal was the successful bidder for the motion picture rights in competition with practically all other producers. So great was the envy of some of the unsuccessful bidders that they have attempted to cash in on the fame of "Broadway" by appropriating bits of its business or its atmosphere or even its title. But, like all imitations, they will fall to the ground, deceiving neither you nor your patrons. There is only one "Broadway" and Universal has it. Paul Fejos, supervised by Carl Laemmle Jr., has wrought another masterpiece and it will be one of the mainstays of your business this year.

NO. 3 IS "THE KING OF JAZZ." THIS MEANS THE INCOMPARABLE PAUL Whiteman, himself, and his incomparable orchestra of symphonic jazzers. Universal was the only company which could lure this famous man and his organization into the movies. With a story so gripping that even the silent version will be a tremendous sensation. Imagine how much punch is added by the fact that Mr. Whiteman and his entire orchestra will appear in the synchronized version. The millions who have heard of Whiteman or have listened to his phonograph records, can now see and hear him in a great picture.

NO. 4 IS "THE MINSTREL SHOW." THIS PICTURE IS BUILT AROUND the famous Eddie Leonard and other Minstrel men whose names are a household word. It is modern, snappy and jammed full of the kind of up-to-date material which the present-day movie audience demands. It will set a new pace for all other producers to follow. When I am ready to give you the rest of the details regarding this production, you will be delighted.

THESE, I REPEAT, ARE THE FOUR OUTSTANDING PICTURES FOR THE year of 1929 and they are all under the banner of one company—the Universal. Four such pictures from the whole industry during one season would be a good record, but coming from one company alone they will establish a new era in showmanship. If you cannot book all of them because your competitor has beaten you to it, at least get what you can!

Moulin Rouge

Splendid Picture, Well Done

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IF this first release of World Wide Pictures is a fair sample of what may be expected in the way of British importations by the J. D. Williams concern American producers are going to find some real competition from abroad.

"Moulin Rouge" has just about everything from a box-office standpoint. It is not so foreign as most of these imported pictures and it is produced on a lavish scale in all the natural surroundings called for in the story. It is the work of E. A. Dupont.

The synchronization by RCA Photophone is done by both the film and disc process and is as good as the picture. The score is by Joseph Littau of Roxy's and the recording by the RCA Photophone Orchestra. The picture serves to introduce Olga Chekova, European star, and she is a real artist, good to look at and with an abundance of screen talent.

The story has the background of Paris theatrical life. It shows the famous Paris-New York Revue, popular with all visitors to Paris. It is gorgeously mounted, with costumes that will have a tremendous appeal to the feminine movie goers, and a bevy of beauties that will have as great an appeal to the masculine fans. In addition it has thrills, suspense, heart interest and just about everything else that is necessary.

The romance may be a bit far-fetched, but it is not unnatural for a youth to become enamoured with a famed stage beauty even if she is his prospective mother-in-law. That is the story. Here is the scion of one of the wealthiest families in Paris who is to marry the daughter of this darling of the theatre. The girl is just back from school and brings her sweetheart with her to the theatre to see the mother perform. The mother is the toast of Paris. The youth seated in a stage box becomes infatuated with her. His infatuation becomes desperate love. The father of the youth objects to his marriage to the daughter of the star, so the latter makes a personal appeal to the father and he capitulates. Then the devoted mother finds out the true circumstances, that she is the one the youth loves. Here is a powerful situation with the doting mother caring only for the happiness of her daughter, the daughter desperately in love with the youth and the latter thinking all his love is for the mother. It is all logically and satisfactorily worked out in a splendid portrayal of Paris night life.

Drawing Power: It is a picture that should have appeal to all classes. The story is good, lavishly produced and has all the necessary elements to click at any box-office. It lends itself readily to exploitation.

Produced by British International Pictures. Distributed by World Wide Pictures. Length, 9 reels. Story and direction by E. A. Dupont.

"MOULIN ROUGE" NOW TREMENDOUS

"Moulin Rouge," starring Chekova, the sensational European beauty, has been synchronized and World Wide showed it during the week at the RCA intimate theatre to the critics. The offering, as before set forth in these columns when the picture was reviewed as a silent offering, is a tremendous box-office attraction, but with the sound accompaniment, it is one of the most tremendously sensational box-office pictures that ever we saw.

The scenes from the "Moulin Rouge" of which there are many, are so realistic that the spectator is practically taken into that famous theatre and led in on the back stage as well, with its beautiful women and exquisite costuming which is unparalleled anywhere else in the world.

The greatest thrill in the picture is an automobile sequence where the hero rescues the heroine from another motor car just as the two motors crash and the value of sound in developing this situation is nothing short of terrific!

World Wide has a tremendous attraction in "Moulin Rouge" and undoubtedly it will play for runs in the big theatres of the country.

Practical Service vs. Waste

A Comparison of Two Kinds of Press Sheets

By William A. Johnston

A CURIOUS situation presented itself in this office the other day.

We were enabled to examine side by side the press sheets issued upon a recent and important release—one press sheet from the distributor of the picture, the other prepared for a large chain of theatres by its advertising department.

The dissimilarity was marked.

The chain theatre sheet was concise, definite, practical; most any live manager could scarcely fail to be benefited by the aids offered. The other was vague and stereotyped, glowing but insincere; it is safe to say that ninety-odd per cent of its contents would not be used by the practical exhibitor.

Of course, the chain theatre sheet was prepared after the picture was screened and its show points carefully weighed; the other, following the ancient custom of this business, was written well before the picture left Hollywood.

But there is also the matter of intent to consider.

The object of the chain theatre service is definitely and wholly that of enabling each manager to sell the picture to the public for all it is worth.

The other represents the distributor's effort to sell the picture to the exhibitor for all it is worth. And that's all!

And this latter policy we contend is a blind, unreasoning business practice. We will go further and say that this selfsame policy, obstinately adhered to, is one of the greatest weaknesses of this business today.

Any manufacturer of any goods whose policy it is to load up the retailer's shelves and not give a rip how the latter resells them is doomed to disaster in this day and age.

Yet that is the way the picture distributor sells his wares, and that's the way he gives advertising service to his trade.

What on earth is the use of it all? And why continue this heavy expense of press sheet aids that do not aid at all?

Manager Lewis of our Round Table Club has a stack of mail from his club members to answer every day. The majority of these letters bang away right along on this one subject of distributor exploitation service. They can't use it; don't want it. The very name of exploitation has become anathema to them. It is safe to say that the waste of this mass of printed and mimeographed stuff is very close to one hundred per cent. But the machines keep clicking it off.

The sales managers in our business are mighty chary about the expense of any selling effort not their own. What is their alibi for the maintenance of the hoppers that grind out the printed stuff that descends upon the exhibitor and into the waste basket?

Referring again to the two press sheets, I would, if I were a distributor, use the chain theatre service in my own advertising of my picture. It is informative, which is just what the exhibitor wants in his trade advertising. It spills no bunk; it is dignified by its practicality, its sincerity. It evidences to the exhibitor the fact that the distributor is a partner in the selling process, not a selling antagonist. And finally, from every angle it is economic, intelligent, profitable and in thorough accord with the best selling effort today in the whole world of merchandising.

Speaking Editorially

The Machine and the Picture

THE control of sound volume in the picture theatre is a matter of the first importance, and we again call the attention of exhibitors to the fact.

All the care taken in production and recording may be lost if reproduction is not skillfully handled. After all, mechanism is still subject to human control. The accentuating of voices from the screen, merely for the sake of big volume, or diminishing them at inopportune times, in some cases can totally ruin the dramatic effect of a picture.

This point cannot be stressed too often. Remember, the audience is only faintly interested in the means by which sound is created and projected. But it is vitally interested in entertainment. And the highest entertainment quality cannot be present if sound volume is not properly handled in reproduction in the theatre.

Knowing nothing of the intricate mechanism of sound pictures, the public is likely to blame the actor whose voice does not come over properly. And in many instances this is an injustice to the player. It may be the handling of the machine that is to blame.

The control of sound volume has become perhaps the most important item in proper presentation of a program in any wired theatre. It can "make" or "break" a picture. Likewise it can, if not properly handled, seriously mar the total effect of the whole program.

At the showing of an important picture in a Broadway house last week, this point was emphatically demonstrated.

"Watch your sound volume" is excellent advice, and it is being given and heeded by the big circuits. All exhibitors with sound installations should pay particular attention to the all-important matter.

The Rumor Epidemic

AN economic waste, running perhaps into millions of dollars a year, is one of the results of the present rumor epidemic.

Thick and fast they fly—rumors, reports, contradictions, denials, wild guesses and just plain idiotic assertions. It has always been true, to a considerable extent in the film business, but never so true as it is now.

We venture to say that fifty per cent of the time of home office staffs, field representatives, and big theatre managers is unnecessarily consumed as a result of the rumor industry. Many of these men, instead of being able to devote themselves to their jobs with all the energy they possess, are forced to do a lot of worrying, because they have heard some rumor that might, if true, endanger their positions.

It is a known fact that the very center of production, where the life blood of this industry has to be set in motion, is continually upset by stories, mostly wild, of this, that and the other thing.

It seems to us that it is about time that this foolish, destructive and dangerous practice were stopped. Somebody starts these rumors, and usually it is for a reason of inexcusable selfishness. It has recently become apparent that many reports of this nature are nothing more nor less than stock market yarns of the thinnest variety. Maybe the author of a baseless report, if he is in a high position, thinks he is smart, but the truth is that he is showing an utter lack of brains. He may be undermining the morale of his own organization, the members of which have no way of knowing that the thing is just a canard, put out so the big fellow and his pals can clean up downtown.

Whatever the cause, and whoever the author, the practice has grown to be one of the major evils of the industry.

We wonder if anything will be done about it. If half the time and attention that some people in the business give to rumors were applied to work, the results would amaze everybody.

Battle Of The Giants Looms Big With Fox Closing Loew-M.G.M. Deal

STEREOSCOPICS NEXT

Fox Reported To Have Plans Under Way For Process; 1,000 Projectors Ordered For New Sized Films

ONE of the factors in bringing the Fox-Loew deal to an issue is said to have been the new stereoscopic film. William Fox had the jump on all of the picture producers in the matter of sound-on-film. He had a lead of two years, but in the last nine months that lead has been cut down so that both Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were not only hard on the heels of Fox in the production of talking pictures, but they were actually passing him. Atop of that Fox is said to have secured a process whereby stereoscopic films were to be placed on the market. On the coast for some months past at the Fox studios experimental work was being carried on with a wide film that is said to have stereoscopic qualities.

Orders 1,000 Projectors

Fox in connection with the stereoscopic wide film experiments has become so convinced that there is a tremendous future for this new dimension in photography that he has within the last month ordered 1,000 projectors that will be capable of projecting the wide film with sound. This order is said to have been placed with the International Projector Corp. and deliveries of the first of the machines are set for the very near future.

With sound and depth assured, the next step will be color, which will make the supremacy of the motion picture theatre complete over the old legitimate theatre and this seems to be the objective of William Fox.

RCA and Spoors

Early in the week E. E. Bucher, executive vice president of RCA-Photophone made an announcement to the effect that his corporation had made an arrangement with George K. Spoor whereby they would introduce the process to the industry in association with the Chicago film man. He also predicted that following this the next step would be in the introduction of color.

At the same time Dr. Herbert E. Ives associated with the Bell Telephone Laboratories in an address at Columbia University, is reported to have stated that he was perfecting a device that would achieve the third dimension in photography.

Weekly Box Office Check-Up Will Be Found on Pages 688—698

RCA Portable Equipment Now Being Perfected

New Device Will Be Ready In 3 Months; No Cut In Price Likely

RCA Photophone experts are busy perfecting a portable sound reproducer which will in all probability be ready for the market within the next two or three months. Details regarding it are not yet forthcoming, but E. E. Bucher, vice-president of the company, says it will be available shortly, but that it will be very little, if any cheaper than the equipment which is now being installed by the company.

Prices have not yet been set on the equipment, but Mr. Bucher emphatically says that it is not a cheap device to be used in the smaller houses. It is, rather, equipment that can readily be installed for road show purposes or in halls for temporary showings. It will reproduce both by the sound-on-film and disc methods.

French Non-inflammable Film Law Again Postponed

By L. C. MOEN

(Paris Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, Feb. 20.—The French regulation requiring the use of non-inflammable film only throughout France, already postponed on a previous occasion, has again been set back.

It was to have gone into force at the beginning of the year, but a new order from the Prefect of Police in Paris provides that its enforcement shall commence on January 1, 1932.

FOX VS. ZUKOR IS LINE-UP

Deal "In Bag" Reported By Fox Insiders; Loew Holders Agreeing To 125 A Share For Their Holdings

A NEW Battle of the Giants in the film industry loomed this week, with the report that William Fox had obtained control of Loew's and M-G-M in a gigantic deal said to involve many millions of dollars.

If the newest move of Fox was a reality—and there was every indication that it was—close observers pointed out that it would surely bring a counterstroke from Adolph Zukor, who has yet to yield first place in the fight for supremacy, and whose name is synonomous with brilliance of plan and far-sighted vision in execution.

Mr. Fox, as late as Wednesday night of this week, denied the report of the Loew deal, but in the face of that the report would not down and a number of the insiders around the Fox organization all stated that they were certain that the deal was "in the bag." The reason for the denial was placed as an agreed time for the breaking of the story, with all of the interested parties under a pledge of secrecy until the appointed hour arrived. In the Loew offices on Thursday all of the executives were reported as "out of town," none of them having put in an appearance that day.

Reported Price $125 a Share

It was definitely reported, however, that the Loew executives, who held control of the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization, namely Arthur and David Loew, David Bernstein, who with Mrs. Marcus Loew is executor of the estate of the late Marcus Loew; Nicholas Schenck, Louis B. Mayer and J. Robert Rubin, had agreed to accept $125 a share for their holdings in the Loew Corp. Checks binding the agreement are said to have been passed and deposited. These holdings were secured by the Loew executives at $12 a share at the time that the stock was first marketed. The sale at $125 represents a very high profit to them. Nicholas Schenck is said to have at first insisted on receiving $130 a share for his holdings with a provision that he would not be required to remain active in the company.

The Fox deal may bring another move of gigantic proportions. Up to the present, there has never been a time in which Adolph Zukor has been bested in any battle

New French Ban May Bring Cut In U. S. Quota

Hays Agreement Terminated, Producers Seek Aid By Cutting Importations

Old difficulties threaten to rise anew in the French market for American pictures, with a movement afoot to place a more stringent ban on foreign pictures. The new menace comes with the termination of the Hays agreement made last year.

French producers are in a bad way financially, it is reported, and they want to make it as hard as possible for the American producers to distribute their pictures there, unless they are granted a practical subsidy from the American companies.

Under the Hays agreement 500 pictures were to be allowed to enter the country. The new plan of the French producers is said to provide for but 350, with a heavy tax on them and the funds to be used to subsidize French films. The French producers are said to have the entire sympathy of the Government, and some stringent measures are expected to be passed this week.

French exhibitors are decidedly against the new movement. They declare that a curtailment of American films means a decided dropping off at box-affices, as the picture fans will not patronize houses showing a strictly French program.

Harold L. Smith, European manager for the Hays organization, has reported that the French producers want the American companies to invest in the French industry, which is badly in need of funds. He is endeavoring to straighten out the present difficulties, but has powerful interests working against him.

Radio Pictures Secures Rights To "Ringside"

Radio Pictures has acquired the Broadway stage success, "Ringside," by George Abbott, Hyatt Dabb and Ted Paramore. It will be made as both a sound and silent feature. The story is of the prize fight racket and the fight scenes will be filmed in Madison Square Garden.

William Le Baron, production head of Radio Pictures has under tentative consideration names of some Broadway stars to interpret the leading roles. He is not yet ready to divulge who they are.

P F-L Comptroller Resigns

R. W. Saunders has resigned as Comptroller of Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation and has accepted the Presidency of the Associated Metals, Inc., a holding company for the merger of several hundred productive mines in the west and Canada.

Salt Lake Bill May Ban Show Films In Schools

THE state superintendent of schools in Salt Lake City has expressed his willingness to lend cooperation to a movement by theatremen in that section as to their protest against the use of non-theatrical showings, excepting strictly those of an educational nature. Exhibitor bodies have been requested to draft amendments to the existing bill to define the situation.

Greeley Votes May Now Bring Sunday Pictures

Aftermath Of Censorship Withdrawal Develops New Sentiment

As an aftermath of the controversy in Greeley, Colorado, which resulted first in the resignation of the censor board and then in the repeal of the censorship ordinance by the city council, it now seems likely that it will not be long before that up-and-coming city will have its Sunday movies. That will be accomplished if an overwhelming majority can accomplish it.

"The Weld County News," leading newspaper of the county, completed a survey last week with regard to the sentiment for Sunday motion pictures. It invited a straw ballot vote and the result was a ratio of nine to one in favor of Sunday shows. The exact figures were 2244 for Sunday shows and 247 against them.

The vote was not confined to Greeley, though most of the ballots were cast there. In Greeley the vote of those over 21 years of age was 1386 for and 231 against; between 18 and 21 years, 519 for and 7 against; in Weld County, but outside of Greeley 273 for and 9 against; outside of Weld County 66 for and 0 against.

The controversy started with the banning of Warner Bros. "My Man" by the Greeley Board of Censors. Manager Dave Morrison of the Rex Theatre then invited a representative group of citizens to view the picture and they resented the ban placed upon it. The resignation of the censor board followed shortly and then the repeal of the ordinance.

Evansville Theatre Will Discontinue Double Bill

A vaudeville and picture policy in vogue for about 15 years will be discontinued at the New Grand, local Radio-Keith-Orpheum house, Sunday, March 3, when the RCA Photophone installed this week will be used for the first time, inaugurating a policy of nothing but talking and sound pictures, Pathe sound news, Fables in sound and several talkie acts. This city will not, however, be without R-K-O vaudeville, as it is unofficially known that last half of the week bills now booked into the New Grand will be switched to Loew's Victoria here, that theatre playing Loew vaudeville for the first half only.

Two States Kill Censorship Bills; Ohio Fight Hot

Exhibitors Win In Indiana, Missouri; Situation In Ohio Hopeful

Motion picture censorship bills have been killed during the week in two States and the battle still waxes warm in Ohio. The Missouri House committee on criminal jurisprudence at Jefferson City, Monday night killed the Wran bill, providing for censorship and the anti-standing room ticket sale bill.

The Indiana House of Representatives has adopted a committee report killing the censorship bill which was considered inimical to the best interests of the producers and distributors of the State.

Ohio exhibitors are hopeful of defeating the proposal to censor talkies and of winning their fight for local option on Sunday pictures. It has been learned that Governor Cooper, formerly president of the Ohio Council of Churches, has pledged himself to sign the bill making Sunday pictures legally possible if it is brought to him. The Council of Churches committee on motion pictures is fighting the measure, and is said to have been counting upon a gubernatorial veto in case they lost the battle in the Legislature.

The twin censorship bills still remain in the Senate education committee, with theatre owners, led by P. J. Wood, their business manager, fighting desperately to kill the talkie censorship provision. The Bender bill, removing censorship of any kind, and the Johnson bill, providing for censorship of talkies, are apparently deadlocked, and anti-censorship forces hope both will die in committee.

World Premiere Of "Show Boat" To Be Held At Miami

The world premiere of "Show Boat," Universal's dialogue and musical picture adapted from the Edna Ferber novel and combined with song hits from the Ziegfeld stage production of the same story, will be held at the Capitol Theatre, Miami, Fla., March 17. Arrangements for the showing have just been completed by Lou B. Metzger, general manager of Universal. Carl Laemmle and Florenz Ziegfeld will attend the opening.

Following this picture's run in Miami it may be shown in Palm Beach. Its New York premiere will take place in the Globe Theatre late in March.

"U" Makes Title Change

Universal has selected "Scandal" as a more fitting title for the latest Laura La Plante feature which is adapted from "The Haunted Lady," a story by Adela Rogers St. Johns. The original story title was in use.

Movie Schools May Go Under Police Control

Producers Association Asks Board To Regulate Activities

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—The so-called movie acting schools may be placed under the jurisdiction of the Los Angeles Police Commission, following a recommendation made by the Producers Association.

Fred Beetson has sent the commission continual complaints during the past six years written to the producers' organization by the gypped film-struck amateurs. He has asked that the condition be ended once for all.

It is stated that no member of the Producers Association ever had any connection with the so-called schools and that the producers make no use of them or their graduates. The Police Board has appointed an investigating committee and their findings are expected to result in the City Council passing an ordinance placing the movie schools under the control and jurisdiction of the Police Commission, which would force most of the schools to discontinue operations.

Boasberg Will Make Series For RKO Distribution

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Al Boasberg will produce a series of short comedy novelties in dialogue, song and sound for RKO distribution. The contracts have been signed in New York with RCA by Louis Broek. The latter is associated with Boasberg on the production end.

The material will be written by Boasberg, who has written comedy vaudeville acts for several years for the leading stage comedians. Boasberg is also to direct. Each subject is to be made in English, German, French and Spanish dialogue versions, allowing for practically world-wide distribution. The first of the series is to be made in New York, pending the completion of installation equipment here. It is the intention to use combination stage and screen names for each subject.

Darmour Will Produce 26 Short Subjects For RKO

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Larry Darmour will produce 25 short subjects for distribution by RKO Productions, Inc., according to a deal closed this week between Darmour and William Le Baron. Thirteen of the stories will be written by H. C. Witwer and the remaining 13 will include the "Mickey McGuire" series. This will be the third series of Mickey McGuire which Darmour has made.

Exterior Disc Recording Is Achieved; Big Objection To Use Of System Is Overcome

Talkies Scaled at 5 to 15 Cents at Houston

HOUSTON, TEXAS, probably boasts the lowest scaled sound houses in the country. It is the Iris, which is showing Vitaphone and Movietone pictures at from five to fifteen cents. This is the scale that has obtained at the house for the past decade. With "On Trial" as the initial talker record-breaking business ushered in the sound policy.

Pomeroy May Join British International

Settles Contract Troubles With Paramount And Will Go Abroad

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Roy Pomeroy has settled his contractural difficulties with Paramount and definitely left that organization last Monday. He is now enroute to New York and from there will sail for Europe. It is reported, but the rumor could not be confirmed, that Pomeroy will go to England and become supervisor of sound production for British International, whose product is being distributed by World Wide Pictures.

The difficulties over the Pomeroy Paramount contract were settled through Henry Herzbrun, Paramount attorney, and Neill McCarthy, attorney for Pomeroy.

Pomeroy's half interest in all patented inventions produced while he was working for Paramount during the past seven years remains undisturbed by the agreement reached between the parties.

Quality Guarantee Clause Carried In DeForest Contract

The General Talking Pictures Corp., manufacturers and distributors of the DeForest Phonofilm reproducing device, have inserted a clause in installation contracts which "guarantee that the quality of sound in the installed theatre shall be equal, if not superior, to the quality of sound reproduction of any reproducing device regardless of price."

This clause is not entirely a new one, according to the company's statement, it having been made a part of every contract where the theatreowner has requested it.

Remote Control Transmission Of Sound Over Phone Wires To Studio Solves Main Problem

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 28.—Solving the problem of recording scenes on locations by Vitaphone disc method, Warner Brothers are now enabled to record sound and dialogue outdoors, heretofore impossible with the wax recording method.

The system evolved by Warner engineers includes portable apparatus on a truck, which is taken to the location to be used for scenes. The special portable equipment is hooked up to the nearest available telephone line, with the sound for scenes transmitted over remote control to the studio recording rooms, where the sound and dialogue is recorded on the wax records and synchronized with the film being shot.

A microphone is used on the location the same as when recording dialogue scenes on a studio sound stage, and the only difference between making the sound records on the stage or on location is the fact that the former is done by remote control.

Warners already have three specially equipped portable trucks for shooting sound on location; the apparatus including amplifiers and electrical apparatus to step up the volume of the sound before it goes over the telephone wires to the studio. Each truck carries hundreds of feet of wire, so that the latter can be strunk from the location to the nearest telephone connection in hooking up to the recording rooms back at the studio.

Carry Sound 25 Miles

Warners used the portable sound apparatus last week in South Pasadena, about 25 miles from the studio, and are said to have obtained excellent recording of a street parade, band, railroad trains, etc., for exterior sound and dialogue sequences of "The Sap." The Pasadena Rose Bowl will be used during the coming week for exterior scenes in sound and dialogue depicting a football game for "The Time, Place and the Girl."

With the introduction of a system that allows for recording exteriors on Vitaphone discs by remote control, Warners have overcome what has been said to be the

Montgomery S. Hill, who leaves his post of Atlanta District Manager for Publix to become affiliated with Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina

Hill Makes New Affiliation With Publix-Saenger

Montgomery S. Hill, for several years past district manager at Atlanta of Publix Theatres Corporation, is resigning from the parent company to become affiliated with Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina. He will serve as assistant to H. F. Kineey, general manager, and will establish his home at Greensboro, N. C., where the Saenger Circuit maintains its executive headquarters.

The arrangement by which Mr. Hill transfers from the parent to the subsidiary organization was perfected with the most friendly feeling on all sides. Hill has been an executive in the exhibition and distributing end of the industry for the past ten years and for a good part of that time has been associated with Publix interests.

"U" Sales Chiefs Render Optimistic Business Forecast

Back in New York City from an extensive sales trip, M. Van Praag, general sales manager for Universal, and Ted Schlanger, assistant general sales manager, report a general upward trend of business conditions.

Van Praag visited four exchanges in Southern territory and found that this tourist season has been the largest experienced in southern resort zones. Schlanger has completed a seven weeks' tour of exchanges scattered over the entire country, covering twenty exchanges, and reports that sound pictures are proving a great business booster. He also found that pictures with dialogue, not necessarily 100 per cent talking, to be the best pullers. Exhibitor confidence in all parts of the country is reflected in Schlanger's report.

"Great Divide" Will Be First National Special

First National Pictures has purchased "The Great Divide," popular stage play, and it will be made into an all-dialogue Vitaphone production. Details of the production have not yet been announced, but it is understood it will be planned as a big special with an all-star cast.

New Mastbaum Officially Opens In Philadelphia

Dignitaries Participate In Ceremonies Marking Inaugural

The new Mastbaum Theatre in Philadelphia opened to the public with a great blare of trumpets at 11 o'clock on Thursday morning of this week. It gives Philadelphia its largest and most up to date house for the exhibition of films. The official opening was preceded by a private inspection of the house on Wednesday evening following a street parade and dedicatory exercises in the afternoon.

The parade was headed by Col. Lewis S. Sorley, chief of staff of the 79th Division, Organized Reserves, U. S. A. as Grand Marshal. In the parade also were the National Guard Artillery, a troop of state constabulary, American Legion posts, the Shriners band, the three Shrine units, four troops of Boy Scouts, the Navy Yard Band, the Elks Minstrel Guards and other representative bodies. Mayor Mackey was the principal speaker at the ceremonies.

The Mastbaum was erected and furnished at a cost of $5,000,000 and will accommodate 5,000 persons. The building contains nearly 2,000 tons of steel in its framework and occupies an area 220 by 180 feet.

The inaugural program held Wednesday evening brought leading film folk and others from Philadelphia, New York and other cities. Addresses were made by Irving Rossheim, president of the Stanley Company of America, Mayor Mackey of Philadelphia and Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros. Al Jolson introduced First National and Warner Bros. stars in "Hollywood's Greeting to the Mastbaum Theatre." An extensive screen and stage program was enjoyed by the capacity attendance.

Theme-Song Writing Dep't First In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—The first "theme-song writing department" in Hollywood is being established by the Warner Brothers in their studios. Heretofore the department has been confined to New York. Nine song writers, headed by Ray Perkins in charge, wil constitute the department. The others are Harry Askt, Joe Burke, Alfred Bryan, Grant Clarke, Al Dubin, George W. Meyer, Herman Ruby and Norman Spencer.

Thompson to Demonstrate Sound Films Before Club

P. L. Thompson, director of advertising and publicity for the Western Electric Company, will give a demonstration of sound pictures before the members of the Whitehall Club this Saturday noon at the headquarters of the club. Fox Movietone shorts will be used. The club is made up of professional and business men with offices in the Whitehall Building.

Chinese Leads L. A. Grosses With "B'way Melody"

Third Week Produces $33,500 "Wild Orchids" Draws Best Of New Films

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—"Broadway Melody" in its third week at Grauman's Chinese Theatre continued on its remarkable way to lead all houses on gross business for the week with $33,500. This included a Saturday midnight show which brought the percentage for the week as compared with the normal of the house to 225. There was an accompanying program of shorts and an all-star vaudeville revue.

Of the newer pictures playing the first week "Wild Orchids" rolled up the pleasing gross for seven days of $32,500 at Loew's State. This represented a percentage of 125. Short subjects, Movietone News and a Fanchon and Marco presentation rounded out the bill.

"In Old Arizona" in its ninth week at the Criterion did $21,500 for a percentage of 160. "The Divine Lady" in its fourth week at the Carthay Circle played only to $11,500, a percentage of but 78. "Conquest" in its first week at Warners did only 80 per cent of normal business with $23,500.

"He Dummy" had a good seven days at the Paramount with a percentage of 110 and a gross of $31,500. "Strange Cargo" in seven days at the United Artists Theatre played to a gross of $13,500, or a percentage of 90.

Pathe Appoints Arthur Poole As New Comptroller

Pathe Exchange, Inc., has appointed Arthur B. Poole comptroller and he has already assumed his duties at the home office in New York City. Mr. Poole resigned as comptroller of K-A-O to take the Pathe position. Previously he had been with FBO and while there did special statistical work for Pathe under the direction of Joseph P. Kennedy.

Mr. Poole entered the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard in 1924 and after graduation there he went to FBO with Mr. Kennedy. Before entering the picture industry he practiced public accounting in St. Paul.

"Bachelors' Club" World Pre-view Held In Philly

"The Bachelors' Club," Oscar Price's production staring Richard Talmadge, had its world pre-view at the Carman Theatre, Philadelphia, on February 24. The synchronized musical score was composed by Erno Rapee and played by the Roxy Theatre orchestra. The picture was well received by a capacity audience.

100 Smaller Iowa Houses Closed In Past 3 Months Because of Sound Pictures

Exhibitors Report, However, That Talkies Retard Trade Of Rurals Only Temporarily

THE state of Iowa offers a number of problems with regard to the effect sound pictures are having on rural houses of the state that are not equipped with sound reproducing devices. The consensus of opinion seems to be that sound equipped houses offer a temporary handicap on the smaller houses not equipped, but that after a period of a few months the non-equipped houses usually come back largely into their own.

While the majority seem to think this condition exists, at the same time it is an established fact that since the new year started nearly one hundred houses have closed, whereas the usual number of closings during this period is approximately twenty.

E. P. Smith, president of the Iowa Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, feels that the great majority of the small town exhibitors are meeting serious difficulties and that the theatres in every town near a larger town where the theatres are equipped with the sound pictures, is so affected by the competition of the larger house that the oldest exhibitors are meeting unusual reverses. He states that men in the theatre business for years have been unable to compete with the chain theatre organization and that several men have sold out to the chain interests or taken on offers by the sound equipped houses at Fort Dodge, as managers of houses of which they had been directors for years.

Silents Suffer Loss

Puffer and Stephens of the Orpheum at Webster City report they have been affected between 20 per cent and 40 per cent by th sound equipped houses at Fort Dodge, where the Strand and Plaza report a larger loss with the first three months of the installation of the Vitaphone at the Rialto Theatre there owned by A. H. Blank. Mr. and Mrs. Shuneman of the new Isis Theatre at Webster City report a similar handicap in competing with the Fort Dodge house.

Fairfield, Iowa, is one of the towns which have reported a handicap in competing against the larger houses at Ottumwa, Iowa. The Orpheum at Fairfield, owned by Mr. Hoffman, reports that a very noticeable per cent of business has been going to the Ottumwa houses twenty miles away, while

Vaude Stars Hold Out For Big Money

TREMENDOUS sums are not only being offered by studios, but have been refused by vaudeville songstresses during the past week. Marion Harris, vaudeville and record artist, turned down $10,000 from Universal, stating that it was worth at least $50,000 to her. All they wanted was two songs.

Ethel Waters, colored artist, was offered $15,000 to sing three songs and double her voice for that of a recognized screen star. She refused to do this, claiming that she didn't care to submerge her own identity for any one.

Ad Censorship Fight Still Hot In Vancouver, B. C.

Attorney General Pushing Bill Opposed By All Newspapers

Attorney General R. H. Pooley and the Vancouver newspapers are waging a hot battle for and against the passage of the Pooley bill which provides for censorship of newspaper motion picture advertising after the printing of the ads. Pooley intends to force through the bill as drafted, with the inclusion in committee of provisions for an appeal board. This was made evident when he moved for the second reading of the bill in the legislature.

In defending his bill, Pooley attacks the newspapers who criticised the measure. He declares it his duty to protect the young "from contamination by the moral slime that appears in some of the advertisements."

In commenting on the bill, a leading newspaper said:

"There is to be no censorship of movie advertisements in the newspapers before publication—so that all of the mischief, if any, will be accomplished before the censors can make up their censorious minds.

"He tells us with one breath that this legislation is essential in the interest of outraged public morality, and, in the next, that the bill will really leave the discretion where it is now—in the good sense of the newspaper editors and publishers."

"U" Buys Denny Vehicle

The purchase of "The Third Power," a stage play presented in New York City, is announced by Universal as a starring vehicle for Reginald Denny.

A. M. P. A. Ready With Masque Ball At Astor Hotel

Capacity Attendance Will Be On Hand for The Annual Event

The A. M. P. A. has completed all arrangements and everything is in readiness at the Astor Hotel, in New York, for the Hollywood Masque Ball, the annual event of the advertising men of the industry. The big doings go on this Saturday night and will not wind up until the conclusion of the "Breakfast Show" which "N. T. G." will stage at 5 o'clock in the morning.

The program is one of the most extensive ever arranged for the event and Nils T. Granlund, of radio fame, will serve as master of ceremonies. Six jazz orchestras will supply the music for the dancing and leaders in every line of Broadway show business will be on hand to entertain.

In line with the usual custom the "A. M. P. A. Newsreel" will be one of the leading features, only this year it has gone sound or at least partly sound. It is said to contain many thrills and laughs. Edward McNamee is editor-in-chief of the newsreel. "Topics of the Night" is another fun-maker that promises to provide plenty of amusement. Don Hancock is personally editing this subject.

There will be even more valuable prizes for various events than usual this year. The donated gifts vary from $500 fox furs to silk stockings and cosmetics.

A full course dinner will be served at 1:30 A. M. and dancing and acts will continue throughout the night. Two of the leading personalities of Broadway will lead the grand march. The biggest crowd in the history of the event is looked for.

Pathe Places Additional Stock With N. Y. Exchange

Pathe has made application to the New York Stock Exchange to list 100,000 shares of additional common stock on the exchange. The sale is arranged at a minimum price of $11.50 a share net.

The proceeds, it is revealed, will be used for additional working capital. The exchange has approved the listing of the stock on notice of issuance.

Metropolitan Singers Join Cast For "The Cocoanuts"

Two groups of Metropolitan singers have been engaged by Paramount to further strengthen the talking picture, "The Cocoanuts," in which the four Marx Brothers are starred, and which is now being completed at the Long Island studios of the company. These groups are composed of Louise Bernhardt, Madeleine Southwrith, Rita Sebastian and Ann Reichl, and the Miami Serenaders, Smith Blue, Max Sulser, Jack Cronin and Wendell Mayhew.

"Coquette" Not To Have Silent Version

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—There will be no silent version of "Coquette" according to last minute decision made by Mary Pickford and her associates on the day shooting was supposed to start on the feature. There are several reasons, the first being that United Artists honestly believe no silent version could possibly come up to the standard of the dialogued version.

Mussolini Wants Italy To Advance With Production

Would Like Own Artists To Return And Improve Industry At Home

By HEINRICH FRANKEL

(Berlin Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Berlin, Feb. 18.—Mussolini is showing a decided interest in motion pictures and as a consequence Italy is showing increased production in feature pictures, with indications that there will be still further advancement in the near future. Mussolini hopes to build up a national film industry in Italy. At least he hopes to re-establish it to where it was before the war, when it was among the leaders of foreign countries in this line.

What Mussolini wants most of all is to see Italian artists, directors, producers and talent return to their own country and contribute all they can to the industry there. These artists are scattered over all parts of Europe, principally in Germany and England.

There is certainly no scarcity of famous and very capable Italian producers and stars, Gallone, Righelli, Genina, Bonnard, to mention only a few of the producers, most of them working either in Germany or England, whilst such well known Italian stars and feature players as Maria Jacobini, Carmen Bon Marcella Albani, Farrari, Livio Pavanelli and many others are also working out of their own country, mostly in Germany, France or England.

It will be interesting to watch the progress of the Italian Film "Renaissance" boosted by none less than the "Dictator" himself.

Hersholt Leaving "U"; Is Sought By Other Companies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Jean Hersholt leaves Universal shortly, as published some time ago in the Motion Picture News exclusively. Hersholt has been given permission by Universal to open negotiations with other companies before his contract expires, that time being March 1st. Paramount has been anxious to secure Hersholt since the making of "Abie's Irish Rose" and several other companies have put in bids during the past year. Hersholt, however, is anxious to take a trip to Europe before working again.

Talkies Close 100 Small Houses In Iowa Towns

Sound Films Draw Rural Patrons To Theatres In Larger Cities

Mrs. Tessie Condors, who has conducted the Victory Theatre there for a period of years, is contemplating the installation of sound equipment to compete with the Ottumwa houses.

M. R. Blair, of the Regent Theatre at Cedar Falls, with two houses at Waterloo equipped for sound pictures, finds that a large number of his patrons have been driving fourteen miles to Waterloo to see the new films. W. H. Dutton, of Independence, is another exhibitor near Waterloo who reports at least a temporary setback.

Charles Peterson, one of the veteran showmen of the state, says that the theatres at Mason City have gradually been drawing business from the nearby towns with the improvement of the roads leading in from the smaller towns. The installation of the sound equipment at the Mason City houses draw fifty per cent of the business from the smaller houses, he estimated, during the first months of their showing. Since that time the handicap has been about twenty per cent and sometimes it might be set at ten per cent.

W. J. Miller, Iowa theatre broker for more than ten years, says that many theatre men with whom he has talked report that the talking pictures have attracted fifty per cent of the business from the rival houses in the same towns during the first thirty days.

G. W. Weigman, operating the Strand Theatre at Newton, is doing a very nice business while competing with the Capitol Theatre, which was one of the first houses of the Blank chain to be sound equipped. The Rex Theatre, owned by J. G. Eyerly, also has its regular trade from the Newton fans.

Returns to Normal

At Boone, Iowa, Mr. Anderson, of the Princess Theatre, reported that after sixty days in competition with the sound equipped house, the Rialto at Boone, one of the Blank chain, showed a return to the level of the months previous, although business was not exactly normal.

Roy Jones, owner and manager of the Gem Theatre, Des Moines, says that a number of people have reported disappointment in the sound pictures. He has had a decrease of business of 30 per cent during the past several months but attributes it entirely to the fact that the streets and walks have been a mass of ice, rather than the fact that he is competing with three houses in downtown Des Moines equipped with the sound equipment.

Nearly a hundred houses, however, have closed since the beginning of the New Year in Iowa. At this time there are regularly about twenty houses closing. About half of these houses which have closed have been houses which have been in the balance at many times.

Stars Lose Fans By Publishing Of "Love Life" Tales

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—"Love Life" stories in fan magazines have cost the stars and screen players regarding whom they were written thousands of fans. This is learned through several fan writers in Hollywood who recently had stories returned by magazine editors. Such manuscripts were written about film players after "Love Life" stories were published. With the return of the manuscripts, fan editors have enclosed notes to several of the writers stating that following publication of their "love life," hundreds of letters were received from fans telling of their disgust with their former favorites.

During the past six months, practically all fan magazines have carried "love life" stories. At first these were welcomed by players and the studio publicity departments. Many of the players permitted the stories to be published over their own signatures.

Now comes the kick-back. Fan magazine editors are discovering that it increased circulation only temporarily. They have been swamped with letters proclaiming the nausea of their readers. And writers are beginning to suffer because the magazines cannot use "love lifers" as material.

FBO Seeks To Collect Award In Circuit Court

W. A. Schmid, picture show operator at Albany, Ind., has been named respondent in a petition filed in the circuit court at Muncie by the FBO Pictures Corporation, asking collection of an arbitration award amounting to $617.50. Claim is made that the respondent on March 24 and Dec. 13, 1927, entered into contracts with the petitioning company agreeing to use certain film service to be furnished by the corporation and to pay a stipulated sum in compliance with the contracts.

Failure to comply with the contracts is alleged and an arbitration board fixed the amount of money now being sought as a judgment against Schmid, who has been directed to appear in circuit court to show cause why the award should not be reduced to a judgment.

Morris Realigns Warners West Coast Sales Staff

Sam E. Morris, vice-president of Warner Bros., in charge of distribution has realigned the sales executives on the west coast. To lighten the duties of Harry Lustig, whose health has been somewhat impared, he has been relieved from the post of Western division manager and has been put in charge of Warner Bros. Los Angeles office.

Morgan Walsh, formerly branch manager in San Francisco is advanced to Western division manager, working with J. V. Allan, western sales manager, and C. C. Ezell; general sales manager Mal Hulling, formerly Los Angeles branch manager succeeds Walsh in charge of the San Francisco office.

Broadway Business Suffers Slight Depression Despite The Advantage Of Another Holiday

Roxy With 'Ghost' Gets $114,270; 'Strange Cargo' $76,006 Next; 'Iron Mask' Opens Big At Rivoli

DESPITE the fact that the theatres along Broadway had the advantage of Washington's Birthday holiday last week the business dropped off slightly. The fact that the heaviest snow storm of the winter came along about mid-week may have accounted for the dropping of the receipts along the big street, especially since the depression was felt all along the line.

In the regular weekly change houses the Roxy led the procession with Fox's talking feature "The Ghost Talks" drawing $114,270.75 for the week, with Pathe's "Strange Cargo" at the Paramount coming along for second money with $76,006. The two-a-day runs were led by "The Broadway Melody" at the Astor which showed $24,969 for the week, this meant that they had standees at every performance. But even these figures show a drop in the percentage rating that the houses showed in box office reports last week.

The eight theatres on the street playing a grind policy managed to turn in a gross business of $371,017.65 on the week, while in the seven theatres that have a two-a-day policy their returns were $126,061.75, the combined gross being $497,078.40 for fifteen theatres for the second week in Lent, which is far from bad.

On the grind theatres there was but one that bettered the receipts of the previous week and that was the Strand where "The Barker" for its first week on the street at popular prices turned in $44,061, which resulted in the picture being held for a second week.

At the Capitol, "The Flying Fleet" in its second week at that house drew $70,865.90, which was a little less than $12,000 under what the picture attracted during the initial week's showing.

"The Wolf of Wall Street," at the Rialto, showed its first sign of falling off in business getting $33,656, which brings its return for the three weeks to $120,756. Last week was about $9,000 under the second

Dog Star, Let Out, Does Publix Bark Act

"FLASH," the dog star, was released by M-G-M with the advent of talkies. Dog pictures were useless with the popularity of sound, they said.

"Flash" is now touring the Publix houses, doing a barking act.

Short Time Work Hits Birmingham Suburban Houses

Industrial Conditions Are Bigger Handicap Than Wired Houses

Downtown wired and de luxe theatres in the Birmingham, Ala., district, are showing little affect on suburban theatres suffering from a variety of ills at the present time. The chiefest of these is the short time production in the big industries which has been going for several months. However, when conditions are normal, the suburbans, which are located in residential centers where industrial workers are employed, never felt downtown special attractions.

These houses are only about thirty days behind the downtown releases and play at one-fourth and one-third the big house prices. The difference in admission and the distance from the suburbs into Birmingham overweigh the added attractions in the city. Especially to the type of patrons who reside in the suburbs.

Residential theatres, except in college districts, have never been able to get by, even when pictures were at their peak. But the houses in the industrial district, Ensley, Fairfield, Wylam, North Birmingham and Bessemer (a suburb through an adjoining industrial town) have a place that sound pictures have not disturbed and it is unlikely that they will.

Pennington's First For Warner's "Gold Diggers"

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Ann Pennington's first vehicle for Warner Brothers will be a new talking version of "The Gold-Diggers," originally played on the legitimate stage by Ina Claire. Although Pennington is primarily a musical comedy actress and "The Gold-Diggers" was a straight comedy-drama, it is possible that musical interpolations will be injected for the screen version.

Minstrel Show Next Vogue For Talking Films

Seven Such Productions Are Now Being Made Or In Preparation

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—The minstrel show in synchronized pictures is scheduled to be the next in vogue. Seven such productions are now being made, or are slated for early production. Universal was the first company to announce its intention of making a screen minstrel show, but is still indefinite as to when production will start. Their feature glorifying burnt cork will star Eddie Leonard, famous vaudeville minstrel and one of the few living men of the old time minstrel shows. Leonard was a feature of Lew Dockstader's Minstrels, the Primrose and West Minstrels and headed his own shows for years.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is now in production with a glorified minstrel show, which will include every player under contract to the company for special bits. Conrad Nagel is to be interlocutor, Charles King one end-man and Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards the other end-man. In addition to the M-G-M stock players and stars, the roster will feature special vaudeville and musical comedy players engaged for the minstrel.

Paramount and Fox are also planning minstrel productions. Paramount's is said to be intended as the second vehicle starring Moran and Mack. Fox have signed McIntyre and Heath, who have headed their own shows for more than 50 years. Eddie Dowling, who is making an independent feature called "The Rainbow Man," with a possibility of the title being changed to "Broadway Bound," carries a big minstrel first-part. Warner Brothers have registered the title "The Minstrel Boy" which will also feature Mr. Tambo, Mr. Bones and Mr. Interlocutor. There is a possibility of this being used as an Al Jolson vehicle.

"U" Holds World Premiere Of "Girl On Barge" Upstate

Universal's special, "The Girl on the Barge," had its world premiere in upper New York state at the Capitol Theatre, Whitehall, N. Y. This picture, which stars Jean Hersholt, with Sally O'Neil and Malcolm MacGregor, and directed by Edward Sloman, was principally made in the vicinity of Whitehall, hence the local interest and decision to open there.

Rothstein Joins Columbia West Coast Publicity

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Nat G. Rothstein, formerly in charge of Universal's talking trailers, has been appointed West Coast publicity director for Columbia Pictures. He succeeds Adam Hull Shirk, who resigned several weeks ago.

Theatres on Trucks Visit German Towns

SOMETHING different in the way of movie theatres are a new institution that lately has sprung up in Germany. Towns that do not boast theatres have the film shows brought to them. Trucks equipped to display films on their sides visit the rural sections with the latest German films which are projected on window-like screens on each side of the truck. This means that each traveling outfit carries with it four sets of films of all of the shows. Inside the traveling vehicles are the projection machines and they throw images on the inner sides of the screens which are composed of transparent materials.

Players Now Get Own Voice Tests In Seeking Jobs

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Voice tests for screen players, specially recorded by the individuals in less than 15 minutes, is the latest innovation to hit Hollywood as a result of the demand for suitable talking voices for dialogue pictures.

The Western Acoustic Laboratories has opened an office in Hollywood, and is making special voice tests on aluminum records for screen players. The system is fully patented, and allows the recording on aluminum discs through a microphone and electric apparatus the same as used in the studios. The finished aluminum disc can be played back immediately after being recorded, and, unlike the wax method, can be played an indefinite number of times.

Film players are having their voice tests made, and then taking them around to the various casting offices. At the studios, the records are played on a regular phonograph to give producers and directors an idea of the qualities of the player's voice reproduction. The special voice tests being made by Western Acoustic Laboratories run around fifteen dollars each; which is claimed to be much cheaper than the method of recording on wax.

California Exhibs Oppose New Daylight Saving Bill

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—A bill for one hour daylight saving has been presented to the California State Legislature, now in session. Exhibitors and theatre circuits have voiced their opposition to such a measure being effective throughout the state.

Similar measures have been presented periodically in the Legislature for several years, but on each occasion the bill never came out of committee.

Mary Nolan Is Loaned For Role In "Constant Wife"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Mary Nolan has been loaned to Paramount by Universal, and she will have the second female role in "The Constant Wife," starring Ruth Chatterton. The picture is being directed by Robert Milton.

Holiday Fails To Hold Broadway Up To Normal Week

Heavy Fall Of Snow May Have Been Cause Of Drop In Receipts

week, which only showed a falling off of $2,300 on the first week's business. "The Sins of the Father," with Emil Jannings, finished its run one day short of three weeks and for the final six days showed $4,970,000, which was at the ratio of 62 1/5 per cent figured against the normal business average of the house.

"Ned McCobb's Daughter," a Pathe silent production at the Colony, finished the week with $11,200, while at the little Cameo the second week of "The Lash of the Czar" did $5,988.

"Not Since 'The Big Parade'"

It is no more than natural that "The Broadway Melody" at the Astor should run away with the receipt honors among the two-a-day pictures. Not since "The Big Parade" has there been a picture on the street that is creating the comment that this one is. The second week of its run showed $24,969. But "Weary River" at the Central is also doing a mighty big business. Last week the Barthelmess picture played to $22,371 bringing its receipts up to $93,272 for four weeks and three days, which tops "Lilac Time," which was classed as a hit when it did $55,795.50 at the same house in the same length of time.

"The Redeeming Sin," which followed "My Man" at Warner's last week, managed to get business even though panned hard by the dailies, the statement showing $20,130.25, but the chances are that this business will not hold up. . "The Bellamy Trial" passed on after three weeks, getting $3,470 on the final six days of its run, and Paramount's "The Wolf Song" opened at the house last Saturday night.

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" is still holding on at the Winter Garden with the business last week showing $30,743.25, while "Redskin," at the Criterion, came through with $12,384.

"Iron Mask" Going Strong

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask," which came into the Rivoli on Thursday night, managed to pull very heavily at the box office. The opening performance was at $2.50 top, with a midnight show following immediately after at regular box office prices. Then the day following was a holiday and then came Saturday and Sunday all with the higher admission tariff, so that with this break the Fairbanks picture managed to draw $35,902.. The house record at the Rivoli is held by Harold Lloyd's "Speedy" and stands at $49,000, which the Fairbanks picture is pretty certain to smash.

Chart Summary Shows Most Of Leading Sound Features Doing Well At Box-Offices

"Redeeming Sin," Hot In N. Y. Shows Falling Off In Percentages In Other Cities

SUMMARIZING from the reports received from correspondents of MOTION PICTURE NEWS on percentage results obtained from different feature pictures in various parts of the country the majority of the leading sound features are proving noteworthy attractions at the box-offices, with an occasional picture flopping here and there.

Different parts of the United States apparently like different types of pictures. As an instance of this "The Redeeming Sin" did good business in New York, but has fallen down rather badly in most cities from which reports have been received. The exception is Milwaukee. There this feature played the Garden Theatre to a percentage that figured 130 above normal.

The same film showing at the Minnesota Theatre in Minneapolis had the low percentage of 65¾. In fact Milwaukee was the only city that reported above normal. The Capitol, at Cedar Rapids, said this picture played to 90 per cent of normal. At the Newman, in Kansas City, it did 85 per cent and at the Ambassador in St. Louis, 92 per cent.

"The Flying Fleet," on the other hand, is reported well above normal from all sections. At Loew's State, in Syracuse, it is reported to have gone to 175 per cent. Richmond, Virginia, reports 135 per cent, Joliet, Illinois, 110 per cent and St. Louis, 108 per cent.

Another instance of a picture that has reported breaking house records in some sections and falling off in others is "Shopworn Angel." At the Michigan in Ann Arbor reports tell that it did 62 per cent and at the Capitol, in Cedar Rapids, 85 per cent.

"In Old Arizona" brings in good and bad reports. In past weeks it has gone well over the top. Here we have a report from the Canton, Ohio, Strand, showing 150 per cent, above normal, and from the Merrill, Milwaukee, 90 per cent.

"The Barker" is consistently 100 per cent. At the Imperial, in Ashville, N. C., it did 103, at the Byrd, in Richmond, Va., 105, and at the Alhambra, in Milwaukee, 175.

"The Wolf of Wall Street" is another that is apparently clicking everywhere. Syracuse reports it as playing just to normal business, but at the Midtown, in St. Louis, it did 119 per cent, and at the Circle, in Indianapolis, 115 per cent.

Diane Ellis makes an exceedingly attractive representative of the law. Pathe has just added her to its stock company due to her work in "The Leathernecks," in which her blonde beauty is set off to advantage

Negri Film In Paris To Use New Lighting System

By L. C. MOEN

(Paris Correspondent, Motion Picture News)

Paris, Feb. 5.—Production of Pola Negri's first film since her return to Europe, "The Queen's Necklace," will commence March 1, according to present plans, in the studios at Epinay, near Paris. Gaston Ravel will direct, and a cast of distinguished artists will be chosen to surround Miss Negri.

Distribution in France will be by Auhert, and there are unconfirmed rumors of a deal with United Artists for American release.

"The Queen's Necklace" will be photographed by incandescent light, using a newly developed French system which eliminates all diffusers, yet gives a minimum of glare and heat with a maximum photographic value. Successful tests of this lighting have just been made at the Epinay studios by A. P. Richard, the technician in charge of the installation.

RKO Engages Gilda Gray For Coast To Coast Tour

Gilda Gray has signed a contract for a tour of twenty weeks over the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit. The dancer and motion-picture star will present an ensemble act, assisted by twelve dancers, that has been specially written and is now in preparation. The arrangements were made by George Godfrey, head of the RKO booking department. Miss Gray will open at the B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre, Boston, on Monday, March 11th, and her tour will close in Los Angeles.

Indies Invade Talking Short Comedy Market

A number of the independents are invading the talkie production market with an idea of turning out a number of short comedy subjects. Within the last two weeks two separate contracts have been drawn for the making of short talking subjects. In addition to this Columbia Pictures are about to enter the short subject field with a number of talking shorts for the coming season.

Harry Delf was to have signed a contract about ten days ago with Columbia but during the current week he became one of the incorporators of a new company which is to produce a series of 24 shorts in dialogue and sound. These pictures are to be made at the DeForest Studios in New York and are to be sold in the independent market. Delf was the first director of short talking pictures on the coast for the Fox Film Corp. and directed "The Family Picnic." Under his present arrangement he will both write and direct for the new organization.

It is possible that a deal may be made whereby Columbia may take over the releasing of this product. In that event, the production would undoubtedly be switched to the Columbia Studios on the coast, where several sound stages have been finished and the equipment for recording of dialogue pictures is to be installed shortly.

"Hell's Angels" To Road Show In Twelve Reels

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—"Hell's Angels," Caddo Productions $2,500,000 air spectacle, has been cut down to 17,000 feet; with present plans calling for it to go out in roadshow form in twelve reels. It is claimed by a company official that only a few inserts remain to be made for the picture to be completed.

"Hell's Angels" is the long distance picture of the current crop. The first scenes were made in October, 1927, under direction of Luther Reed. A few months later, Howard Hughes, head of Caddo, took over the magaphone and has continued ever since.

Production cost originally set at $1,000,000 was soon passed and expenditures on the way to the second million before the end of the picture was in sight. The production will be released as a two-a-day roadshow without dialogue, but sound effects will be included.

Flaherty Working In New Mexico On Indian Epic

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Robert J. Flaherty is producing a feature epic in New Mexico, using the Acomas tribe of Indians, the original cliff dwellers, as background for the story.

Fox is keeping the exact location of Flaherty's producing unit a secret, also details of the story and its development. It is understood that the company figures to have the picture ready for fall release and shoot it into Broadway for a $2 top run; smashing heavy on the publicity at that time.

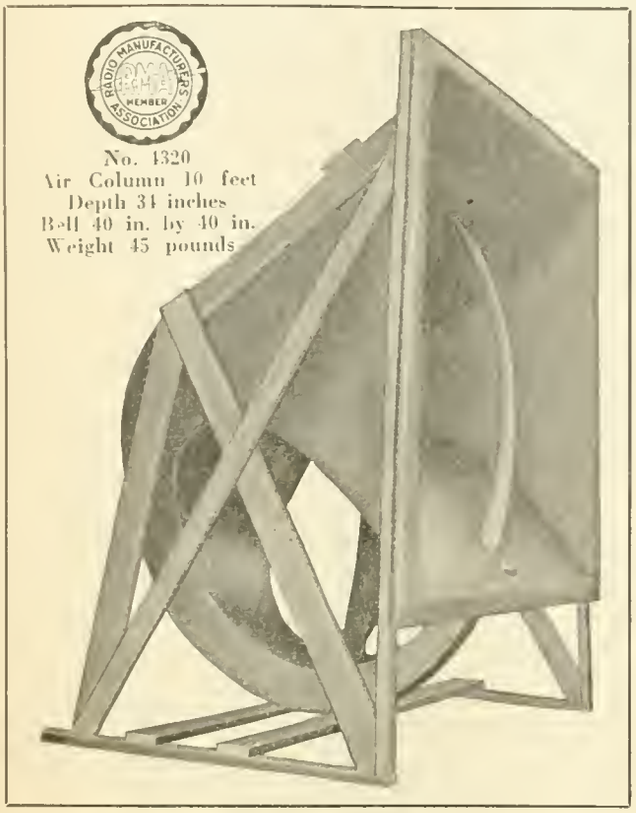
Harry Reichenbach Analyzes Showmanship — Sound and Otherwise

Pictorial Review of Theatres.

Business Building Theatre Map.

WE BEG permission to usurp temporarily this place customarily dedicated to the pictorial aspects of theatre architecture, that we may invite attention to the institution of a policy giving added emphasis to technical features of that newest and most important development of the motion picture—Sound.

For this step there is ample reason in the conditions now controlling the situation which, in its present form, has solidified almost over-night. We refer, of course, to the increasing application of numerous sound reproducing installations which, while developed by experts in electrical and mechanical engineering and specialists in sound recording and reproducing, nevertheless, must be operated and serviced by theatre men.



Through the early stages of the development—a period marked by many distracting influences, not the least of which was the subject of interchangeability—the theatre man had little concern with the servicing of apparatus, because during that stage practically all of the equipment in use was supplied by concerns which provide servicing as a fixed feature of the contract. An entire change has come with the appearance of apparatus for which such service is not provided.

The Showman therefore inaugurates an extended service to meet this demand. We begin at the beginning, with editorial features designed to lay the foundation for a broad understanding of the general aspects of the mechanical, electrical and accoustical elements and properties which are operative in the successful presentation of sound pictures. This is regarded essental to a proper appreciation and understanding of the more detailed studies of the subject that will follow, as well as the new developments the near future may well be expected to produce in great profusion.

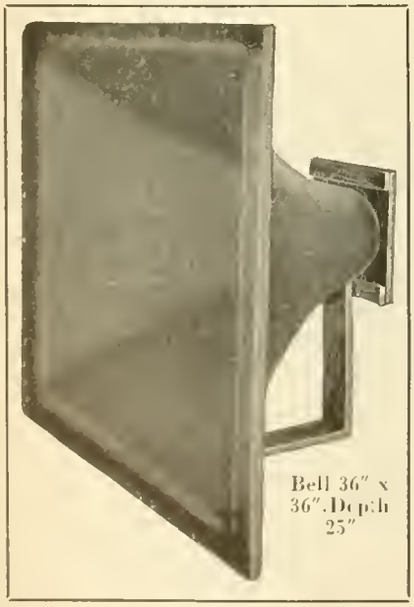
Bell 40 in. by 40 in.
Weight 45 pounds

Crowded theatres mean extra profits that wipe out debts and mortgages and create a growing surplus.

Racon Horns electrify audiences with their marvelous human appeal in recreating thrilling stage dramas and the most famous Grand Opera artists.



Of the many reasons why Racon Horns hold the millions spellbound, its patented non-vibratory material stands first—one-piece construction so light that it can be quickly mounted where wanted.

Giant Dynamic Horn Unit

Perfect reproductions — 75 cycles up without distortion or unnatural tones.

Racon Dynamic Units on Racon Exponential Horns give perfect reproduction for all frequencies without distortion, will operate on any make power amplifier without rattling and add naturalness to mechanical reproduction.

Bell 36" x 36". Depth 25"

Racon Horn Baffles for Dynamic Cones add brilliance and depth to reproduction, in addition to giving greater volume and projection power. Made in all sizes to fit any make dynamic cone.

Now Phototone "Talkie"

A New Synchronous Disc Device that every house can afford

The same perfection of result and ingenuity of design which has caused the Phototone non-synchronous device to be installed in a greater number of motion picture theaters than are using any similar machine is back of the new Synchronous device by Phototone.

This device is offered after months of experience and research—a complete synchronous attachment, perfected in all its details; substantially built; and conforming to the Phototone policy of offering the best at lowest possible cost.

This new and better synchronous device is now ready for the market. Installations are being made. Get the details. Just use the coupon to indicate the type of equipment in which you are interested or get in touch with our nearest office.

Watch for Announcement of Phototone's Sound on Film

In about thirty days. Phototone will have ready for delivery a modestly priced Sound on Film attachment which can be applied to present Phototone installations.

The Heart of Sound Reproduction

If you have or contemplate installing any electrical reproducing device for furnishing music as an accompaniment for motion pictures, you should be vitally interested in what amplifier is used.

The amplifier is the heart of any such equipment

Not only is quality of reproduction, and by "quality" we mean reproduction like the original, important, but freedom from breakdowns with the attendant interruption of programs is paramount.

Most manufacturers of such equipment use SAMSON "PAM" amplifiers, although they cost more, because back of each "PAM" amplifier is a manufacturing organization of 46 years' experience, of which the last 30 years have been devoted to the design and manufacture of electrical sound transmitting and reproducing equipment. Theatre Managers who now own equipment (and there are hundreds of them) using "PAM" amplifiers will confirm these statements.

As an assurance of uninterrupted performances and quality of reproduction such that your patrons wish to come and listen again, be sure when you make your purchase that the names "PAM" and SAMSON appear on the amplifier.

For special amplifier problems of all kinds our engineering laboratories are available and will apply to your particular requirements the results of varied amplifier experience.

Our illustrated bulletin TBG-1, descriptive of the different amplifiers we manufacture is yours for the asking

The Talkies Have a Past!

Analyze Today's Equipment, Trace Its Component Parts to Their Sources in Scientitst's Laboratory and Inventor's Shop and You Find—

*by John F. Rider

YOU are in the laboratory of M. Leon Scott, a dapper Frenchman of the 19th century, the year 1857 to be exact. A pair of gleaming eyes are scanning the excited faces of the men assembled in this crude workshop. The guests' eyes are focused upon a small contrivance upon the workshop bench. They wait with abated breath. The air is tense. This is to be the first demonstration of a new marvel. The host walks towards his brainchild—followed by his visitors. He comes to rest in front of a small machine consisting of a small barrel shaped mouthpiece to which is attached by means of small levers, a light bristle. This stylus rests lightly upon a smoked paper attached to a light drum shaped cylinder which is mounted upon a long worm gear, operated by a small crank handle. When the handle is operated the cylinder and smoked paper move forward. The man bends low to the monthpiece and takes hold of the handle. He rotates the drum and slowly speaks into the mouthpiece. A wavy line is traced upon the smoked paper. . . . This wavy line was the first known record of sound vibrations and the forerunner of the present Vitaphone system.

Let us now remove ourselves to a small town in Ireland, Valencia by name. Once more it is the 19th Century and this time the discovery is accidential. We are in the eastern terminal station of the Atlantic Cable. It is a cloudy day. The sun is shining through the station windows, and a formation of clouds dulls its brilliance every minute or so. The operator, a Mr. May by name, is quite excited. His station instruments are performing in an erratic manner—deucedly aggravating because they appear to be in perfect condition. . . . Yet every time the sunlight shone upon a certain part of the equipment, one meter would flicker. Investigation showed this to be true. The element Selenium was being utilized as a resistance and whenever sunlight struck the unit, the electrical current flow through the unit was increased. . . . Thus a means of turning light into electricity—the forerunner of the present day Fox-Movietone and similar systems.

Twenty years after the 1857 demonstration, in the year 1877, Thonias A. Edison produced an epochal invention, a machine similar to the old phonoutograph, as the Frenchman's device was known. The American machine was a great improvement. The smoked paper was replaced by a sheet of tinfoil. The old gutta-percha diaphragm was replaced by an iron one and the bristle was replaced by a stylus attached directly to the diaphragm. The old wavy line was replaced by an impression of variable depth. This record permitted reproduction of the original sound—the first real record and the first pick-up. At the same time, Chas. Cross in France planned a photo-engraving of the wavy line produced by Scott in the attempt to make a metal record. This system was, however, abandoned.

In 1887 Bell and Tainter made a wax record in place of Edison's tinfoil, which arrangement afforded a more permanent impression. Two short years after came the first sample of the modern system. In this year Emil Berliner, of microphone fame, patented the first disk record whereon the vibration of a diaphragm was recorded as a wavy line on a horizontal plane instead of the vertical cut made in the cylinder. In 1888 Edison produced the first cylinder record, that could be slipped on and off a mandrel. Nine years later, 1897, saw the wholesale manufacture of the disk record in use today. Improved modifications have been applied but the principle of operation is still the same.

The discovery of the high sensitivity properties of Selenium led to furious investigation, successful but unable to overcome one fault, lack of instantaneous response necessary where the frequency of the light beam is variable and comparatively rapid. Fortunately, however, other investigators were solving problems in other fields and unknowingly developing the equipment of today. A German physicist, Heinrich Hertz by name, during some work in 1888 discovered that electric sparks passed more readily when ultra-violet rays lay in their path. This discovery was taken in hand by other investigators, Hallwachs, Geitel, Elster and others. Their motive was to prove that light could be converted into electricity by securing electronic emission from certain elements when these elements were contained in an evacuated chamber and subjected to light. These elements were alkali metals, at the present time, rubidium, sodium, and potassium. Their investigations produced the first photo-electric cells, the forerunners of the present cells and infinitely more efficient than Selenium, because the photo-electric cell is instantaneous in response. Since a high degree of vacuum was necessary within the cell, the first successful cell was produced after the development of the Mercury Vapour pump by Gaede in 1915. Further developments upon such pumps were made by Langmuir. Hence we see the brainchildren of men who never dreamed of "Talkies" constituting the nucleus for the systems.

As far as "Talkies" are concerned, all of the above would be useless were it not for another investigator who burned the midnight oil for years on end. This man is Dr. Lee DeForest, who in 1907 improved upon the findings of Fleming between the years 1890 and 1904 and produced the vacuum amplifying tube.

Harry Reichenbach Analyzes

Showmanship That Sold the Talkies and Other Film Successes

Since Harry Reichenbach wrote it, there's no need our telling you that here is an article that will give such a view of the subject as can be gained only through the vision of one having a rich background in experience and accomplishment in the art and craft of Ballyhoo. It is a story that will entertain and inform everybody in showbusiness, from the biggest executive to the newest recruit. Mr. Reichenbach as chief of special exploitation for Universal at present is devoting his talents to the selling of "Show Boat" and "Broadway."

SHOWMANSHIP, that subtle element so sought after, so seldom found, is the basis for that success which has come to most amusement enterprises. Showmanship, a fleeting ingredient in the formulae of putting over entertainment attempts, is more a mystery to most executives, today, than it has ever been.

Without the shadow of doubt, Warner Brothers' discovery of Vitaphone and the launching of the talking film, was the finest demonstration of sustained showmanship in film history. Other stunts, discoveries, innovations pigmy in comparison. True, talking pictures have been tried before, but the manner of handling, the surprise created when the first Vitaphone was shown, their exact analysis of the public mind in permitting their first audiences to discover the dialogue, rather than take the surprise away by announcing it to the housetops, was masterful and has redeemed itself to the tune of millions.

Other companies demonstrated either a lack of the element of theatre or too deep a cynicism for they failed to appreciate the element of attractiveness soon enough and Warner distanced the field while they were deliberating.

There have been many milestones on the roadway of showmanship during the past fifteen years and without in any way offering my own efforts as highlights, still I will at least intersperse this story with a few of my own doings and you can accept them in whatever light you desire.

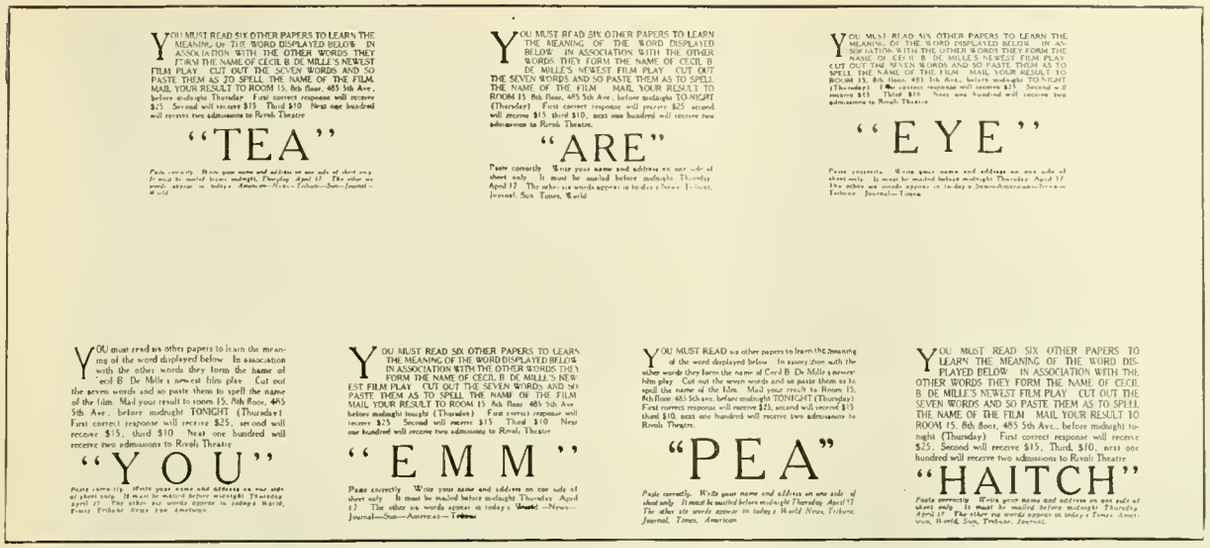
Two names stand out as leaders. Victor Shapiro and Howard Dietz were the most active. Dietz' splendid handling of "Brothers Under The Skin" and Shapiro's work with Wolheim and Mary Pickford.

Dietz' sustained advertising campaign in the trade papers has been unequaled True, some of it smattered of wise cracking, but this he explained was part of the general plan to tear down resistance and create sales susceptibility, by means of good humor.

Shapiro's efforts on behalf of Mary Pickford on two occasions, "My Best Girl" and "Coquette," are outstanding examples of publicity gestures in and of a slipping star that were so creative in intent and so widespread in effect that Miss Pickford was put on the screen map again.

Ballyhoo is merely the broadcasting of spectacular waves on a low kilocycle basis, intended to reach many pockets.

Showmanship is the sending forth of one man's thoughts to inhabit the minds of the multitude.



Corona Corona and Tiffany need no parades, they are firmly established. Those who want them or their products, go to them year after year. New customers are built for them by word of mouth, tradition—: BUT THERE IS NO TRADITION WHATEVER ABOUT THE THEATRE. ONE WEEK UP, ONE WEEK DOWN AND THE TRADE GOES AS THE MERIT FALLS OR RISES. TIFFANY QUALITY NEVER CHANGES. PICTURES AND THEATRICAL OFFERINGS ARE NEVER CONSISTENT. THEREFORE EACH AND EVERY OFFERING NEEDS ITS CONDIMENT OF ATTENTION ATTRACTING SPICES IN THE WAY OF ADVERTISING, POSTING, STUNTING — IN A WORD, BALLYHOO.

Take one experience of my own which I will relate with as much modesty as I can. However, I am not shy enough to think that advertising is going to hurt me. Surely if they pay me to get it for their stars, it cannot but benefit me in some way.

Carl Laemmle, the first producer to pay me a bigger salary than I thought would ever be possible to achieve, sent for me to handle a Priscilla Dean film. Miss Dean's pictures had never grossed

When "Peter Pan" played Broadway! The "gay white way" was pennated from the Rivoli theatre at 50th St. to Times Square. A Reichenbach stunt

A one-day newspaper campaign that brought 200,000 replies in less than eight hours. The ads shown were displayed in seven different New York dailies. The text of the ads explain this idea, invented for "Triumph" by Reichenbach more than one hundred thousand dollars in the U. S. The picture was "Virgin of Stamboul."

I WON'T go into details as to its handling. However, you must remember the crew of turks I placed in the Majestic Hotel with the result that the name of the film stayed on the front pages of the world's newspapers for four days. After this stunt the picture opened at the Broadway Theatre and I have letters from the chief executives of Universal of that period stating that "Virgin of Stamboul" grossed more than half a million dollars.

The first Tarzan film "Tarzan of the Apes" was offered to every distributor in America for fifty thousand dollars on an outright sale basis and refused. George Kleine offered the National Film Company $20,000 outright for the negative.

I placed the picture in the Broadway Theatre following a spectacular campaign, kept the campaign up for five weeks after we opened, with the result that First National purchased the picture for $125,000 advance and fifty per cent of the gross.

Here was a complete failure turned into a success by means of sensational publicity. Pictures have ever been the attraction for the man in the street. Occasionally the Colonel's Lady leaves her snug fireside to attend a film that has created a stir, but it's Judy O'Grady who goes day after day to see her favorite.

Contrasting recent demonstrations of showmanship application, the treatment received by "The Broadway Melody," which was guided by Dietz, against the bungling of "Abie's Irish Rose" last Spring. Plenty of money was spent on Abie. Bernard Sobel is more than competent as a publicity man, but the line of material used, the advance superlatives such, for instance, as "The Greatest Picture Paramount Ever Made" condemned the picture from the start. This is not a criticism of Paramount or Sobel. But of Ann Nichols and her managerial staff, who controlled the film and all its details and who demanded the treatment that really killed any chances the picture had.

My own experience with "Potash and Perlmutter" illustrates the fallability of publicity and publicity men.

I arranged a Comedy campaign that was used in New York and our business at the Strand exceeded expectations. However, when I applied the same material in advance of the Chicago campaign and the picture opened to unsatisfactory returns, Sam Katz, whose opinion has always been law with me, said:

"YOUR campaign is fine, but I'm afraid you have kept the women away by your failure to high light the romantic side of the picture."

The very next day I followed his suggestion and injected plenty of romance into the copy, with the result that our business improved and we began noting a great increase in feminine attendants.

I immediately wired all First National Exchanges and asked them to destroy the matter sent them and sent out an entirely new set of advance press and advertising campaign books.

Mr. Katz was rarely wrong in his estimate of what a film would do and during twenty campaigns I handled at various Balaban and Katz Theatres, he has never restricted either my efforts or made any effort to curtail expenditures. His judgment of what constituted sufficient appropriations was always correct and proved ample.

Samuel Katz is no accident of the theatre.

While I have done no trade paper advertising for the past six years, because my work has not called for that type of exploitation, I do think this is sadly neglected now in comparison to the effectiveness of former days.

When I was busy with "When Bear Cat Went Dry" and was informed by Coast representatives that the picture was just so-so, I carried an intensive campaign in three trade papers with the result that I got thousands of letters from exhibitors. Later these exhibitors were given advance publicity and exploitation material on the picture and announced their willingness to play the film and still later, armed with these letters, I sold the film to World Film before the negative was completed. They bought five thousand exhibitor letters and prospects and

THE MARKET AGAIN REACHED A NEW HIGH LEVEL TODAY

THREE MOTION PICTURE STOCKS REACHED LEVELS AS YET UNTOUCHED BY ANY THREE STOCKS IN ONE DAY.

Rudolph Valentino in "Sainted Devil" at the Mark Strand paid big dividends yesterday and will continue all week, to those who invest from fifty to eighty-five cents per Chair.

Gloria Swanson in "Wages of Virtue" at the Rivoli declared an extra dividend yesterday and will also continue these payments all this week.

Swanson's stock reached a new high in this production and happy indeed were the investors who crowded the Rivoli exchange.

Pola Negri in "Forbidden Paradise" is an older stock which was tremendously popular with the public last week, more than seventy thousand Chairs being sold, and it has been held over to accommodate investors who failed to get in on the market last week.

The new Fox Theatre in Detroit, acoustically treated with sound-absorbing material

Theatre Acoustics and Sound Films

by

*Raymond V. Parsons

A GREAT deal is being said and written about the acoustical problems that will arise in motion picture theatres after the introduction of sound film equipment. The consensus of opinion of architects and theatre owners appears to be that talking pictures are going to introduce new and extraordinary acoustical problems.

As a matter of fact, there is no reason why the sounds of speech or music reproduced even in a comparatively faithful manner by a loud speaker should introduce a different acoustical problem in an auditorium than the original speech or music would introduce into the same auditorium. They are both sources of sound and have approximately the same characteristics. The truth of the matter is, that acoustical phenomena of a distressing nature exists in many theatres devoted to moving pictures. These phenomena are not the outgrowth of any one particular style of architecture, or size of theatre, but are due to many factors of shape, size, and materials comprising the interior finish. Theatres that are acoustically defective which have heretofore been confined to the silent picture and incidental music, have in many cases been considered acceptable acoustically only because the more severe requirement of good acoustics for speech has not been demanded of them.

Let us examine for a moment, the principal acoustical difficulty found in theatre auditoriums—the phenomenon of reverberation. Sound produced by any source in the open air is rapidly dissipated as the sound wave expands in size from its source. But when this same sound is produced in an auditorium such as a theatre, it is confined in a sort of container, and the floor, walls and ceiling of the average theatre are, generally speaking, excellent retaining walls for sound. This is because the materials comprising the interior finish of theatres are excellent reflectors of sound and very poor absorbents, with the result that any sound energy produced in them must make many reflections from surface to surface, walls to ceiling, ceiling to floor, floor to walls, etc., many times, before the sound energy has been completely dissipated or absorbed.

One effect of this continued reflection of sound is to provide a more even distribution of intensity or loudness throughout the auditorium, which is an excellent attribute; but it also has the effect of prolonging the syllables of speech and the notes of music for an appreciable length of time, and this prolongation of sound often results in the blurring or running together of the syllables and notes, which results in reverberation. And reverberation is the cause of 90 per cent of the acoustical problems which arise in any type of auditorium.

Reverberation does not exist outdoors where sound is rapidly dissipated by the natural law of diminishing intensity, so that if the walls and ceilings of our theatres could be made totally absorbent of sound, this principal acoustical difficulty in auditoriums would automatically disappear. But, on the other hand, we would lose that desirable quality of uniform loudness. It is evident that there is a point of balance between adequate and well distributed loudness, and a modified reverberation which will result in ideal acoustics.

The very shape and form of the modern theatre help to provide good acoustical conditions. They are usually abundantly furnished with carpets, draperies and upholstered seats, the former two being highly absorbent of sound, and the upholstered seats compensating for the absorbing power of a maximum audience when only small audiences are in attendance.

THEN the introduction of a balcony or balconies, cuts down the path length of sounds reflected from the ceiling and makes the rear portion of the theatre auditorium almost perfectly absorbent of sound. It is for this combination of reasons that it can be confidently stated that the theatre type of auditorium is more apt to be good acoustically than defective and this is even more true of the modern large, elaborately equipped theatre in big cities, than of the small 600 to 1000 capacity house which is usually less elaborately furnished, and without a balcony or gallereis.

Enough of a survey has already been made to determine that many houses which were considered acceptable acoustically for incidental music are going to be found wanting for the reproduction of speech, simply because speech demands a lower period of reverberation than music. We have become accustomed to the blending together of the notes of music. If it is not carried to extremes, the effect is pleasing rather than unpleasant, but in speech we must be able to hear each syllable of a sentence clearly and distinctly —we must be able to understand what is being said without strain.

The entire problem, fortunately, has a very exact and scientific background. Researches on the subject of acoustics commenced by the late Professor Wallace Clement Sabine, Harvard University, back in 1895 resulted in means of determining the acoustical conditions of existing theatres with mathematical exactness, and the means which should be employed for correcting poor acoustical conditions. The acoustical condition of a theatre may with equal exactness be calculated in new buildings in advance of construction, and good "built into" the theatre as confidently as cement floors and plaster walls are "built in" and made a part of the structure.

The point to be borne in mind, however, is the fact that the acoustical problem presented by the sound film is not a new one, nor a different one from the acoustical problem that is presented by a speaker, singer, or orchestra. As long as sound films reproduce speech, the theatre in which sound films are to be reproduced must be as capable of comfortable audition as though speakers, singers and orchestras were present in the theatre in flesh and blood.

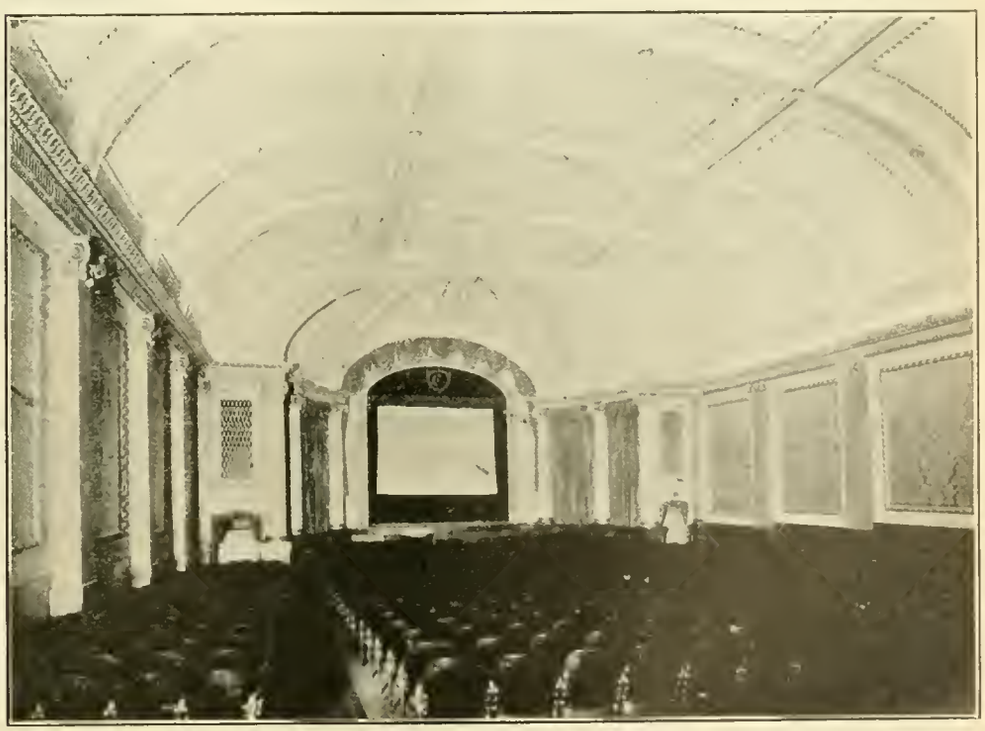
The sound film should not limit the size of the theatre any more than the ability of a speaker or singer should limit the size of any other type of auditorium. Theatres seating more than 5,000 people have been put into commission since the advent of sound films with perfectly satisfactory reproduction and audition throughout the auditoriums.

Criticism has admittedly been directed at the sound movie, and with a certain amount of justice, but in many cases the acoustics of the theatre has been blamed, whereas, as a matter of fact, the faults have been in the production and reproduction of the film. The producer has a much more difficult acoustical problem than the reproducer. He must to a large extent, confine his work in studios which will exclude extraneous noise, and he must provide acoustical conditions in these studios which will not distort the original sound and which will be practically free from reverberation.

The acoustics of the reproducing theatre should not be blamed for the accentuation of the lower register in either reproduced speech or music if it does not accentuate the lower register of the actual speaking and singing voice. This is a matter of quality which must be built into the film, and we have yet to see a filtering system in a reproducing apparatus which will to any considerable degree compensate for poor recording. On the other hand, the theatre owner and the sound film reproducing equipment engineer have a very definite responsibility in gauging the loudness of their reproduction to the requirements of the theatre. It is perfectly absurd to reproduce speech four or five times as loud as though the actors were present on the stage of the theatre.

SOUND perspective cannot be successfully manipulated by the operator in the theatre. It too, must be built into the film, and very few directors are as yet using this tool effectively. One fact should be strongly emphasized, and that is, the futility of rehearsing the sound film in an empty theatre in order to gauge the intensity with which it should be reproduced before an audience. People are practically totally absorbent of sound due to the high sound absorbing quality of their clothing, and the greater absorption which is automatically introduced with the introduction of an audience cuts down the carrying power of sound to a great degree. The intensity level will always have to be higher in a theatre with an audience than in an empty room, but in all the reproductions the writer has seen, this one feature has been badly overemphasized. And the intensity level has a very important bearing on quality.

IN our opinion there are several factors which will make or break the talking movie as entertainment:



First, a new technique of production must be developed which will utilize sound perspective, and this requires a more than superficial knowledge of the laws of acoustics.

Second, the sound film studio must have an acoustical quality capable of recording both speech and music with fidelity and in a manner that will retain the proper relative intensity of the delicate overtones and partials which are the individual characteristics of speakers, singers and musical instruments alike.

Third, any theatre contemplating the installation of sound film equipment should have an examination made of the acoustical qualities of the theatre by a competent engineer.

Fourth, it should be borne in mind that the theatre itself can add nothing to the quality of the sound recorded in the film or disc. At the best, it can only hope to reproduce the recorded sound as faithfully as it was produced.

These factors call for a nice cooperation between producer and reproducer, and a certain amount of tolerance on the part of the general public until both the producers' and reproducers' problems have been solved.

Surveying a Theatre Preparatory to Installation of Sound Apparatus

By H. B. Santee

Theatre Systems Engineer, Electrical Products, Inc.

IT is the purpose of this paper to explain the manner in which equipment employed for sound reproduction in theatres is installed and operated.

One of the most important factors in preparing a theatre for sound projection is the initial engineering survey.

The Survey engineer gathers pertinent information and prepares his recommendations. And while his recommendations are given due consideration, a special staff at the home office studies the survey and renders final decision. Survey information must therefore be complete.

In the projection room the engineer must investigate the power supply not only as to voltage and kind, but to determine if there is ample capacity to carry the load to be added, and if the regulation is suitable. The type and condition of the projection machines must be noted and the angle of projection learned. Is the space between machines ample for the attachment of the sound apparatus and for convenient operation. Is there an acceptable location in the room for the amplifying equipment and associated controls? It is sometimes necessary, particularly in the older theatres, to require rearrangement of the projection equipment or possibly an enlargement of the projection room. Such changes are naturally welcomed by the operating staff. Space, conveniently near but separately enclosed, must also be found to house the storage batteries.

The stage auditorium presents an item for careful study, for upon its characteristics is based the size of the system to be installed. The types of systems available, varying in power output, meet conditions imposed by theatres from the largest to the smallest and are so arranged and selected that, while sufficient sound volume is at hand in each case, no theatre is overburdened with excess.

As blue prints of the auditorium are not always available it is frequently necessary for the engineer to take the dimensions himself, for the cubical volume is an important factor. Seating capacity and the distribution of seats also bear influence. The general acoustics of the house must be considered. What degree of reverberation is present, bearing in mind the absorptive effect of the audience. Are there areas of echo or interference or of otherwise bad hearing? Are internal or external disturbing noises a factor? A final and specific study of acoustic properties can best be made at the time of system testing upon completion of the installation, but general effects can be and are observed during the survey process.

One standard practice which is followed in all cases requires that the horns and the back of the screen not occupied by the horns be completely enveloped by absorbent drapes. If the sheet is set back from the proscenium arch, it is also usual to hang drapes in shadow box effect. This treatment eliminates back stage reflections of sound.

After the horn locations have been definitely fixed and the equipment given a final check, the engineer proceeds to calibrate the theatre. He has available several test records embracing a rather wide variety of character of selection to cover various types of entertainment which will be shown in future in the theatre. Each record has been marked with a proper fader setting determined in a standard theatre. By playing these records at the marked value and adjusting the main volume control potentiometer on the amplifying equipment until the proper effects are obtained, it should be possible from then on to obtain good results by using normal fader volumes for any succeeding selections. In other words, this potentiometer setting which then remains fixed compensates for the varying sizes of theatres and permits like effects of reproduction to be obtained universally.

WHILE the installation has been progressing the operating personnel have been instructed in regard to the functioning of the equipment and the proper method to handle it. At the outset each man has been given a copy of a complete operating instruction bulletin for his personal keeping for study and reference. By the time of the completion of the work, and as a result of the running of the equipment during the acoustic tests the projectionist should now be able to start up and adjust the amplifying equipment preparatory to running the show. He should be able to thread the projector with film through the sound gate compartment with surety and for film reproduction adjust his sound reproducer lamp. For disc reproduction he should know how to place the starting mark of the film in its aperture and fix the needle of the reproducer on the starting mark of the record.

THE rehearsal of the opening program is an important event. It not only enables the projectionists to demonstrate their ability in handling the equipment under real operating conditions, but also gives them experience in actual change-overs of picture and fades. The engineer can acquaint the manager with the technique of running the show to obtain best results. While the physical operaton of the apparatus is the responsibility of the protographic image and the sound channel do not function simultaneously. As indicated in a previous paragraph, the film first passes through the projector head of the projection machine. This, of course, throws the photographic image on the screen. The film then goes into a magazine below the projection head where lght is projected through the sound channel. It follows, therefore, that if the sound record accompanying a given frame of photqgraphic image the sound would not be heard until some time after the picture had been shown. Approximately 19 frames separate any given portion of a picture from its accompanying sound record. The handling of film which is provided with a sound track does not differ materially from the handling of ordinary film, except as regards splicing. The latter is quite different from the method of slicing ordinary film. Unlike synchronized film for use with discs, Movietone film does not necessarily reach the exchange in one unbroken reel. That is. it may contain splices when received from the laboratory.

Care should be exercised to avoid breakage and to prevent the accumulation of oil and dust. Damage of this latter sort, however, is more likely to occur in use (while the film is in the projection machine) than when it is being handled in the inspection room. The amount of dust which accumulates on film in ordinary handling is not likely to have a noticeable effect upon sound reproduction. However, after a film has become oily it accumulates more dirt and grime than previously and under such circumstances trouble may result. The safe method is to use extreme caution in the handling of the film and to keep it in a clean condition.

Hand re-winding is advised. Electric Research Products, Inc., does not advise the use of a motor-driven rewinding machine either in the projection or inspection rooms. (This applies, by the way, to both sorts of synchronized film—disc and Movietone.)

Solved!

Your Sight-Sound Policy

A cue sheet for every picture you exhibit—a complete library of exactly the right accompaniment records to make your programs more entertaining.

The above is yours—complete—when you subscribe for the United Cue Service—made possible by the cooperative efforts of three great companies interested in the solution of the sight-sound problems of theaters which have not installed sound-synchronizing equipment. This new service solves your cuing problem—completely.

It not only gives you a cue library of approximately 150 records—but it shows you how to cue your pictures in the most realistic manner without going outside of that group of records—a special cue sheet for every picture you show during the year.

Many of the records were played by one of America's greatest symphony orchestras from scores especially written to fit moving picture situations. Others available at slight additional cost, give you the incidental sounds you need—crashes, shrieks, trains, airplanes, etc.

The service was inaugurated and is endorsed by Cameo Music Service Corporation, makers of Thematic Music Cue Sheets; The Phototone Company, and the Gennett Record Division of the Starr Piano Company.

A whole year's cuing—complete with thematic records—only $228.00. Less than year service, if desired.

How Talkies Were Used To Build Up "Dream Street"

By Harry Reichenbach

the makers of the film were spared the danger of loss or lack of distribution. World Film grossed four times what the picture cost. I think exhibitors made money for the rentals were low and the picture a fair entertainment.

"Dream Street" stands out as the best effort of my long experience. This Griffith film had been playing to mediocre returns at the Central Theatre. Mediocre for a Griffith feature. It was in its ninth week when I was sent for and told that they were cutting in two talking sequences and moving it from Broadway to the Town Hall on West 43rd Street.

Here then was a job.

However, everything was done for the engagement. I had several thousand dollars to spend for preliminary advertising.

I went before the Board of Aldermen and secured a permit to use a trolley car for advertising purposes. I then got the consent of Job Hedges, Receiver for the trolley lines, then had the measure passed by the Board of Aldermen (thanks to the wonderful cooperation of Congressman La Guardia, who is more ready to aid anyone than any politician in America.) I then got permission from the car lines and one week before the move, had the car bannered, faces painted on the windows, and the car ran from Washington Heights to the Battery every day at least six times and was seen by millions of people.

I changed Forty-third Street into "Dream Street." Every lamp post, every street sign was changed and merchants began advertising their locations as 24 Dream Street instead of West 43rd Street.

I hung the street from end to end with Chinese and American flags, spent what money I had on sensational display advertising and opened to capacity which kept up for two weeks. We did $14,568 the first week against $9,768 at the Central, which was on Broadway while we were now on a side street and had to pull our patrons up the street fully 200 feet.

This was the first attempt to use dialogue with film and owing to frailties of the mechanism, it was a flop, but we did what we started out to do—sold the house out and kept the crowds coming for two weeks.

Showmanship is not a matter of street ballyhoo. It is not the ability to attract attention to some wierd stunt for the eye with no selling argument attached. To be effective it must strike a responsive chord, at once, in the minds of the onlookers. Street ballyhoo is practically passe. In its place has come the highly decorative lobby, extensive advertising, continued and intensive publicity campaigns and the focusing of people's attention to the highlights of an attraction, which is in reality the detraction of the minds from an attractions frailties.

After fifteen years of forced draught it is a delight at last to be able to center ones energy on such features as "Show Boat" and "Broadway." And to be able to say that the executives of Universal, including R. H. Cochrane, Lew Metzger, P. D. Cochrane and, naturally, Carl Laemmle, are permitting full play of such humble talents I may possess.

Renovation Brings Old Boston Globe Back to Affluence as Popular Film Theatre

THE New Netoco Globe Theatre, situated at the intersection of Washington and Stuart Streets, in downtown Boston, offers an interesting example of what can be done in building up the business of a fine old theatre, which in the past few years had lost in patronage.

Built some 26 years ago, by Weber and Fields, the Globe had long enjoyed an enviable reputation as one of Boston's finest theatres. Legitimate drama, dramatic stock, vaudeville, motion pictures, and even Grand Opera were numbered among its successful ventures. Then suddenly, the Globe business began to fall off.

Acquired some months ago by the New England Theatre Operating Corporation, the Globe was subjected to a complete renovating and redecorating process, and from its reopening date last December, has proved itself a steady drawing card despite the fact that there are ten other theatres within two blocks of its doors.

When Samuel Pinanski of the New England Theatres Operating Corporation decided to add the Globe to the Necoto chain, he closed the theatre for two months, during which time staff of workmen went all through the house from the stage to the lobby, repainting, redecorating, remodelling. New fittings, hangings and lighting fixtures were installed, and the theatre was equipped for Vitaphone and Movietone presentations.

In the new color scheme of the theatre, crimson, blue and gold predominate. One striking feature of the decorative scheme is carried out in the theatre, and along the stairways and corridors throughout the house. This feature is the wall covering which consists of figured damask with alternate crimson and gold stripes contrasting well with the blue figuring.

Globe theatre, Boston, in its new dress

The foyer was done over in white and gold with the same wall covering as the auditorium. Elaborate crystal chandeliers which were put in when the theatre was built, have been retained because of their beauty and associations. The main chandelier in the auditorium is a huge crystal ball. The foyer is paved in pure white marble, and the two marble stairways lead to the mezzanine and balcony, the walls of which are composed of gray plaster, intersected with white lines to simulate rough masonry. The general effect is that of great walls of stone, which are softened by a glow of mulberry light from indirect fixtures. The perpendicular section which separates the mezzanine from the balcony is carried out in the same effect with rich crimson draperies hanging part way down the wall. High on the walls toward the ceiling of the theatre, are huge mural paintings of forest scenes, strikingly depicted. The ceiling itself has been gone over elaborately with gold predominating in the color scheme. Three tiers of boxes extending from the orchestra to the height of the balcony are elaborately carved, richly decorated and backed with heavy crimson hangings. On the mezzanine floor, directly above the main foyer, a huge mirror adds to the decorative scheme.

A great sign in yellow, green and red lights has been erected on the outside of the building, adding to the white way built up in this section in the past few years. The marquee announces in flashing red, white and green lights the current attraction.

The staff of ushers and doormen appear in the Netoco uniforms of pale blue with Sam Browne belts. They show the effect of careful training.

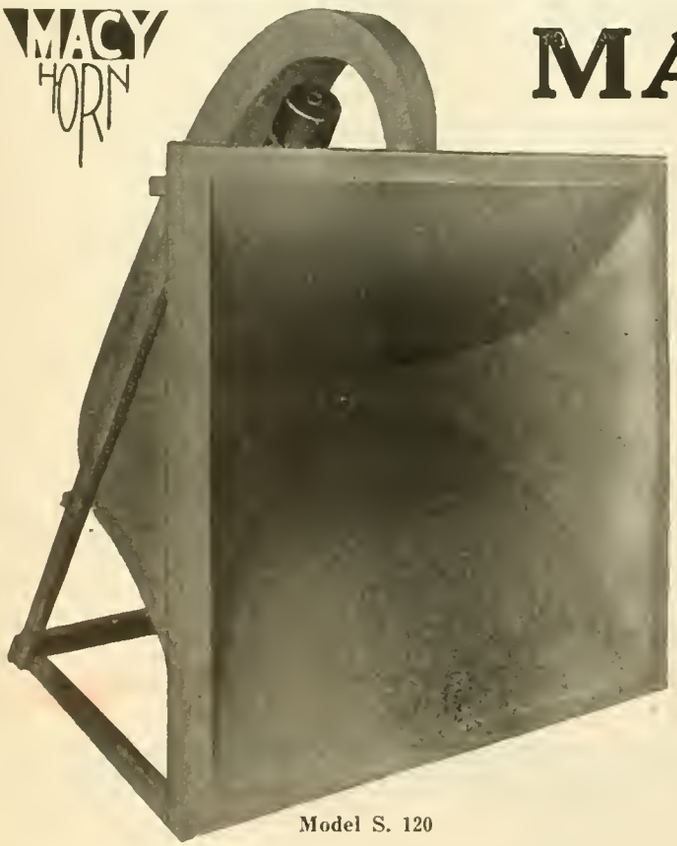
RCA Photophone Trains Specialists at Sound Motion Picture College

A NEW "college" has been established in the motion picture field. Under the auspices of RCA Photophone, Inc., representing the system of sound-motion picture production developed by leading radio interests in the United States, an army of technically trained men is rapidly being educated to the intricacies of sound-motion picture equipment in one of the most novel trade schools in the country.

Located at 438 West 37th Street, New York City, the RCA Photophone school is a combination lecture and laboratory institution in the developing of men who will understand the design, operation and manufacture of apparatus used in the talking cinema. Every individual need of sound pictures—projectionists, technicians, acoustical experts, theatre designers and electrical engineers—is being met in this "college."



Because of the dual system of sound motion pictures, in which either a phonographic disc record is used, or sound is photographed on film and later reproduced through an optical system, these men are undergoing highly specialized training in both fields. Technicians hitherto accustomed to the technique of the silent picture, are being educated to the intricacies of photographing the spoken word as well. Engineers who confined their activities to amplifying circuits are being trained to turn their talents to the development and operation of electrical systems which will give the highest quality in the reproduction of sound-motion pictures. A small army of recording engineers, upon whose abilities the talking picture stands or falls in large measure, are rapidly being initiated into the methods of capturing sound on disc or film. Another group, concerned with the highly important art of acoustics as applied to sound-motion picture studios and theatres, is developing new wrinkles in the sound-proofing and sound-improving of buildings.

An expert staff of instructors, recruited from the leading electrical laboratories affiliated with RCA Photophone, is directing the training of technical students into talking picture channels. Blackboard lectures in amplifying circuits, motor generators, storage batteries and other electrical equipment of sound pictures is an important preliminary part of the course.

Instruction in installing and servicing RCA Photophone equipment in the theatres is conducted through lecture courses and by actual laboratory service tests on RCA Photophone projectors, synchronous disc turntables, power supply apparatus, amplifiers, loud speakers and all the other electrical and mechanical details of RCA Photophone sound reproduction. Engineers and service men alike are rubbing shoulders each day over dismantled apparatus, taken apart item by item to better understand the operation.

Projectionists are given a specialized training course in the operation of the new sound equipment, including sound-on-film and disc record operation.

Instruction at the school is patterned closely after the approved methods of engineering instruction in American colleges and universities. The students are given lecture courses in the afternoons which prepare them for laboratory experiments on that subject the following morning.

Theatre Building Business Map

Including Analysis of Key City Attendance Averages

Above Average Business — Very light new construction

Light new construction

Average Business

Moderately heavy construction

Under Average Business — Heavy new conetruction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from January 15th to February 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities: solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the period from January 15th to February 15th, 1929. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the first-run theatres in these cities during the period covered. These are given by "averages," with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions.

These attendance statistics were compiled from an analysis of the Key City Reports, published weekly in Motion Picture News, and other sources of information gathered by this publication.

THE following is the monthly Showman report on new theatres projected from January 15th to February 15th.

For the United States and Canada, 54 new theatres were announced having a combined seating capacity of 74,350 and an estimated cost of $15,204,000. Of these theatres five will cost over a million dollars and three between $500,000 and a million. These figures give an average cost per theatre of $281,555 and an average seating of 1,377, with an average cost per seat of $204.50.

Details of this construction, divided according to the territorial divisions included in the accompanying map, show that the Middle States top other sections by a great margin, the total building for this territory being $7,080,000 to cover the cost of 16,900 seats for 12 theatres. In this territory two of the theatres will cost over a million and one between $500,000 and a million. An exceptionally large average cost per theatre is shown for this territory where $590,000 will be used to construct the average theatre seating 1,408, giving an average cost per seat of $419.

Next in line is New England, where four theatres will cost $1,675,000, with a total seating capacity of 11,100. One New England theatre calls for an investment of over a million. The cost per average theatre for this territory is considerably above the average for all theatres. $418,750 will be expended to construct a theatre of 2,775 seats giving a cost per seat of $151.

The Western territory nearly equals the New England schedule as here $1,620,000 will cover the cost of nine theatres seating 10,450. Again one theatre in this territory will cost over a million dollars. In this division the average theatre will seat 1,161 and cost $180,000, bringing the cost per seat to $155.

AMPLION CORPORATION OF AMERICA

133-141 West 21st Street, New York

The South Western district has scheduled $1,609,000 for 8 theatres which will seat 10,800. Included in this schedule are two theatres which will cost between $500,000 and a million dollars. The average cost per theatre in this territory is $201,125, seating 1,350, and the average cost per seat $150.

The West Coast, with the preceding three divisions, makes a group of four territories which have approximately the same building appropriations. The West Coast has 11 new theatres which will seat all together 12,600 and wil cost $1,355,000. These figures, reduced to the average theatre, show $123,180 cost, 1,145 seats, and cost per seat $107.50.

The most surprising feature of this report is that the North Atlantic states call for an investment of only $200,000 for 3 theatres seating all together 2,200. The averages per theatre are $66,700 cost with 730 seats and $91 cost per seat. This is the first time in the two years these monthly reports have been presented through THE SHOWMAN that this territory has failed to rank either 1st, 2nd or 3rd in the amount of building for all territories. Also, it's the first time the total cost of theatres for the North Atlantic states has been under a million dollars.

The South Eastern territory shows that three new theatres will cost $450,000 and seat 4,000, which gives $150,000 as the average cost per theatre in this territory with 1,333 seats and an average cost per seat of $112.50.

Canada shows a surprisingly active program where 4 theatres call for an investment of $1,215,000 and will altogether seat 6,300. The average theatre in this territory will cost $303,750 and will seat 1,575, giving an average cost per seat of $193.

Ohio takes individual honors among the states for this thirty-day report. Here four theatres, seating altogether 9,800, will cost $6,250,000.

Massachusetts, while ranking second, will only have $1,250,000 invested in two theatres seating altogether 7,000.

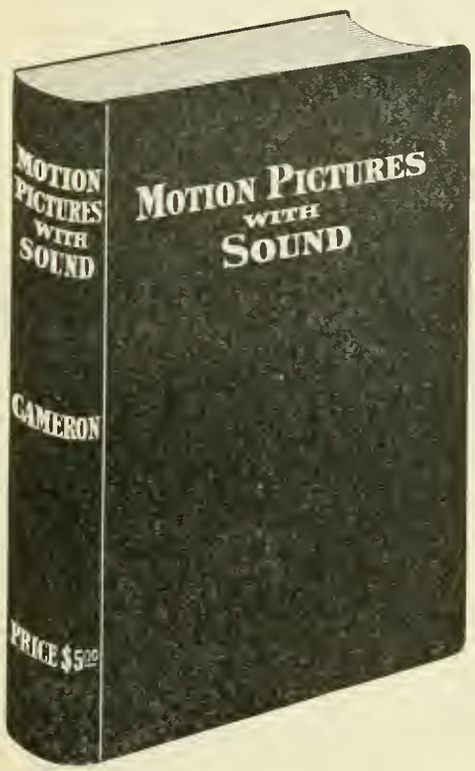
Oklahoma follows close to Massachusetts with two theatres which will cost together $1,100,000 and seat 6,000.

Colorado has scheduled one theatre which will cost $1,000,000 and seat 2,500, while California's seven theatres will together cost $650,000 and seat 6,750.

REPORTS emanating from the key cities during the past month—January 15 to February 15—showed the picture theatres during this period to be objects of a strange mixture of good and bad influences. There occurred during the period the Lincoln holiday and, to offset that, the usually depressed day, Ash Wednesday. Good pictures were rather plentiful, but so, too, was extremely unfavorable weather and the prevalence of illness. The flu condition had about burned itself out as the period of the current report drew to a close, but there were repercussions in various cities.

The picture attractions shown at the first runs during the period measured up to an unusually high standard of popular appeal, and several new records were established. For example: "The Canary Murder Case," the new Paramount talker, set a new mark for the Portland theatre in Portland, Ore.; "In Old Arizona" set the record figures of the Great Lakes in Buffalo up several notches; "Abie's Irish Rose" broke through former grosses at Loew's State in Syracuse; and "Wolf of Wall Street" turned in many excellent figures at several theatres, with a new record for the State in New Orleans, the biggest week the Paramount in Los Angeles has had in years, and several other sensational performances to its credit. Notable among the distinctions which have accrued to "Wolf of Wall Street" is the hold-over it was given at the Paramount in New York, which in this instance played a picture a second week for the first time in its history, and the returns for the second week more than justified those responsible for this move in their decision.

Following is the list of ten best picture attractions as rated by their performances at first run key city theatres during the period January 15 to February 15.



1. "In old Arizona"
2. "Interference"
3. "Shopworn Angel"
4. "Alias Jimmy Valentine"
5. "The Doctor's Secret"
6. "The Wolf of Wall Street"
7. "My Man"
8. "The Barker"
9. "Submarine"
10. "On Trial"

PICTORIAL REVIEW OF THEATRES

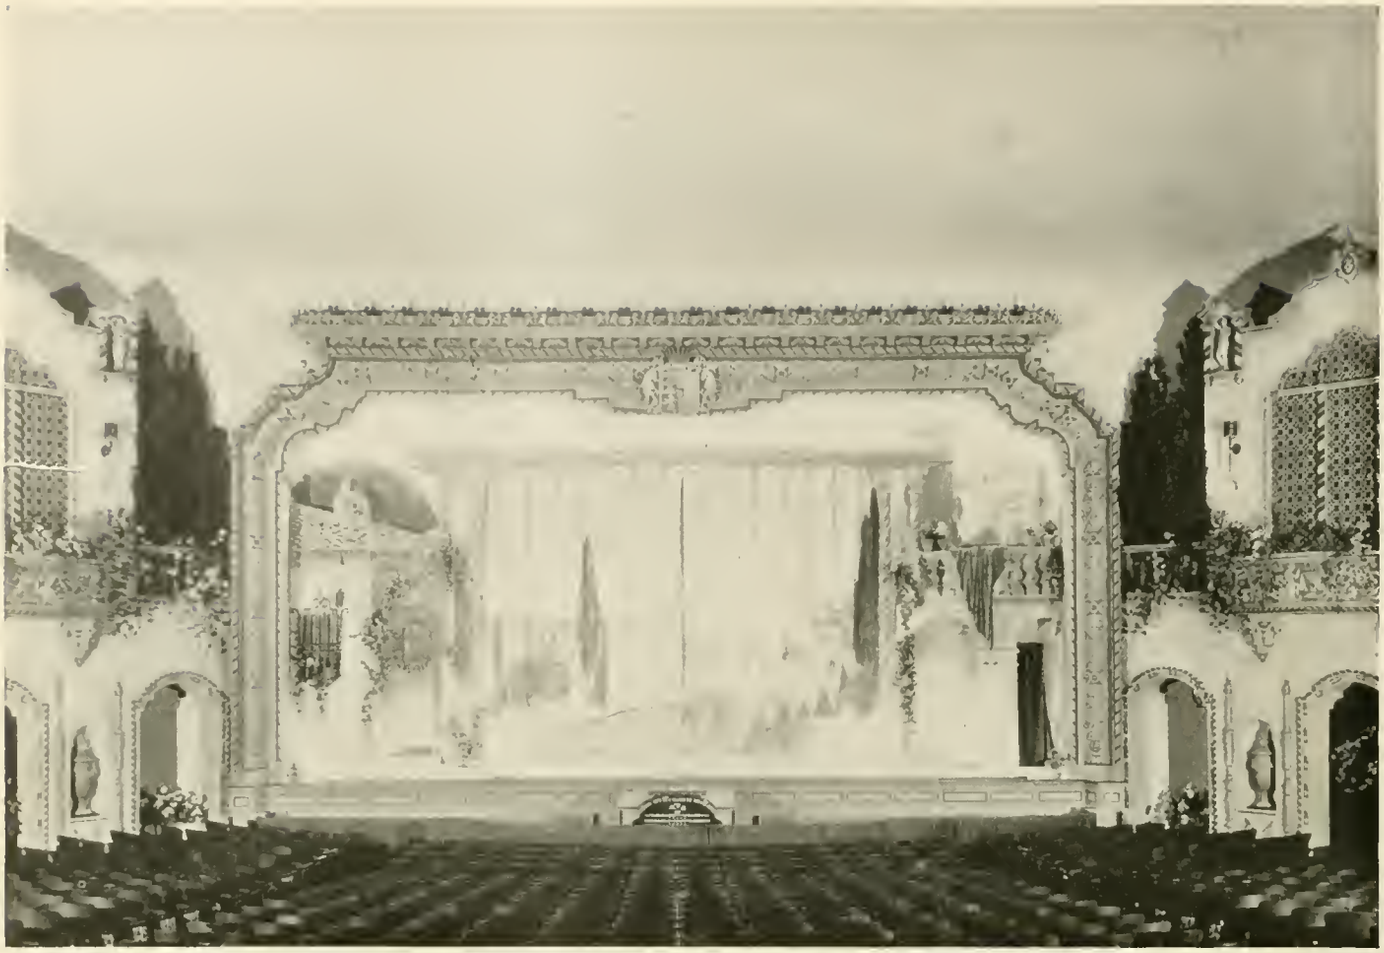
Exterior view of Riviera Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.

WESTERN NEW YORK'S FIRST ATMOSPHERIC THEATRE

The Riviera in Syracuse Seats 1,500 and Was Built at Cost of $350,000

TO the Riviera theatre located on South Salina St. and W. Pleasant Ave., in Syracuse, belongs the distinction of having introduced with notable success the atmospheric type of playhouse to the western section of New York State. The theatre is owned by Harry Gilbert, of Syracuse, has a seating capacity of 1,500 persons and provides in its architectural representation of the Spanish Renaissance motif a striking example of the colorful and theatrical style of auditorium which is meeting with such popular enthusiasm in the present development of motion picture playhouses. It is single floor construction, no balcony or mezzanine being included.

The Riviera was designed by M. J. De Angelis, Architect, of Rochester, N. Y. The interior decorations are by the Lusk Studio, also of Rochester.



It was opened to the public last November. The decorative scheme throughout auditorium, lobbies and even the exterior is consistent with the Spanish motifs on which the design is based. The auditorium ceiling is in a deep cerulean blue shaded to a deeper tone behind the battlements. It is further enriched by the use of electric lighting effects to represent a starlight sky.

The auditorium represents an outdoor garden. The sky effect being very realistic, due to the indirect cove lighting system behind the battlements. A four circuit lighting system is used.

The side walls, silhouetted against the blue sky background, give the effect of a rich old Spanish exterior. The walls have been covered with a rough texture plaster modelled by the palm of the hand, then further colored with various tones in the rough plaster and then glazed down and highlighted to lend the effect of a very old Spanish stone wall.

There are three delightfully executed mural panels on either side of the auditorium, depicting scenes of carnival and revelry, done by Harold S. Bishop, of Rochester, N. Y.

The main lobby ceiling has been covered with silver leaf and glazed with a soft sunset red and blue in iridescent effect.

Auditorium, Midland theatre, Newark, Ohio

THE MIDLAND, NEW THOUSAND-SEATER IN CENTRAL OHIO

THE Midland theatre in Newark, Ohio, is one of the most recently completed small type deluxe theatres to be opened to the public. This handsome playhouse, housed in a building which also contains store rooms flanking the main entrance, with offices on the second floor, is owned and operated by Midland Theatres Co., of Newark.

The Midland is of Spanish design. The exterior is built of buff brick and roofing of variegated Spanish tile.

Upon entering the theatre, one is immediately impressed with the conservative beauty that is carried throughout in Spanish architectural splendor—it is faithful in detail, but unmarred by extreme extravaganza of decorative material, foreign to the original. One soon passes directly into the foyer or lobby, its side walls colonnaded with pilasters of antique marble, rising nearly two-thirds the height of the walls. The upper side walls are in the bas-relief, painted in old ivory; while the ceiling is of the atmospheric design. At the right is the grand staircase leading to the balcony foyer. Rest rooms are located on the right and left of the foyer. The foyer on the main floor runs the width of the theatre. At either end of the foyer are the men's and women's rest rooms and smoking lounges, comfortably furnished.

Right, exterior view of the Midland, Newark, Ohio

The auditorium conveys an impression of richness and spaciousness.

The stage is one of the most interesting features of the theatre. There are three tiers of dressing rooms back stage, each completely equipped and furnished. The rooms are provided with private phone system and amplifiers from the stage so that the actors may keep in touch with the progress of the show. The rooms are equipped with the all-modern conveniences and special illumination for makeup is at hand. The stage proper is modernly equipped in every detail and is so arranged as to accommodate the largest road show.

Stage curtain and draperies are hung with marked originality. The scenery and drop-curtain are controlled by automatic power controls.

The heating, ventilating and cooling systems are of modern type, designed to change the air in the auditorium once every minute throughout the year, under heating or cooling conditions.

There are 1,603 seats in the theatre, richly upholstered in red plush with leather seats. They are of the overstuffed type.

An innovation and unique feature of the Midland is a cry room, glass encased and sound-proof, located on the right of the lower foyer.

THE motion picture theatre of a capacity of one thousand seats or less located in smaller towns and neighborhood districts of cities affords to patrons of the films and allied presentations those comforts and luxuries of surroundings to which the public has become accustomed through visits to the magnificent palaces in downtown sections of the metropolises. The photographs reproduced on the following pages suffice to illustrate the point that no longer is the "little house" related to the now extinct "store show" either in its appearance, construction or equipment.

Particular interest will focus in these smaller type houses from the standpoint of the architect, decorator and equipment specialist during the near future, for every indication points to a greatly increased building activity along the lines of the moderate sized picture theatre this coming year. This is natural in view of the need for replacements as well as the constant growth of community centers both outside and within the confines of the larger cities and towns.

The necessity for plans and construction affording the greatest economy commensurate with the utilitarian purposes of the theatre, which includes architectural and decorative effects in harmony with the luxurious note the picture theatre affords its patrons, is revealed in the reproductions in this section.

REMODELLING OLD THEATRES TO SUIT NEW CONDITIONS

Transformation of Gaiety in Utica Cited as Example of Economical Rejuvenation

by VICTOR A. RIGAUMONT, A.I.A.
THEATRE ARCHITECT

MODERN-DAY audiences demand—and they are entitled to—modern-day theatre accommodations.

The constant building of new amusement edifices in the large cities supplies the public with up-to-date, comfortable accommodations for enjoying today's talking pictures and other entertainment.

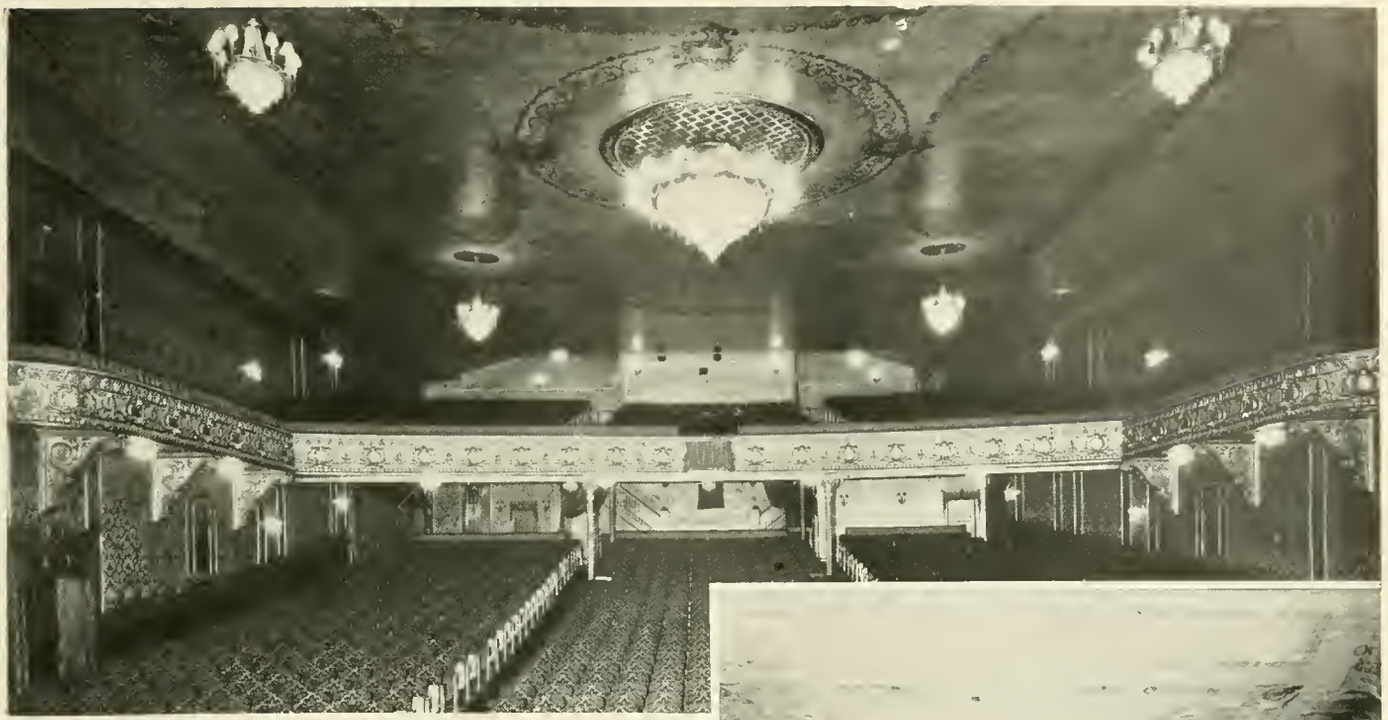
However, in many of the average-size communities the theatres have not been improved apace with the entertainment. As long as these houses were not faced with the competition of more modern and more comfortable structures, many managements gave little thought to modernizing their theatres. Others have seen the wisdom of looking after the patrons' comfort and engaged architects to draw up plans for remodelling.

Now that chain theatre circuits have tied-up the larger cities they are looking to the smaller towns for expanding their holdings. What is an exhibitor who owns an old-fashioned house going to do to meet the competition of a modern theatre erected by a circuit? Remodel, of course! It is a case of spruce up or close up.

There are no end of other reasons why the older houses in the small towns—in fact, anywhere—should be modernized. They lack the all-important element of safety that can be provided easily through more exits, proper aisles, adequate ventilation, etc. The need of safety is axiomatic. The very drabness of a neglected theatre dispels the necessary glamour and brightness suggestive of amusement happiness. The competition of new, modern theatres will educate theatre-goers to the comforts of modern accommodations and luxuries. And you can be right sure that curiosity will take practically all the potential patrons in town at least once to the new theatre. When theatre patrons go next week to the old opera house, the contrast with the most apparent and loss of business should be a natural result.

Talking pictures, demanded by the public, can not be put on with antiquated facilities. The booth may need enlarging, the auditorium may need to be treated with acoustical materials to overcome reverberation of sound, etc.

What these older theatres need to help them meet new competition is economical remodelling. And let me emphasize economical! For that is the only practical way to meet the situation and keep the overhead within profitable reason.



As an example of what may be done in the way of economical remodelling, a well-built but slightly old-fashioned theatre, let me cite Schine's Gaiety theatre in Utica, New York, to which I recently applied the principles set forth in this article.

Within a month with a limited amount of rebuilding, reseating and complete interior decoration, a transformation was effected. I think that the before and after photographs accompanying the article tell their own convincing and practical story.

The theatre building itself was well constructed originally and therefore the exterior needed no changes. It was the interior that needed modernizing and remodelling to conform to present-day standards of safety—and good business.

Structural changes were few. It was a case of remodelling and redecorating.

Before And After Remodelling

(C)—Before—inset shows auditorium looking from stage, with boxes and plainness of ceiling and wall decorations very evident.

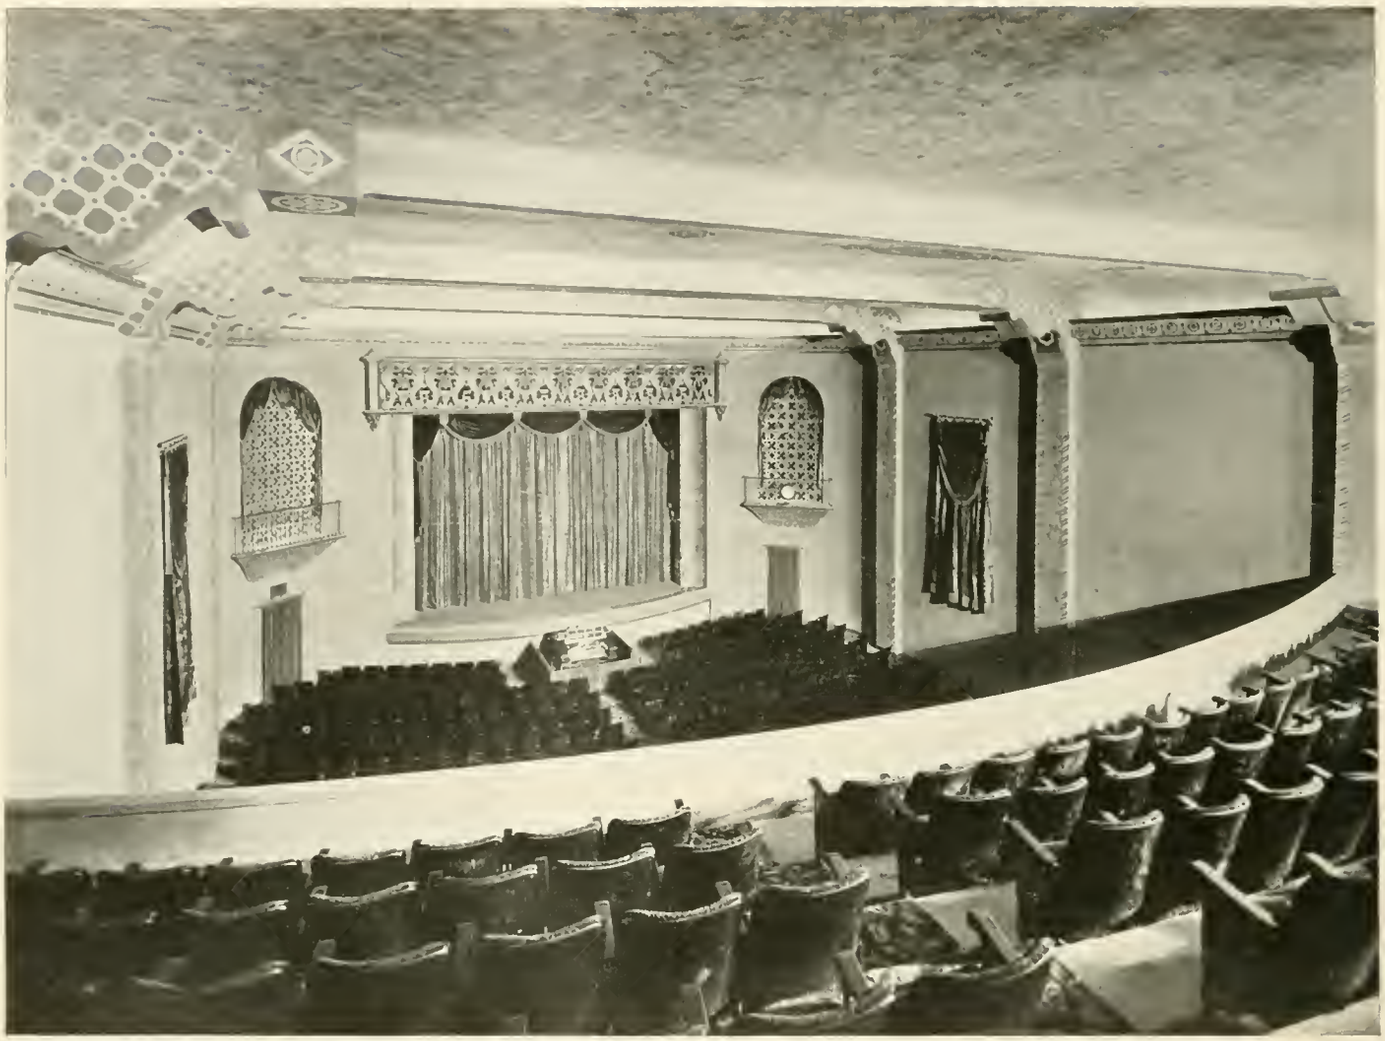
The stage was rebuilt as a "Class A," according to today's building codes and specifications, with modern ventilators, electrical equipment, etc. The Gaiety presents vaudeville as well as sound and silent pictures, so the stage was fully equipped to meet these demands. The proscenium was improved and new curtains installed. (Compare photographs A and B.)

By eliminating the antiquated boxes shown in photographs A and C and hanging effective drapes in the space formerly occupied by the upstairs boxes and placing more seats downstairs, the transformation shown in photograph B was effected.

All the seats on the main floor and balcony were ripped out and replaced with luxurious opera chairs.

The entire interior was redecorated with economical use being made of all panels and other designs. The panel stenciling duplicated the design of the opera chair and drape brocades. The transformation is clearly shown in all the photographs and is noticeable particularly in the foyer at the rear of the auditorium shown in photographs E and F. The cold atmosphere very evident in picture E was warmed by hanging drapes on the rail back of the last row of seats and hanging other drapes.



New lighting fixtures played an important part in the remodelling scheme.

Professional etiquette does not permit me to present cost figures on the remodelling of this nature.

Before—E—Left—Foyer at rear of auditroium, so plain it has a feeling of bareness and coldness. After—F—Right—Redecoration, draped and better lighted. A comfortable and inviting effect all accomplished by economical remodelling.

STAGE LIGHTING

IN THE ROXY THEATRE

THE Roxy Theatre, to a showman, is synonymous with successful theatre management.

Mr. S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) personally manages the operation of the theatre. Many articles from his pen addressed to theatre operators, stress the importance of comfortable seating, proper projection, courteous employees and, particularly, adequate, complete, and accurately controlled lighting.

Roxy is assured of the kind of lighting he wants and needs in his own theatre. A carefully planned installation of Ward Leonard Vitrohm (vitreous enamelled) Resistance and Reactance Dimmers makes this certain.

More than 750,000 lamp watts are controlled by the dimmer system. This is a very large installation; not many of them are made each year. However, last year Ward Leonard delivered hundreds of Vitrohm Dimmers for installation in the smaller type of theatre. The smallest installation was given as much care as the largest. The theatres in which they were installed found Vitrohm Dimmers low in initial cost, economical and simple in maintenance and a splendid investment in making their houses more attractive to the public.

Write today for Bulletin 75 which points the way to more profits for the theatre owner through the installation of Ward Leonard Vitrohm Dimmers. It will be sent without charge or obligation.

JAVANESE ancestor worship developed a new form of theatrical performance. Puppets, used to evoke the spirits of departed kinsmen, were manipulated to simulate action and their shadows cast by a lamp upon a screen. Originally a sacred rite, the shows became profane. This early form of "motion pictures" is traced to the 7th century.

THE TEN POINTS of Vitrohm Dimmer Superiority

1 Vitreous enamel insulation.
2 110-step control; all steps equally effective in even, flickerless light reduction.
3 Greater lamp load capacity for space occupied.
4 Unit space engineering; each plate in the dimmer bank is replaceable immediately by one of a different capacity to compensate for lamp load change.
5 Continuous duty operation at full rated load on any step without excessive heating.
6 Dimmer units enable banking to any desired capacity.
7 All moving parts, including contact buttons, ground or machined, thus insuring smooth and easy action.
8 Resistive elements of plates permanently and completely protected from disintegration.
9 Cost of systems employing Vitrohm Dimmers the same or less than that of other equivalent lamp load systems.
10 37 years of experience and knowing "how."

Ward Leonard Vitrohm Theatre Dimmers are most frequently specified for installations where the lighting control must be dependable and accurate.

Listed here are 10 reasons for Ward Leonard supremacy. Only with Vitrohm Dimmers do you get all of these essential features. Send your dimmer specifications to us for estimate. 37 years of experience is fully at your disposal.

MANUFACTURED WEATHER and the NATION'S BUSINESS

MANUFACTURED WEATHER is now playing an important part in the Nation's business at Washington. In the Chamber of the House of Representatives and contingent rooms, a Carrier System for Air Conditioning is creating and maintaining automatically, every day in the year, the combination of temperature, humidity, air purity and air movement which provides conditions of maximum comfort for Representatives—spectators—the press. A similar Carrier System is soon to be installed to condition the air within the Senate Chamber and adjoining rooms.

It is significant that the Carrier System has been chosen to condition these halls of the Nation's Capitol, a system which has won universal recognition by a rapidly increasing number of fine theatres, not only by the owners themselves but by the patrons whose choice of a theatre is influenced largely by the comfort conditions to be found therein.

Manufactured Weather, as produced only through Carrier Systems for Air Conditioning, is being extended rapidly to include not only theatres, but hotels, restaurants, hospitals, offices and public and industrial buildings where the health and comfort of the occupants assumes a place of first importance. Bulletin TS-11 has been prepared to give those interested a general knowledge of Manufactured Weather and its applications. We shall be pleased to send a copy of this Bulletin on request.

Major Vaudeville Tries Radio and Finds New Theatre Patrons

by Mark A. Luescher

Chief Publicist, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Theatres

Hiram S. Brown, president R-K-O Theatres, making inaugural address launching the weekly radio broadcasts.

NO single experiment or progressive departure from old-time methods in major vaudeville has attracted more attention or produced such immediate popular reaction as the weekly nation-wide broadcasting over the network of the National Broadcasting Company of outstanding features of the principal programs in every zone of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit.

Results? At this early period in the newly developed idea of broadcasting vaudeville acts and artists to a widespread public that is already interested in and devoted to the home radio set, it is difficult to chart or estimated "results" as that word is understood in a commercial and practical sense.

But it can be said that this broadcasting radio idea has done more, within a short time, to publicize and cultivate the broad field of major vaudeville than any other plan or policy within the history of show business. The Radio-Keith-Orpheum hour on the radio began five weeks ago. The immediate effect was disclosed palpably in the flood of letters, local and general, through which the armies of radio fans showed new interest in the people, the personalities and the appearances of vaudeville artists whom they had "heard" probably for the first time, over their radio at home.

For this season vaudeville had already experienced a healthy and even increased general patronage before the broadcasting idea went into action. Since then a new element of amusement seekers has come to the front. There is a marked revival of interest in vaudeville from sections and localities that have not heretofore been specially known as vaudeville enthusiasts. It is apparently a case of: "Seeing is believing."

As President Hiram S. Brown said in his salutation, the first radio program, Radio-Keith-Orpheum is frankly and honestly engaged in "selling" to all the people the best kind of entertainment at the lowest possible price and for the most progressive and youthful demands of the public.

Whether the new broadcasting policy of the major vaudeville organization is responsible wholly or only partly contributory, the fact is that Radio-Keith-Orpheum, both in this country and Canada, is enjoying a new and vigorous vogue of steady patronage. Probably alone of all the various branches of theatrical amusement, major vaudeville with its new and powerful affiliations within the Radio-Keith-Orpheum organization is in the happiest and most confident frame of mind. As the New York Evening Sun recently said:

"A great deal is heard about theatrical conditions this season. Nearly everyone seems to be complaining. But there is one branch of the theatre that does not share this gloom, but goes steadily forward gaining ground daily and radiating happiness generally — and that is vaudeville."

"Radiating happiness" is a happy phrase as here applied to the universal consequence of coast to coast broadcasting the choicest programs of vaudeville. The box-office aggregates of the current season all over Radio-Keith-Orpheum are better than at any time since the big war. Finer feature motion pictures, talking films, and a better selected and more carefully presented stage program are all contributory to the encouraging and sustained results of this new era of vaudeville. But the broadcasting system which is making Tuesday

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

New Voltage Regulator Controls Voltage Surges and Variations in Line Supply

A FUNDAMENTAL problem in the control automatically of line voltage surges and variations has been solved, according to an announcement last week by Dawson J. Burns of the Ward Leonard Electric Co., Mount Vernon, N. Y., concerning the development by that company of an accurate control output voltages by a new design AC voltage regulator. The device developed by Ward Leonard after nearly three years of laboratory work is an instantaneously acting magnetic device, without moving parts, making unnecessary the present types of power transformers. In commercial form it is not appreciably larger than the usual power supply transformer.

The most immediate and useful interest of this new voltage regulator to the motion picture industry is that the device will find wide application in synchronized film and sound projectors operated from line supply as to driving power and amplifier tubes. It also fills a long-felt want for a device for the film printing laboratory to keep the film printing lamp filament at a constant temperature. Unequal lighting during printing has been a great problem.

Constant automatic voltage regulation is required in the motion picture industry for the following applications:

1. The Regulator is of importance in the printing and developing of films as it keeps the voltage across the printing lamp filament absolutely constant.

2. By the use of the Regulator, it is possible for the projection machine motors to run at constant speed regardless of line voltage fluctuations.

3. In talking picture machines, the voltages on tube filaments, plates and grids must be constant for uniform quality. This is particularly true where switch-over amplifier systems are used. In these systems, throwing the second amplifier across the line often results in a click or series of clicks due to suddenly increased load on the line. Both of these difficulties are done away with through the Regulator.

4. The Regulator will make safe the use of high current projection lamps on A. C. circuits. In this particular case, the Regulator does away with the necessity for a starting rheostat, or ballast, and of course no running ballast is required.

The Ward Leonard A. C. Voltage Regulator, like the conventional transformer consists of primary and secondary windings and a special core shape employed to produce regulation. Unlike transformers, the placement of windings in respect to the others and the cross-section of the core have very marked effects upon the design of the Regulator.

Primary and secondary windings are employed to give any desired transformation.

The Regulator may be designed for any K. V. A. output desired. The power factor of the Regulator, taken at normal line voltage, varies with the range and degree of regulation required.

Properly designed and constructed, the Regulator has an efficiency comparable with a transformer designed for equivalent duty. Regulator efficiency depends upon low copper and iron losses.

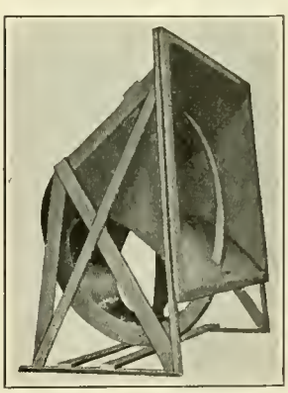
Oscillograph tests show a secondary wave form distortion of approximately 5 to 10 per cent, depending on ranges of regulation.

The connections of the windings are different from those of a transformer. Core construction and winding placement are different from those of transformers. Both core construction and windings are subject to considerable variation to meet the requirements of various classes of control.

Current Regulator Feature of New Synchronous Unit

ONE of the newest motion picture sound projection devices on the market is the Qualitone—manufactured and distributed by Qualitone Corporation, Los Angeles. Presently Qualitone is turning out machines accomodating the disc system exclusively but according to an announcement the company is preparing to start distribution of its sound-on-film projection attachment in the immediate future.

A distinctive feature of Qualitone equipment is the starting torque which is neuteralized by a special drive designed to eliminate the possibility of stripped gears or other damage to the projection machine. Another feature is a specially devised motor generator which furnishes the current to the reproducer system, eliminating the necessity of batteries and regulating the source of power.



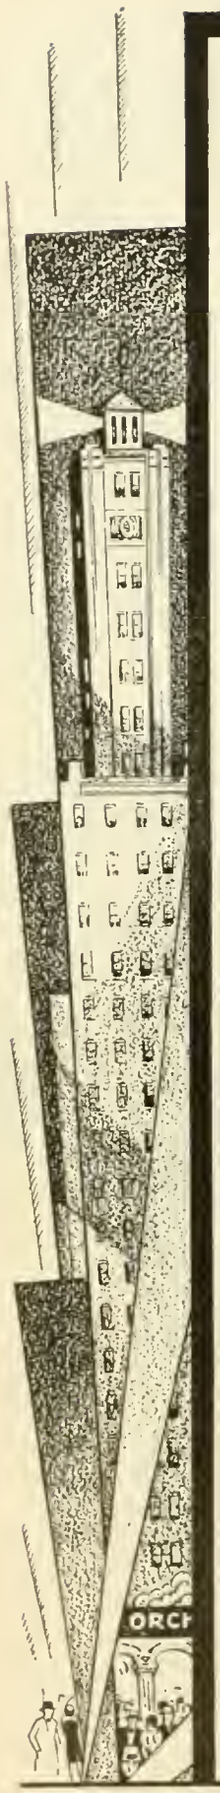
Of interest to exhibitors is the statement of Samuel Freedman, president of Qualitone Corporation, that the device can be installed in a theatre without the loss of a single show, and the fact that the device is so equipped that by a simple adjustment it can be made to operate on any power supply.

Associated with Samuel Freedman in the manufacture of Qualitone are two nationally known radio and electrical engineers, Fred H. Harrington and E. K. Harris, both of whom have devoted years to sound projection research and experimental work. The former is a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers and is the inventor of the sound projector device employed by the Qualitone system. Harris is responsible for the recording equipment which will be used by the company.

It is priced at $2,500 for theatres of a seating capacity of 2000 or less.

Special Design for Theatre Horn and Speaker Unit

THE accompanying illustration shows the Racon exponential horn and giant dynamic horn unit, manufactured by the Racon Electric Company and in use in connection with several synchronous and non-synchronous reproducing and amplifying systems.



The horn has a bell 40 x 40 inches and a depth of 34½ ins. It is 10 feet measured along the center line, and has a cut-off of 75 cycles on the lower end and up to 8,000 on the upper. It is so constructed that it will project forward and distribute in all directions. When used in conjunction with a dynamic horn unit one horn will fill a theatre equally, having a seating capacity up to about 1200 seats.

The horns are constructed of fabric impregnated and hardened under a patented process, and give a horn that is light in weight, non-resonant, non-absorbent and will stand a great deal of abuse without damage.

The unit is an electro dynamic moving coil type and can be used only with long air column horns. It will handle the output of a 15 watt amplifier without rattling, and has a consumption of only 1.1 amps. from a six volt battery. It is sturdily constructed.

New type Amplion microphone

Current Regulator Feature of "Selective" Microphone

CONDITIONS surrounding the use of microphones both in the picture stduios and the theatres have emphasized the need for microphone "selectivity." Harry Beaumont, director of "Broadway Melody," during an interview in New York recently, mentioned that the sound picture producer would be greatly aided were engineers to develop a microphone that could be tuned to certain desired sounds, like a radio receiver is tuned to a selected broadcasting station's wave. "Singing organists," now becoming increasingly popular in the picture theatres also have need for a "selective mike," for extraneous sounds must be excluded to produce the best effects.

The Amplion Company has announced a new type microphone embodying a "selective" feature. This consists of a current control, or regulator, which produces different response levels as the current is reduced or increased. The current may be reduced to as low as 5 milliamperes, at which point the operator must speak directly into the microphone for a response.

Cueing Facilitated by New Service and Record Index

THE production of sound and musical effects harmonized with the action of motion pictures by means of non-synchronous reproducers has been facilitated for the theatre operator as the result of constant improvements by manufacturers of records and those who compile record libraries.

Among the outstanding accomplishments along this line are the new services recently announced by the Brunswick-

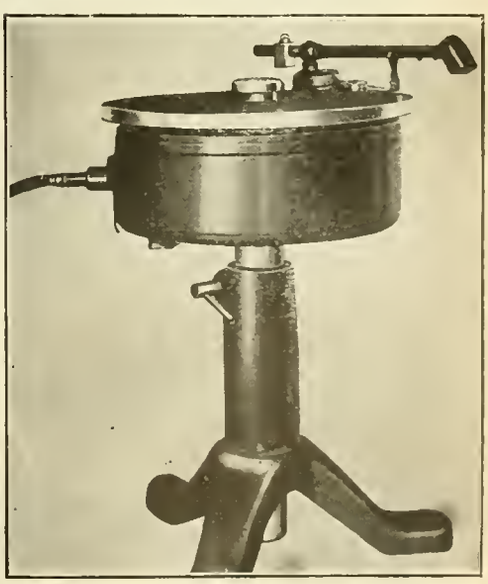
Perfecting Sound-On-Film Attachment for Synchronous Disc Reproducer

CLOSE on the heels of the announcement of the new Phototone synchronous disc reproducer for motion picture theatres comes information that within a short time the company will announce the perfection of a sound-on-film attachment that may be added to the Phototone machines already installed or included with the original installation.

It is known that the engineers of the Phototone Company have been carrying on experiments in the development of synchronous disc and sound-on-film reproduction ever since the company launched the non-synchronous disc reproducer on the market several months ago.

Progress made in the design of a sound-on-film attachment has carried on rapidly and it is expected that announcement that the added equipment to make the Phototone a dual-system reproducer will be available may be made in thirty days.

The United Cue Service, sponsored and endorsed by the Phototone Company: Cameo Music Service Corporation, makers of thematic music cue sheets; and the Gennett Record Division of the Starr Piano Company, announces an augmented service for theatre using non-synchronous equipment.



The service includes a library of special records of music and effects composed especially to fit motion picture situations. Subscribers to the United Cue Service are supplied special cue sheets for motion pictures, the cue sheets utilizing the special recordings of the service to produce individually scored accompaniments. It is claimed by the company that the use of the special sound effect records—providing a variety of effects such as shots, bells, airplane motors, shricks, moving trains, etc.—in connection with the thematic scores as cued to suit the current film offerings, enables the owner of non-synchronous equipment to have as interesting a program as that provided by some of the most expensive synchronous installations.

Market Disc Attachments for Sound-On-Film Units

POWERS CINEPHONE has brought to the market two important new features within the past week, these being the perfected equipment to make the reproduction unit a dual system machine by the addition of a turntable which synchronizes disc recorded sound with pictures, and the new Powers Cinephone Recording Camera for recording sound on film. The first of the new cameras to be installed on the West Coast was shipped this week to Walt Disney who will use this device for recording sound with his "Mickey Mouse" cartoons—which previously have been recorded by the Powers company at the New York studio of the concern.

The disc attachment which is being added to Cinephone installations now in theatres is offered as an optional added feature with new equipment. The disc attachment enables theatres to present both sound-on-film and the disc recorded films. The turntable also may be used in connection with reproduced scores of the non-synchronous type. As shown in the illustration, the turntable is mounted on a separate pedestal. It is set up directly under the lamphouse on projectors or in any convenient space in the projection booth. A special gearing device synchronizes the turntable with the projector.

Panel showing Type "F" Remote Control Switches in circuits.

Type "F"

"Diamond H" means dependable control

Theatres, of necessity, have many lighting circuits and it is highly desirable that these circuits be controlled simply and instantaneously.

It is also highly important that such control be dependable.

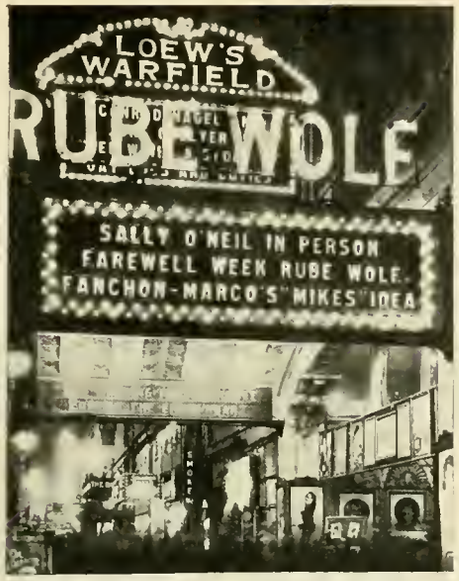
In the Park Plaza Theatre, all the stage and house lights are controlled by means of "Diamond H" Remote Control Switches.

Those responsible for the lighting plans for this Theatre, knew that "Diamond H" Switches were reliable and absolutely dependable, and so selected them for use here.

The use of "Diamond H" Switches is actually an economy because it saves wiring costs. The main conductors do not have to be carried to switching points.

"Diamond H" Remote Control Switches should be used to control exit, aisle, corridor and stairway lights in theatres.

Many theatres use them for all outside lighting, signs, marquees, etc. They are indispensable where emergency circuits are used.



If you are building a theatre or planing alterations to an old one, don't fail to study the many uses to which these Remote Control Switches can be put with benefit to you.

Our engineers are ready to help with any problem.

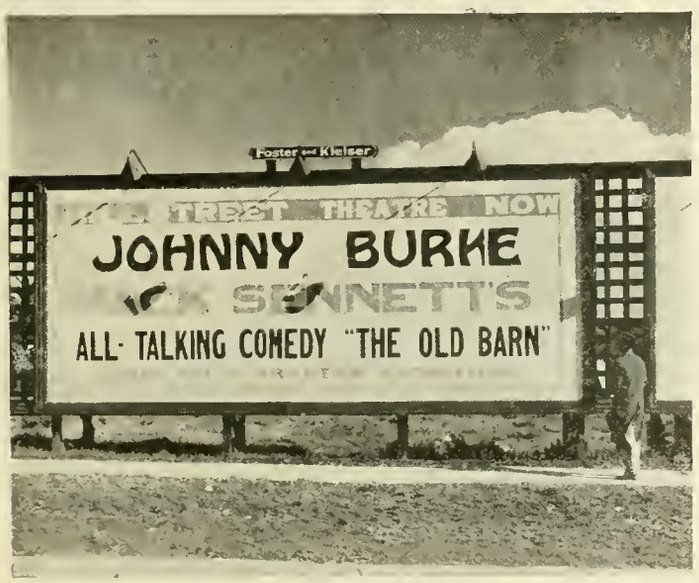
DIAMOND H SWITCHES



The night display at the Royal Theatre, Kansas City, pictured above, shows the prominence given the two-reel comedy "The Bride's Relations" in the marquee billing of ai house

"The Lion's Roar" found its way to featured prominence in the marquee billing at the Strand Theatre, Cincinnati, when the Educational Comedy played an engagement at that house recently

The "All Talking" feature of Educational's short subject, "The Lion's Roar" assured it a prominent place in the electricts out front when the Sennett comedy played Loew's Warfield, San Francisco

A full 24-sheet devoted to a two reel comedy! No longer the innovation it was in the days before the short subjects found their voices. The photo above shows one of the big stands which the Hill Street Theatre in Los Angeles used

"Sound" Makes the Short Subject a Headliner

FOR years the short subject, particularly the short comedy, has been struggling for its proper place in the sun of theatre exploitation, and while responsible for the success of many a popular program at the picture houses it nevertheless has failed to figure in the exploitation efforts of the advertiser.

For a two-reel comedy to occupy the entire space of a 24-sheet is an unusual occurrance—or rather was an unusual occurrence. Now the theatre men are putting their short subjects on the posters, in the newspaper ads and the marquee lights, for the talking comedy has created a stir among the theatregoers and the exhibitors have been quick to realize the opportunity for increasing attendance by stressing them in exploitation matter. On this page we reproduce some photographic evidence of the exploitation which first-run theatres have accorded talking short subjects.

An entire twenty-four sheet was devoted to advertising "The Old Barn" when this Mack Sennett comedy released by Educational played the Hillstreet Theatre in Los Angeles. "The Bride's Relations," another Sennett comedy was advertised in the marquee lights of the Royal Theatre in Kansas City.

"The Lion's Roar" was advertised by Loew State Theatre in Los Angeles, both in the twenty-four sheet displays and in the newspapers. When this same comedy played simultaneously at three Balaban and Katz houses in Chicago, the Uptown, Tivoli and Paradise, the advertising was nearly as much as that on all other attractions combined.

The Uptown Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, a first-run house, placed its display on "The Lion's Roar" above that of the feature picture in newspaper advertisements. The same was true of this picture when it played the Grand Theatre in Topeka, Kansas.

John Eberson Says

Re-equip to Increase Patronage

IN the 1929 Film Daily Year Book, John Eberson advises exhibitors to reconstruct and re-equip houses to increase box office receipts. This practical advice, coming from such a capable and outstanding architect, applies to reseating as well as reconstruction.

Hundreds of exhibitors all over the country have selected Heywood-Wakefield theatre chairs for reseating because of their scientific construction, their beauty, and their unusual comfort. Pantages, Balaban & Katz, Publix and a host of others have used Heywood-Wakefield theatre chairs in reseating during 1928.

We can help you bring your house up-to-date in 1929 with a modern, comfortable theatre seat, designed from a box office angle. Just drop a line to the nearest Heywood-Wakefield sales office and ask for detailed information on the advantages of reseating.

LIGHT
URES THE CROWD

Always a Box Office Attraction

LIGHT . . . the symbol of gaiety . . . of happy hearts, reaches down the street to lure the crowds.

Eyes, from the distance feel the spell . . . search the sign to see what entertainment they may find . . . who the star might be . . . what the feature picture is.

Responding, they follow the path of light and are welcomed by the friendly atmosphere of your theater.

Light plays an important role in the success of your theater. To neglect this important box-office attraction by using inferior quality lamps is as bad as showing mediocre pictures and expecting a full house.

Good lighting is dependent upon good lamps. When you use Edison MAZDA* Lamps you get lamps that are of a known standard of quality.

Examine your lighting. Write today for your copy of the new free bulletin "The Lighting of Theaters and Auditoriums." You will find in it many valuable ideas for the proper lighting of your particular type and size of theater. Making the Theatre Organ a Box Office Magnet

by Paul Forster

Organist, Eckel Theatre, Syracuse

IN response to many written requests which came to me following the mention of my Organ Club in the columns of the Round Table Club in MOTION PICTURE NEWS and at the request of the editors of this publication, I will hazard the charge of playing a tune to my own praises in the endeavor to describe some of the working details of the organization which has made organ music highly popular at the Eckel theatre in Syracuse.

To begin with, I came to Syracuse four years ago to open a new organ in one of the theatres here. I had been playing the organ at the Piccadily (now Warners) theatre in New York, and with the Broadway background for the publicity accorded me, I started my career in Syracuse with considerable prestige—and a decided advantage that is to any personality in the theatre. In order to capitalize the opportunity, I introduced the song-fest in Syracuse and it succeeded instantly in catching on with the public here.

As reported in the Club columns some time ago the patrons of the Eckel know how to sing, and they heartily enjoy practicing their accomplishments in vocalization to the popular tunes and ballads. Now I believe that the most important influence in the continued interest of organ renditions and the singing at the Eckel is the "request number" idea which forms the basis of our Organ Club.

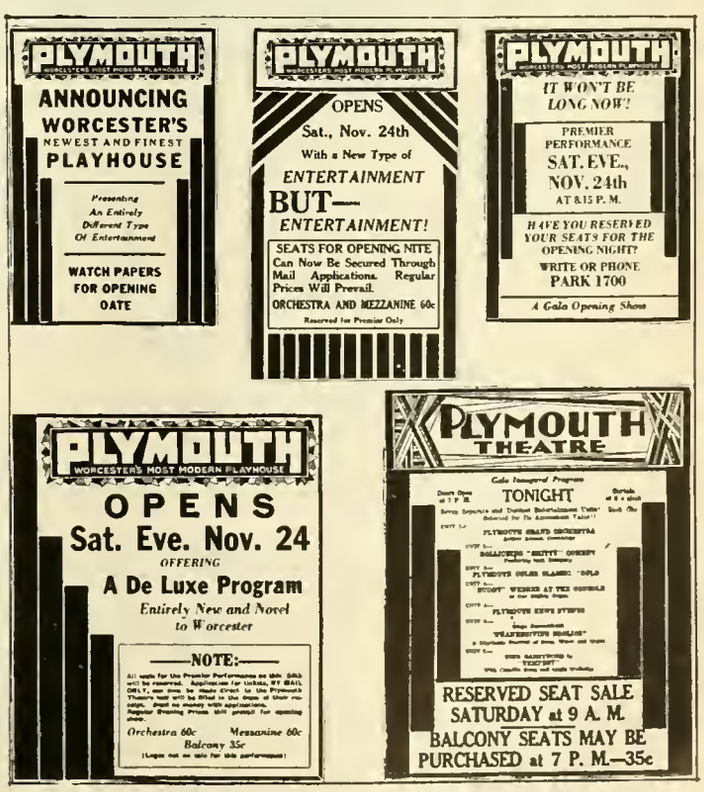
Nearly a year ago, with the able and enthusiastic co-operation of our manager, Ralph W. Thayer, I organized the Eckel Organ Club, the main purpose of which was to put a personal and entirely local interest in the organ features presented at the theatre. In order to carry out the idea with the greatest ease for the patrons, we insalled in the lobby of the theatre a "voting desk." This shows a life-size figure of myself holding a small desk on which there are cards affording space for the patron to note down the number or the song which he or she would like to have played at some future performance. There is also space for voters to inscribe their names and addresses. The cards are deposited in a box provided for that purpose.

I make it a regular duty of the day's routine to go over these requests. They are sorted out and as future programs are arranged those whose requests are to be played are sent a card, enclosed in one of the club envelopes, informing them that the number they requested will be played on the date selected for its presentation.

All this has created an enthusiasm for the organ presentations which gives this feature of our programs a constant and decided appeal. Patrons of the theatre seem to be expecting the organ numbers when they come to the theatre, certainly they wait for the number and their reaction is always favorable, as measured by the applause, the comment, and the "fan mail," as the movie stars say. It may appear that I am giving this little boy a great big hand to say so, but it is true that a not uncommon occurrance at the Eckel is to have the organ number stop the show.

Now to touch on a "personality" phase of this job. I have always tried to make friends and continue always the effort to cultivate the friendly attitude toward everybody. In the first place I enjoy doing that and in the second I think it highly important for anybody who makes public appearances in the theatre or anywhere else to be friendly in disposition, expression and nature.

I am a member of several clubs and organizations both local and national, which, of course, local lodges. This helps to make and keep friendships. And, I make it a policy never to say "no" when asked a favor and I believe in co-operation to the utmost. More importantly, I flatter myself that I know how to smile.

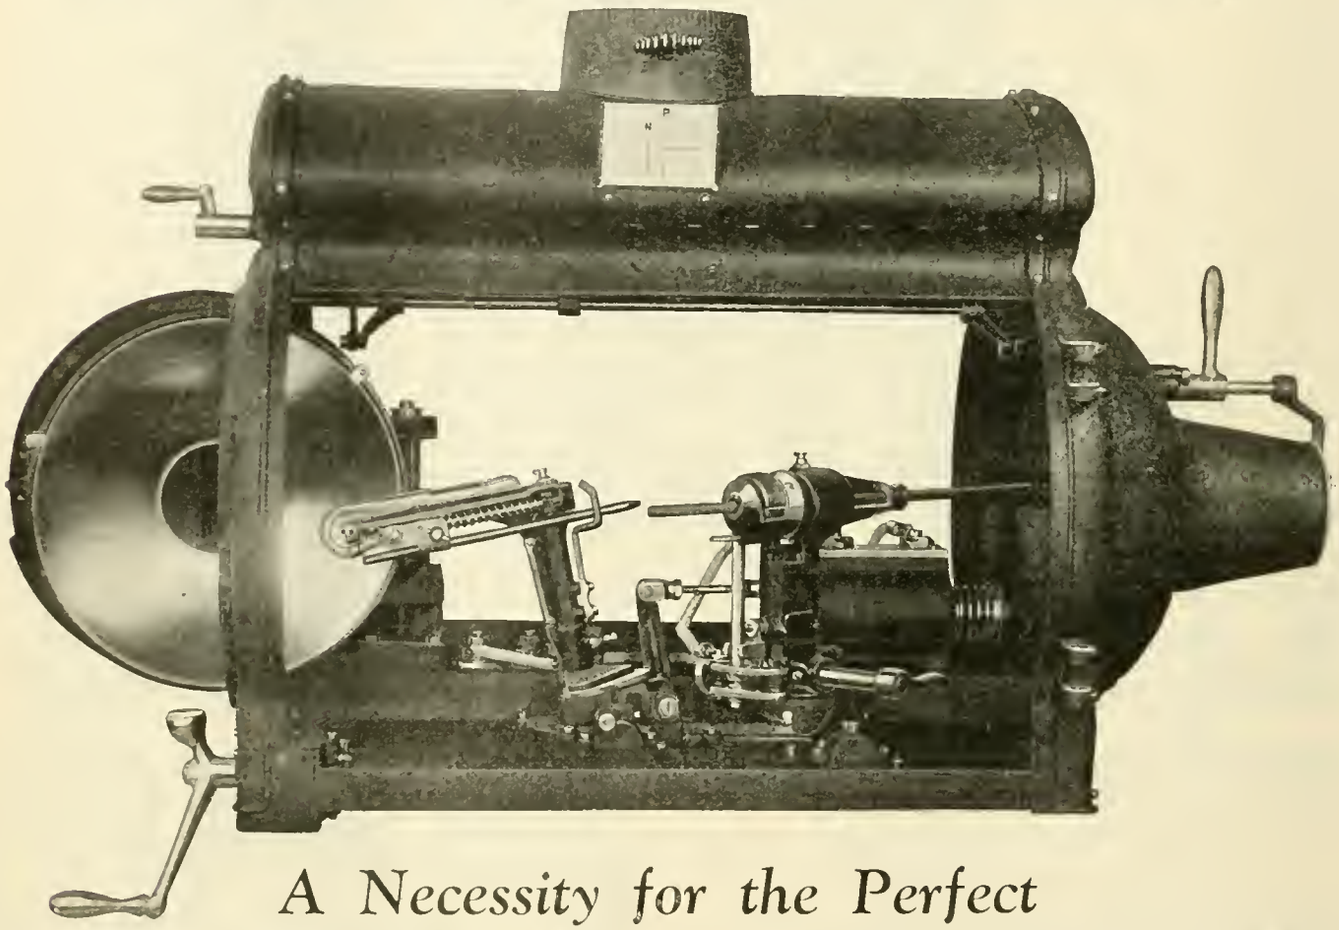


Type-Rule Layout in the Modernistic Style

THE accompanying reproductions of newspaper displays exploiting the opening of the Plymouth theatre in Worcester, Mass., should have especial interest to showmen and theatre advertising men whose appropriations do not include funds for art work. The displays shown were made in the composing room of the local newspaper, type, ad alley rules and a theatre name slug sufficing to achieve compositions which have good display value and conform to modernistic ideas of design.

The layouts are the work of Charles E. Lewis, known to readers of the NEWS as Chairman of the Managers' Round Table Club. In handling his campaign for the opening of the Plymouth Mr. Lewis had to work out the problem of selling a new theatre without spending a large amount of money for newspaper advertising. The local theatrical rate is rather high, so three-column by seven of eight inches was set as the maximum for one insertion.

As may be seen in the reproductions, this size can be employed to great attraction advantage by means of unusual layout. This particular campaign elicited much comment from local advertisers in Worcester and several members of the Boston Advertising Club.



It is recommended to exhibitors who wish to arrive at some change in the appearance of their ads, and they will have the additional advantage of being able to incorporate ad mats in these layouts, which Mr. Lewis was unable to do on account of no picture being set when the opening announcement was made. The modernistic idea was also carried out in the theatre "slug."

THE BULLETIN BOARD

Notes, Reports and Ideas That Keep You Posted on the Trend of the Trade from Month to Month

THAT branch of show business which we arbitrarily classify as the "picture field" showed highly satisfactory results during the past month, box offices generally reflecting a sound condition over the country as a whole. It was far from a "spotty month" though naturally purely local and temporary conditions, such as overpowering competition, prevalence of illness and severe weather, and, of course, weak bookings, had their effects on the box offices of the particular theatres affected by these adverse factors.

In the main, however, business was good, with the sound pictures, especially the "talkies" still commanding the spotlight, and still credited with being the particular reason for the sustained migration of the neighborhood and small town dwellers to the big houses in the downtown sections, much to the despair of the operators of the smaller film theatres.

Industry's "Sound" Bill

WHAT the industry is paying for the increased business resultant from attractions which enable theatregoers to hear as well as see their favorite players was indicated in an article published during the month by MOTION PICTURE NEWS. According to the estimates set forth therein the film industry has spent in the neighborhood of $20,000,000 up to the end of last year for equipment, experimentation, theatre installations, etc., to produce and present the sound pictures. In an article based on an interview with Harry M. Warner, "The Magazine of Wall Street" quotes this head of the company that pioneered in sound as estimating that the industry would spend this year $50,000,000 for sound equipment for 5,000 theatres.

Jolson's Record

THE highlight of the month in box office performances was struck by Al Jolson during his week's engagement as leading attraction at the Warfield theatre, San Francisco. The house did a gross of $57,406 for seven days—which is a tremendous figure for a theatre the size of the Warfield. It goes for a record not only for San Francisco but for all theatres on the Pacific Coast. The Warfield mark was nearly $200 better than the record set by Jolson during personal appearances at the Metropolitan—now the Paramount—in Los Angeles. The latter house has a larger capacity by 1,000 seats.

The Too-Long Program

THERE is such a thing as too much for the money in the arrangement of film programs as well as anything else, if we may take a hint from the editor of "Backstage and Screen News" in the "Sunday Times Review" of Jacksonville, Fla. The columnist complains that the film bills at local theatres run over the usual time by as much as forty-five minutes, and points out that such extenuation of the screen and stage fare results in boredom for the fan. "On Thursday night," the writer goes on, "the Florida program lasted until 11:40 and the Palace program on the same night was equally as long. When a theatre program lasts over two hours the theatre patron becomes restless and leaves the playhouse in an unpleasant mood. This also holds good for programs of an excellent nature." We leave you to draw your own inferences as to what relation that last sentence has to the particular bills referred to at the Florida and the Palace in Jacksonville.

Show-to-Show Improvements

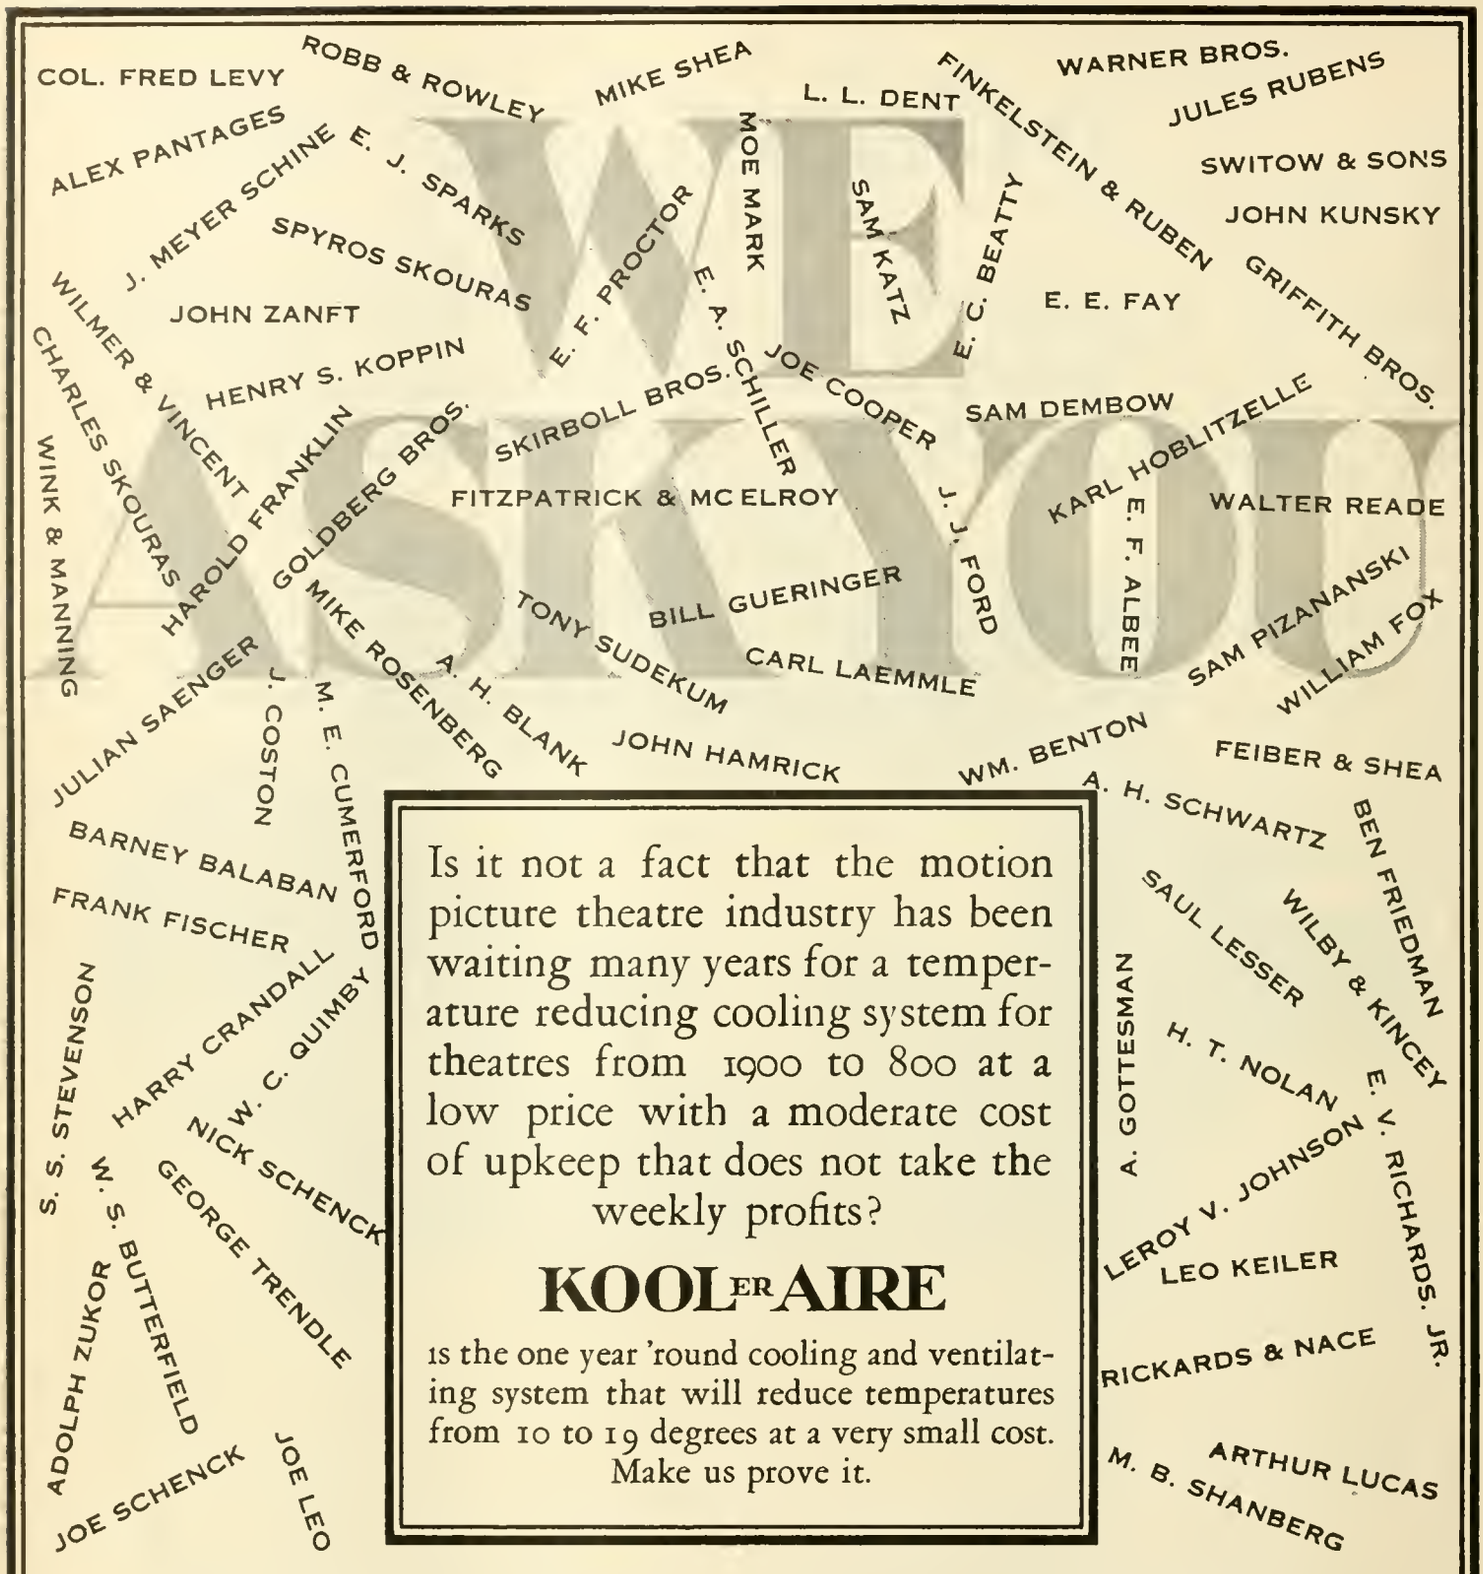
AS a reminder of a showmanship practice which is in force at the up-to-the-minute show shops of the country we quote the following item from a Detroit newspaper: "S. W. Stebbins, under whose direction the stage presentations at the Fox are planned and produced, made a change in one of his presentations as late as the third performance on Friday. Viewing the performance from an orchestra seat Stebbins noted a detail that seemed to him to be possible of improvement and calling an assistant, gave orders to alter the action, in spite of the fact that there was only one more performance of that presentation to be given."

The Sound-Silent Questionnaire

WHETHER anything in the way of usable information of value to the theatre operator is produced by a questionnaire asking the public to express their opinions of sound pictures as preferable to silent pictures, the fact remains that the questionnaire of the sort first tried in Los Angeles, later in Buffalo and later in other cities, is good for some worthwhile newspaper publicity. The results, also, are interesting to the trade. One of the latest sound-silent polls issued during the month from Syracuse where the "Syracuse Herald" queried its readers on the subject and found that the portion of the populace represented in the poll voted about 50-50 for silent and sound pictures.

The Skouras Policy

VARIOUS sections of the country are to be given opportunity to see the style of presentation developed by the Skouras Brothers in St. Louis through the assumption of the policy-making and executing role for the many theatres of the Warner Brothers by Spyros Skouras. Charles Previn, recently conductor of the orchestra at the Missouri in St. Louis, Charles Dahl and Bob Alton, stage producers at that same house, are now in Philadelphia, to institute the policy at the new Mastbaum theatre. Plans are now under way to send others who have scored at St. Louis houses to permanent or "guest" posts at other houses in the Warner chain. Among those whose talents will be on display in other cities are Stuart Barrie, organist and for several years one of the trump cards in the Skouras collection of attractions at their St. Louis theatres.



A Record for St. Louis

NEW box office records for St. Louis were set during the first week of February, when the new Fox St. Louis theatre, the largest in that city, rolled up a gross of $50,000, to give it in round numbers. That is the largest amount ever garnered in seven days by any playhouse in St. Louis. The lure of "Street Angel," which has been withheld from St. Louis until the opening of the gorgeous new Fox palace, and curiosity of the public to see this new wonder of architecture and showmanship formed a record-breaking combination.

Brecher's Plaza Passes

ANNOUNCEMENT that the Plaza Theatre at 59th St. and Madison Ave., New York City, soon would pass out of existence to make way for a tall office building, was received with regret by the large patronage which the house attracted and the New York film trade as well. This unusual neighborhood theatre achieved its distinction as the resort of a fashionable patronage drawn from the "Fifth Avenue residential district" under the personal direction of Leo Brecher, one of the country's best known exhibitors. Brecher is devoting

Movie-Phone on Simplex Projector

Synchronous Unit Attaches to All Projectors

A SYNCHRONOUS disc reproducing unit which is attached direct to any make of motion picture projector, using the regular motor drive by means of special shafts and attachments operating through gears and equalizing devices that drive the turntable in synchrony with the projecting machine, was introduced to the market some time ago by the Movie-Phone Corporation of Chicago, Ill.

The Movie-Phone outfit, as shown in the illustration on this page, comprises two units for the booth equipment, these consisting of a turntable, connected mechanically with the projector motor, and an amplifying unit on a pedestal. This allows a compact arrangement of the booth equipment. The complete device is sold outright, and costs about $1,100 installed.

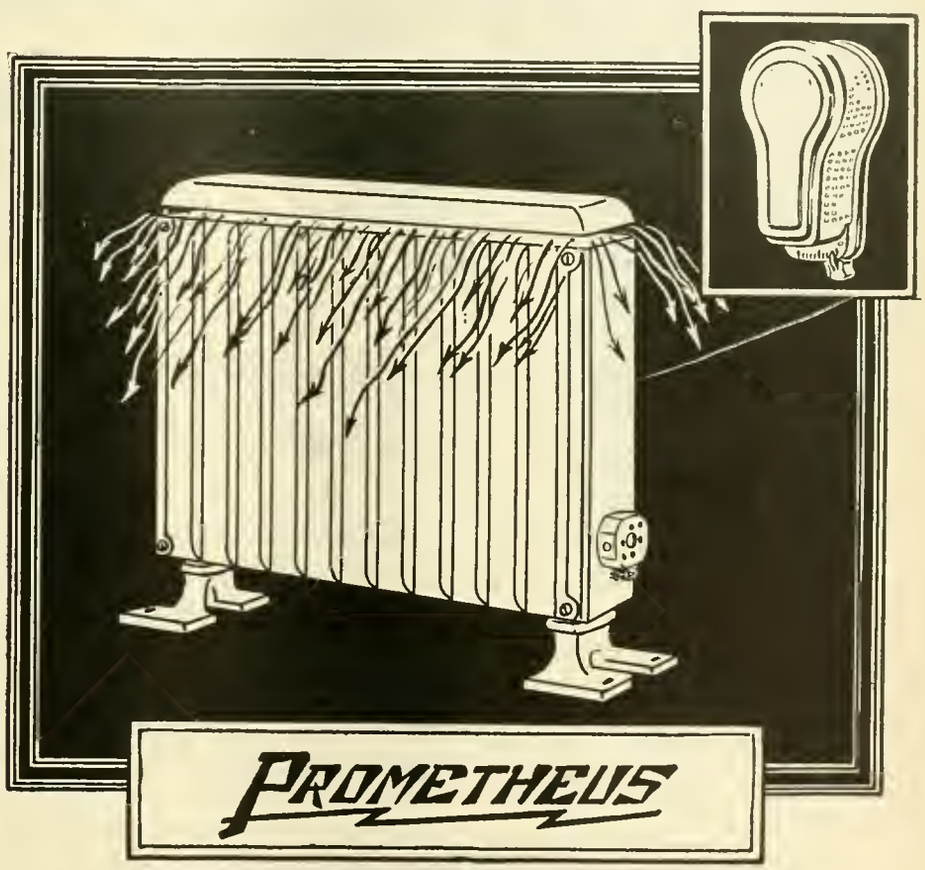
Balke-Collender Company's new Mood Accompaniment Record Library, which will include cue-sheets on all important picture releases, and the Amplion Cueing Service, comprising a library of 250 records so catalogued and cross indexed as to enable the operator to score pictures with the producers' cue sheet as a guide.



The new Brunswick-Balke-Collender service has been prepared for use with non-synchronous instruments and is being distributed through National Theatre Supply Company, also distributor of the Orchestraphone. The library consists of 500 records and includes 20 special sound effect records covering all the sounds the average picture requires. These produce sounds of railroad trains, fire engines, bells, thunder, wind, aeroplane, machine gun, and a variety of other effects. All records are double sided, the same selection appearing on both sides for the purpose of eliminating delay and possible error in cueing the picture. The records are of special construction, built with a thicker wall between the grooves than is necessary for ordinary musical recording, thus giving longer wear.

In connection with the Brunswick Mood Accompaniment Library the company has established a cue service for all pictures. No records outside the 500 making up the Brunswick library will be required for effective cueing of pictures.

The Amplion library consists of 250 records, carefully selected for their adaptability to motion picture cueing and including several which have been especially recorded for the collection. Usually 25 to 30 records are required to accompany a single film. The special feature of the Amplion library is the catalogue classification which permits the operator to make full use of the large collection of themes and effects with a minimum of effort. The producers' cue sheet is used as a guide, proper selections being made to follow the arrangement indicated in the sheet by reference to the library index.

The libraries now offered theatre men provide, in addition to a complete range of sound effects, musical renditions for all dramatic moods such as: hurries; joyfulness; love themes; mysteriosos; races; waltzes; scenic; religious; quietude; popular; dramatic, etc.

END DAMPNESS IN YOUR ORGAN!

The Prometheus Organ Heater protects the delicate mechanism of the organ by heating the lower part of the chamber in a scientific way. Unlike other devices which send heat upward, thus neglecting the equally important base, Prometheus deflects the warm air downward. The heat naturally rises throughout the organ chamber giving a constant, unvarying degree of temperature. Proper heating avoids expensive repairs and maintenance costs due to destructive cold, moisture and climatic changes. It also keeps pitch accurate.

Automatic Thermostat regulates heat to the proper degree required. Furnished in Aluminum. Occupies only 14¼ x 4 inches. Sturdy. Durable.

Expand Theatre Ad Service; Open New York Offices

DUE to rapid expansion of the Theatre Ad Mat Service, the studios and home office of the company have been moved from Cleveland to new quarters at 243 West 39th Street, New York City. The company introduced the theatre mat service about a year ago, operating from the original offices in Uniontown, Pa. Within a few months larger quarters and need for greater facilities resulted in the entire studio forces and executive offices being removed to Cleveland. Continued expansion has made it necessary for the headquarters being established in New York, where the organization will be greatly benefited by increased facilities.

According to an announcement issued by the company, the Theatre Ad Mat Service has engaged one of the foremost exploiters in the theatre field to augment the advertising and exploitation service to be rendered theatre subscribers.

The art department is to be enlarged by the addition to the staff of several new artists, and personal contact with the producing organizations will be established in order to give greater scope to the service rendered subscribers. It is planned to issue individual advertising and exploitation service on all feature pictures released on and after March 15th.

"Woman Power" Making Good in Management

The steadily growing list of female managers who are making good as operators of motion picture houses adds another personality of marked distinction in Miss Laura Goodman, now managing the New Van Der Vaart theatre at Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Miss Goodman, an exceptionally comely brunette began her career in show business at the age of seventeen. In 1926 she began theatre exploitation work in the Sax State Theatre at Racine. She left Racine to become an assistant manager when Universal built the Kenosha theatre at Kenosha in 1927. Miss Goodman succeeds Marvin S. Harris as manager of the New Van Der Vaart theatre.

While theatre management is her vocation, Miss Goodman is applying herself to aviation as an avocation.

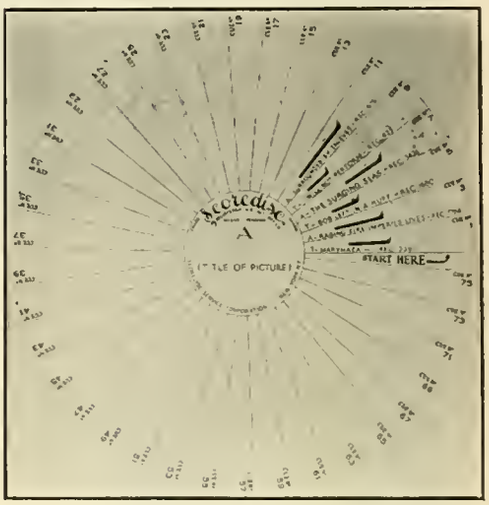
Outlines Technic for Automatic Scoring with New Standard Record Device



SINCE the introduction of Scoredisc Service there have been many exhibitor inquiries concerning the principles of this new invention in the art of reproduced musical and effect scores for motion pictures. As considerable confusion appears in the minds of many exhibitors judged by the questions regarding the Scoredisc, the following detailed description of the device and its operation in the theatre, prepared by Arthur J. Abrams, inventor of the device and head of the company manufacturing and distributing it, is presented:

"In scoring pictures by the Scoredisc method, we take a print of a feature picture, project and re-project it working out a musical and sound effect score during the screening of the action.

"Having determined those musical excerpts and sound effects which will form a proper sound accompaniment, we select from the thousands of records at our disposal, those bearing the precise selections and effects which will be incorporated in the score.

"Then we place our Disc, a flat round object made of heavy cardboard, over the individual records previously selected and score the disc by cutting through to the grooves of the record containing the predetermined melodies and sounds. The 'slots' thus formed in our Scoredisc represent the portions of the records which will be reproduced.

"Scoredises come in pairs, marked A and B, one for each turntable of the non-synchronous sound reproducer. On each pair of Scoredisc is contained the automatic score for an entire feature picture sound accompaniment.

"In picking out the records to be used the person should first find the highest 'slot' numbers on both A and B Scoredises which bear, in addition, the numbers of the records to be used with those 'slots.' The next step is to set them, the record to be used last with Scoredisc A on that side of the turntable, that for Scoredisc B, beside that turntable. The last records to be used should be first picked out so that they will be at the bottom of the stacks when operation of the sound device is started.

"The operator then takes the first record off the stack on the A side and places it on one of the turntables placing the A Scoredisc over it. The needle is inserted in slot number one penetrating to the record grooves which are to be played. While the needle is traversing the length of 'slot' 1 on Scoredisc A, the first record to be played with Scoredisc B is placed on the other turntable and Scoredisc B is placed over it.

"By the time the needle or disc A has about traversed the length of that 'slot' and the music for the particular scene has about run its course, the motor of the turntable bearing Scoredisc B now is started and, by the time it has the turntable running at the proper speed, 'slot' No. 1, Scoredisc A is finished. The sound volume indicator is turned slowly from the turntable bearing A Scoredisc to that bearing B, bringing about a fade-out of music from record and a fade-in for the music which will be played under 'slot' No. 2 on B."

HUB

Look Before You Light

THE lighting of modern theatres has become an exact science as well as a fine art. The operator of a Hub Switchboard can produce the most artistic of all lighting effects—he can play a symphony of lights, shadows, and colors—just as an artist can produce any combination of colors from his palette.

For the benefit of our patrons and prospective patrons, we maintain a completely equipped lighting demonstration studio at our factory. It is a miniature theatre in which we can reproduce every desirable lighting effect which can be used in the largest theatre. Here—with the hearty cooperation of our corps of experienced lighting engineers a complete program of lighting effects can be worked out—and a Hub Switchboard specially designed to reproduce every desired effect.

Every theatre operator is cordially invited to make use of this interesting laboratory as it suits his convenience. The entire facilities of our capable organization are yours to command. Write for further information.

A
STAGE SWITCHBOARD

Every time Wurdack engineers build a stage switchboard, they turn out a better job than their previous one. And for years Wurdack Stage Switchboards have been GOOD ones. But we are no more content with merely building a good switchboard year and year out than an automobile manufacturer would be to keep on turning out the same old model, excellent though it may be, without trying to improve it. Every Wurdack stage Switchboard built is a new improved model—constantly a step ahead of the parade.

The result of this progressive policy is a rapidly increasing number of Wurdack stage switchboard installations. Well informed theatre architects, owners and managers throughout the country insist on specifying the name Wurdack, knowing that in doing so they are making sure of getting not only a tailor-made stage switchboard, but also one incorporating the newest and most advanced developments in design, construction and operation. It is their insurance against having a piece of obsolete equipment on their hands a few years hence.

We have told the story of the Wurdack Multi-Pre-Set, Remote Control Stage Switchboard in detail in a handsome new bulletin now being printed. It contains valuable information about all phases of theatre lighting. May we place your name on our mailing list for a copy? Write—

Roxy Ushers to Star

THE Roxy theatre ushers are to be starred in a series of Movietone shots in one of the sound newsreels to be issued by Fox. This excellent corps of theatre attendants, diplomats, handy-men and showmen will be presented on the screen as the best disciplined and most picturesque service unit in motion picture theatres.

The Stage Band Comes Back

THUS far the sound picture has not sent into the limbo of once famous attractions that highly popular creation of "presentation" which is called the stage band. The band acts are holding their own almost everywhere they are being given opportunity to do so. And, in the case of the Howard in Atlanta, and the Alabama in Birmingham, they are fighting their way back after release following installation of "sound policies."

Creating a New Demand

THAT the exploitation of an "all sound policy" may create a demand for another theatre devoted exclusively to an "all silent policy" is revealed in the plans of Leo G. Garner, of Danville Theatres, Inc., Danville, Va., to reopen the Capitol theatre there as a silent film house to fill a need which exists due to the featuring of sound pictures at his new Rialto theatre.

Fox Acquisitions

IT was reported during the month that the Fox company has closed deals for four suburban theatres in Buffalo. The deal under which Fox will acquire some 200 odd independent houses in Greater New York was not brought to its expected consummation as this review of the event was being prepared. The work of auditors and accountants in going over inventories, etc., etc., will be completed soon and the transfer of the theatres to the Fox organization, it is generally believed, will follow speedily. The West Coast theatres are to be known as Fox West Coast theatres henceforth and advertising of each house will soon make the new name entirely familiar to all of the people who formerly were taught to know them as West Coast Theatres.

Radio

RADIO CORPORATION OF AMERICA made its formal entry into the film industry with an official announcement early in February that "Radio Pictures" had been selected as the trade name for R-K-O Productions, the producing and distributing unit of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. About the same time it was announced that the Hippodrome, New York City, would continue running for another year. This statement was issued following reports that the recent sale of the property meant the end of the Hippodrome in the

A Complete Operating Manual for Effect Lighting in All Theatres

To the thousands of theatres who have successfully used Brenkert effect devices in the past; to the theatres who have never used Brenkert effects, to all of those theatres who, at some time, hope to make use of the hundreds of mystical, colorful atmospheric changes which can be so easily obtained, Brenkert now has ready for distribution a complete operating manual on the famous Brenkert F-7 Master Brenograph which contains explicit instructions for obtaining all of those wonderful lighting effects so necessary to a well balanced motion picture program.

Fifteen large pages of interesting and highly useful information, profusely illustrated, and handsomely bound, make this booklet an indispensable part of the library of any theatre manager or projectionist.

A New Brenkert Catalog

A NEW 1929 edition of the Brenkert catalog is also available for the asking. In this catalog are described and illustrated the complete line of those famous Brenkert projection devices which have come to be looked upon as the standard in leading theatres throughout the world. Spotlamps, effect projectors, special color projectors, and major equipments for the projection room are shown in detail.

Major Vaudeville Recruits New Patrons from Radio night eventful wherever there is a radio set is now believed with evident reason, to be a new and sure-fire method of recruiting vaudeville fans.

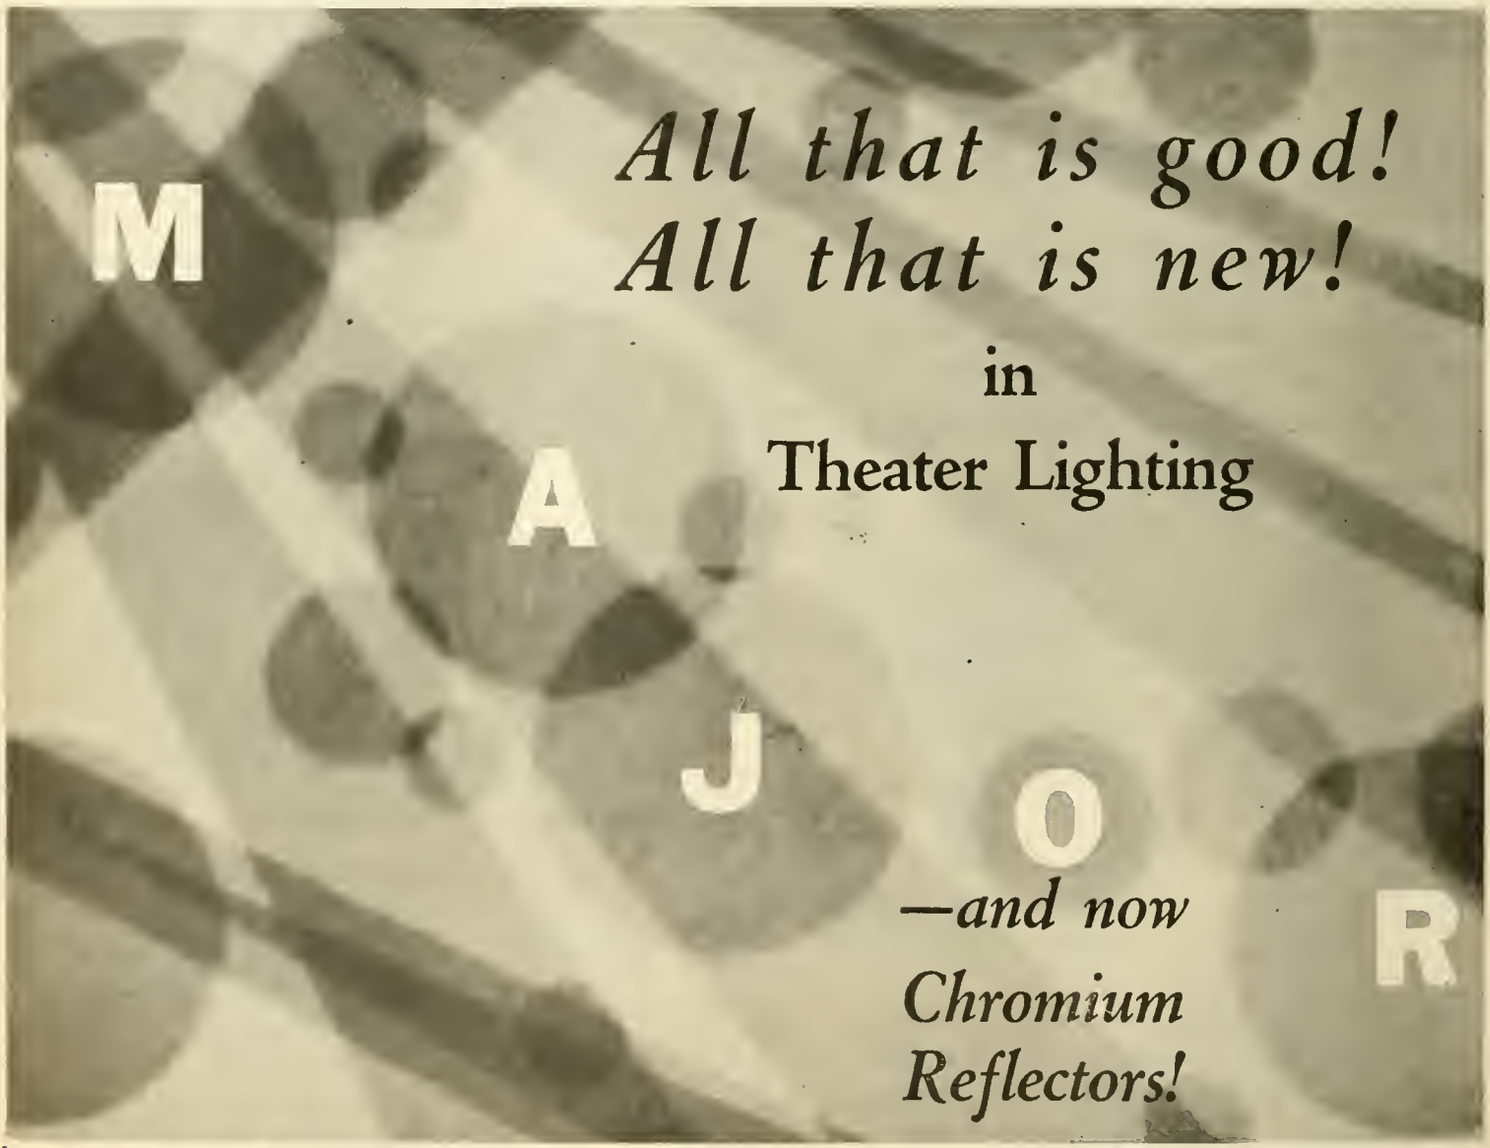
"A sampling process," it might be called, but the flood of letters of approval, inquiry and astonishment which have come into the Radio-Keith-Orpheum headquarters within the five weeks during which the broadcasting idea has been worked, seem to indicate that it is the most popular form of exploitation that show business has devised in many years.

Nearly 10,000 letters a week are now arriving at Radio-Keith-Orpheum headquarters in New York, Chicago and San Francisco from strangely remote regions as well as from the cities and towns where there are vaudeville theatres. And —all from owners and users of the radio —they express in various degress of enthusiasm the interest and approval which have followed the Tuesday night broadcasting of RKO vaudeville programs. What the cumulative effect of this will be in dollars and cents, in extended box-office patronage, it is as yet too early to estimate. But an inkling may be had from some of the many letters recorded. Thus from a Connecticut village comes a letter saying: "Now I have heard some of your famous vaudeville headliners over the radio, I want to see them too. I have never been a vaudeville fan until now, because I did not realize the extent and high quality of your shows. We—all of my family—enjoyed the musical numbers and got big laughs."



That is a typical letter of thousands that are coming in from far away ranches, mining camps and cross-road towns.

Rochester Operator Designs Synchronous Disc Device

CAROL FENNYVESSY, motion picture specialist and theatre operator in Rochester, N. Y., has developed a simplified synchronized sound device for disc reproduction. The new machine, known as Metotone, will be manufactured by the Weber Machine Corporation of Rochester. It will sell for approximately $1,500.

Equipment already has been installed in four Rochester neighborhood theatres in the wake of a demonstration in the Strand Theatre, downtown house operated by Fennyvessy.

Metotone is a purely mechanical device. Intricate equipment has been eliminated. The discs operate on a revolving table regulated by a reduction gear to work synchroniously with the projector.

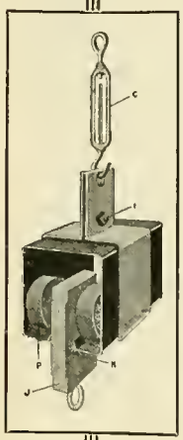
Ban on "Last Time" Ads

THE Better Business Bureau, of Portland, Ore., has taken steps to put an end to the "Last Time" ads for pictures completing a first run engagement. Exhibitors there have been warned to refrain from this type of advertising. This action is the result of several recent instances in which pictures were offered as a "last chance" for a whole year, when as a matter of fact the same films were shown within a few weeks at neighborhood houses.

The Patrons of Music

LESS than 4 per cent of the population of the United States supports good music, according to a survey of musical conditions made by George Engles, New York concert and radio manager. He finds that La Porte, Ind., a city of 15,128 inhabitants, stands first with 9 per cent, 1,375 of its inhabitants, attending concerts regularly. Newark, Ohio, is second, with 6 per cent, and a number of smaller cities average about 5 per cent.

Metropolitan centers like Chicago and New York, Mr. Engles finds, pull the national average down; in these two cities the average of concert-goers is less than 1 per cent of the population.



PRODUCTION

THE past month in production was more notable for the elaborate plans announced is at a high level for this season. During the month it was announced that First National's production budget for the coming season totals some $18,000,000, which amount will be expended in the filming of 35 features and a number of special pictures to be made for road showing. Three of the five all-talking pictures that United Artists will offer during 1929 are in production. Players who will be heard as well as seen in United Artists features in 1929 are Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Vilma Banky, Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman, Lupe Velez, Pat O'Malley, Eleanor Griffith and Mae Busch. M-G-M announced that 26 new Movietone acts would be released during the first 13 weeks of 1929, and that 20 of the 40 short comedies to be produced for that schedule by Hal Roach would be synchronized with music and sound effects. Six talking pictures have been completed by Tiffany-Stahl. Sam Sax announced a schedule of 12 sound pictures, eleven of them to have dialogue, for release in 1929 by Gotham.

Theatres Equipping Faster Than Studios

ACCORDING to a report from the Hollywood Bureau of Motion Picture News, theatres are being equipped with sound reproducing apparatus almost one per cent faster than the studios are being equipped to produce films for the playhouses of the country. This condition is being reflected at the theatres which have heavily exploited their sound installations with extra billing being given to short talking acts.

Fox Versus Zukor Looms As Battle Of Giants With Close Of Loew-M-G-M Negotiations

Grombacher Buys Spokane Clemmer From Universal

Ray A. Grombacher, president of the Spokane Theatres, Inc., has added a fourth house to his chain in Spokane, Wash. He has purchased the Clemmer Theatre from Universal Pictures and takes possession March 1. The amount of money involved in the transaction was not stated.

Grombacher is one of the liveliest exhibitors in the Northwest. His four houses give him a seating capacity of 3,050. The theatres owned and operated independently by Mr. Grombacher are Liberty, Granada, Egyptian and Clemmer. The name of the latter will be changed, the interior will be redecorated and some slight alterations made. Sound equipment will also be installed. Harry Culbert, now at the Liberty, will become manager of the Clemmer, and Duncan Inverarity, manager of the Granada, will become manager of the Liberty.

Organizing Make-Up Men And Asst. Directors in N. Y.

There was a meeting on Friday evening of this week at the Hotel Wolcot in New York at which the organizers of the union for Assistant Directors and Make-Up Artists addressed those active in that branch of work in New York. Joseph Holton has been designated as the head of the assistant directors union and the organizing of that branch is going ahead with remarkable speed.

The only portion of those engaged in the making of motion picture productions in New York that are not unionized at present are the actors, but with the stage actors stepping into the pictures in droves due to the talking pictures, it would seem as though Equity was at last in a position to compel the organization of the motion picture players from stars right down the line to extras.

Tec-Art Coast Studios Having Sound Installed

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—The last of the independent leasing studios has capitulated to sound, with Tec-Art beginning actual construction of two sound stages next week. H. Kirk Kellog, the engineer who supervised RKO and United Artists sound stages is in charge at Tec-Art. The stages are to contain a scoring room, three unit recording rooms and two projection rooms.

Both film and disc methds are to be available. Also stages are to be adaptable for the use of any patents now existing or which may become popular.

Warners Get 51% Of Equity Theatres Under Agreement

Under the terms of the agreement between Warner Brothers and Equity Theatres, Inc., the former concern receives 51 per cent of the stock of the new $2,000,000 holding company, Warner-Equity Theatres, Inc., of Philadelphia, and also holds an option to purchase the remaining 49 per cent within two years.

RKO Appropriates Quarter Million More For Studio

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Another $250,000 appropriation, bringing the total up to $500,000, was made for improvements on the RKO studio last week. The latest structures planned are buildings for the recently created music department, for wardrobe and for property units. The music building will be devoted to orchestral and composing activities incidental to synchronizing forthcoming Radio pictures. Several projections will be built for sound purposes.

Cleveland Deal Separates Variety-Universal Circuits

The Variety-Universal circuit, Cleveland, has completed the deal separating the Variety from the Universal chain which has been pending for several months. Jimmy Carrier has been appointed general manager of the Universal chain, which includes the Hillard Square, Cedar-Lee New Broadway, Detroit and Oriental.

Under Carrier, all of the Universal houses will have Vitaphone and Movietone equipment. The Hillard Square opened with sound two weeks ago. The Cedar-Lee installation was completed last Monday. Other installations will follow. Admission prices will be boosted ten cents.

Le Baron On Way East To Discuss RKO Production

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—William Le Baron returned to New York Wednesday after being back in Hollywood only two weeks. The sudden new trip was occasioned by the decision that all RKO product will be one hundred per cent talkie with no silent versions whatever. While in the east he will discuss plans for production.

Counterstroke Looked For From Paramount Head With Supremacy In Balance

in the film industry. It is fair to assume that he is going to contest this particular one and therefore it would appear as there is in the offing a terrific battle of the giants in the picture producing, distributing and exhibiting industry.

The fact that Publix was preparing a battle against the Fox theatres in New England territory, even before this deal came to pass, was an indication of the real struggle that was looming. Publix, it is said, has had scouts in the New England territory for months past lining up sites so that they would parallel the Fox houses in every one of the eastern cities.

Publix has a large, well organized theatre operating department functioning at present. It has taken over ten years to build this department to the state of perfection that now exists and all of its resurces are to be extended in the forthcoming battle that threatens.

In the meantime, and even as late as Tuesday night of this week, the report persisted that the Warner Bros. were to secure the control of the Loew-M-G-M organization on a basis of an exchange of stock with three shares of Warner being turned over for every five of Loew necessary to secure control.

Effect on Independents

What effect the Fox deal will have on the independent theatre situation in Greater New York is a question. Exhibitors who have tentative agreements with Fox for the purchase of their houses are all up in the air over the reported closing of the Loew-M-G-M deal. It will mean that Fox will not of necessity have to have the independent theatres for with the Loew Circuit coupled with his own he will virtually have control of the Metropolitan territory. Just how the contracts with the independents now in existence will work out is a question. The general opinion was that Fox was to make some payments on the independent theatres beginning this week. When Monday arrived it was stated by some of the independents that payments had been postponed for 30 days.

At the offices of A. C. Blumenthal at the Ambassador Hotel, where all of the Fox deals with the independents were carried on, Mr. Blumenthal could not be reached on Thursday either to affirm or deny the possibility of the independent deals being called off because of the Loew deal. He was not in his office and it was not known when he would return.

Changes Made In Managers Of Coast Theatres

Richard M. Hughes, former assistant manager of the Ritz Theatre, has been appointed manager of the Mesa Theatre, Los Angeles. Karl F. Krueger has been made manager of the California Theatre, Salinas, Cal.

E. P. Laws, has been appointed manager of the Opal Theatre, Hollister, Cal. He was formerly assistant manager of the California at Stockton.

Douglas Kimberly has been appointed house manager at the Colonial, Tacoma, Wash., in addition to assisting in all publicity for the Tacoma houses. David Richards, former assistant manager at the Broadway, Portland, Wash., has been made manager of the Rialto, Tacoma.

It was reported from the Coast early this week that Blair and Company had become financially interested with Jos. M. Schenck in the Art Cinema Corp., which is the financing organization behind United Artists, the distributing branch.

This was emphatically denied by Mr. Schenck on Thursday. He also branded as untrue the report that United Artists would merge with M-G-M.

Paramount Assigns Gilks To Shoot Feature, "Jealousy"

Paramount has assigned Alfred Gilks to shoot the company's next feature picture to be made at the Long Island studios. It will star Jeanne Eagels in "Jealousy" and production will get under way March 4. Jean de Limur will direct. It will be Gilks first feature picture at the Eastern studio for several years. His recent assignments have been one and two-reelers.

Joseph Schildkraut as the suave gambler hero of Universal's special production, "Show Boat," from the Edna Ferber novel of that name.

Hornstein Given Farewell Dinner By Old Associates

Joe Hornstein, who has resigned as Manager of the New York branch of the National Theatre Supply Co., was given a farewell dinner by that company on Thursday night of this week at the Hotel Claridge. Over one hundred friends and former business associates attended to wish Hornstein good luck in his new business venture and to extend their appreciation of "Joe's" popularity while he was connected with the theatre equipment field.

Walter Green, General Manager of National Theatre Supply, paid tribute to Hornstein's work during his connections with National. Employees of Hornstein's office presented him with a platinum watch and chain and an inscribed gold plaque.

Hornstein is reported to be considering several offers that have been made him by companies in the picture industry.

Canada Completes Film Survey To Aid Producers

A survey of the whole moving picture situation in Canada has just been made by the four British Trade Commissioners in the Dominion, and their reports are shortly to be sent to the Imperial offices in London, according to an announcement by F. W. Field at Montreal, who is His Majesty's Senior Trade Commissioner to Canada.

The extensive investigation has been carried out at the request of the Home Government, because great importance is attached to the value of moving pictures as a vehicle for the spread of national and trade propaganda. Mr. Field pointed out that the theatres and film exchanges in Canada had Canadian organizations to a great degree, but the film product was almost entirely American. Such an arrangement automatically created resistance to the sales of British pictures in Canada he believed.

That British film producers had much to learn in the making of pictures for universal consumption was admitted by Mr. Field, and this was one reason why the survey had taken place. The average quality of British-made pictures had improved greatly, however, and it was possible to point to a number of British releases which were on a par with the best standard of foreign productions.

M-G-M Preparing Another South Sea Island Picture

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Following the success of "White Shadows of the South Seas," M-G-M is preparing another tropic epic to be made in the South sea locale.

The new production will involve a large amount of underwater shooting, and the studio has been acquiring diving bells and underwater equipment necessary to producing the picture.

Dorothy Yost is working on the story, under supervision of Hunt Stromberg. The latter had production supervision of "White Shadows."

It is known that Paramount has also been figuring on making an underwater picture in the South Seas, and last year sent Karl Brown and William Wing on location near Tahiti for several months.

Small Reported Signing To Produce Series For Columbia

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—Edward Small is reported as signing a contract with Harry Cohn to produce a series for Columbia Pictures. One of these, it is said, will star Anna Chandler, former vaudeville star, while Small will use other players under contract to him in the balance of the series.

Pathe Story Department On West Coast Is Discontinued

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—The Pathe studio discontinued its story department this week. The only executive to continue is Carl Hovey, scenario editor, who is handling alone whatever details are necessary.

Emphasize heavily that Alice White and Jack Mulhall are teamed, that it is a sound production and that Alice White hits the high spots of comedy and drama in it as an adorable heroine and that it has a wonderful sound accompaniment and marvelous music. Audience appeal: to all who like a peppy story of modern life with plenty of zip and go. They all like it.—Frank Price, Jr., Manager Rivoli, Baltimore, Md.

"Night Club"

FEATURE Fannie Brice, Ann Pennington, Bobbie Arnst, the chorus of beauties, and the rest of its attractions. Audience appeal: general, not for children.—H. S. Amos, Manager Capitol, Macon, Ga.

Better title than the film itself. Good names in line-up and fair film which should be booked in double harness. Exploit the cast and the suggestiveness of the title. Audience appeal: all classes and ages.—Ed Read, Manager Strand, Providence, R. I.

The names of the long list of stars and their roles should be featured as being seen and heard. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—Clare Woods, Manager Royal, Kansas City, Mo.

"The Night Bird"

REGINALD DENNY'S following should patronize the house with this film if his identity is properly exploited. Stress the sporting and comedy angles. Audience appeal: all classes and ages.—Marvin Murphy, Manager Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.

"Object—Alimony"

LOIS WILSON given the play. She got her screen in Birmingham beauty contest. Outside of the star the story has little to tie to except the angle of the middle-aged women looking for young lovers.—George Steele, Manager Trianon, Birmingham, Ala.

Recommend playing up the marriage angle, the many thrills, Lois Wilson's acting, the novelty of the working girl who spurns riches to prove her love. Has appeal for everyone, particularly those who like dramas of love.—Ray Rogan, Manager Rialto, Joliet, Ill.

"Oh Kay"

COLLEEN MOORE has a new role in this picture that is worth exploiting. Emphasize the stage success of the story. Appeals to all classes and all ages. Special appeal for the Colleen Moore fans, especially the women.—Patrick McManus, Manager Princess, Joliet, Ill.

"On Trial"

ITS all-talkie angle and the popularity of crime pictures are exploitation aids. Pauline Frederick's work and the good cast. Audience appeal: all adults. Not for children. —Sam Bendheim, Manager Capitol, Richmond, Va.

"The Power Of Silence"

PLAYED up the name of Belle Bennett and the fact that this new picture offered better opportunities than "Wild Geese," which was one of the biggest pictures of the year to play at the Palace.—Marc Wolf, Manager Palace, Canton, O.

"Prep and Pep"

THE military academy life and the school life appeals strongly in this film. Tough on athletic and romantic angle in the ads. Audience appeal: all ages and all classes.—Charles Lake, Manager Keith's Palace, Rochester, N. Y.

"Prowlers of the Sea"

AN exceptional picture. Worth featuring anywhere. Audience appeal: for all ages and classes.—L. J. Shields, Manager Ritz, Macon, Ga.

"The Redeeming Sin"

THE romantic angle should be hit hard in this film. Exploitation of adventure also should bring in the younger patrons. Play up Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Arch McCallum, Manager Fay's, Rochester, N. Y.

Costello and Nagel exploited. Audience appeal: high school age and up.—Charles Branham, Manager Alabama, Birmingham, Ala.

Feature the beautiful Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel in another all-talkie. Story of Parisian underworld with unusual and interesting developments. Audience appeal: young folks up to middle age.—W. F. Brock, Manager State, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Advertise Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello, especially where they have a strong following. The underworld character of the picture has exploitation value. Audience appeal: general to all classes and particularly city audiences.—Evert R. Cummings, Manager Capitol, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Costello and Nagel draw well; use their names in the exploitation. Audience appeal: mostly women, all ages.—L. K. Brin, Manager Garden, Milwaukee, Wis.

Feature Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel as "glorious Lovers" and play up the character of the fiery Apache girl. Audience appeal: sensation seekers and the young people, especially flappers.—Emil Bernstecker, Manager Metropolitan, Houston, Tex.

Play up the Paris and Latin Quarter angles. Audience appeal: most any audience will appreciate it.—George B. Peck, Manager Victory, Tampa, Fla.

Play up Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel as the screen's far-famed lovers talking and living their roles. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Holden Swiger, Manager Newman, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploited Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, the screen's most glorious lovers. Played up the romantic angle. Audience appeal: from high school age up. Women especially.—Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis, Mo.

"Red Hot Speed"

FEATURE it as Reginald Denny's first talking comedy of the traffic courts. Audience appeal: for all ages of "town" trade. —Floyd Smith, Manager Tivoli, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Red Wine"

EXPLOIT Conrad Nagel in a story of the tired business man who steps out. Audience appeal: for the adult class.—Paul Short, Manager Rialto, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Tell them that it shows Conrad Nagel in a new role. Play up the peppy story dealing with the Broadway night clubs. Exploit it as a story of a small town boy making whoopee. Has appeal to everyone, particularly to those who prefer light comedy.—Patrick McManus, Manager Princess, Joliet, Ill.

Box Office Aids To Features

"The Rescue"

THE romantic adventure story carries an especial appeal to the younger elite patronage with enough adventure thrown in to includes other classes. The highlights are Ronald Colman who makes his first picture after the breaking up of the co-starring team of Colman-Banky and an unusual story of the South Seas.—State, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Revenge"

EXPLOIT it as a sound production with Dolores Del Rio as the star. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—Harry Klein, Manager Virginia, Atlantic City, N. J.

"Sal Of Singapore"

THE picture was advertised as an unusual adventure story of the sea and this and the fact that Phyllis Haver speaks seemed to pull them in.—Clem Pope, Manager Clemmer, Spokane, Wash.

Exploit its sea angle and the shanghaiing of the heroine. Audience appeal: for high school age up and to all classes.—Walter Merkel, Manager Capitol, Springfield, Mass.

"Scarlet Seas"

FEATURE Richard Barthelmess in this story of the South Seas, a "somewhere east of Suez" drama with strong climates. Audience appeal: for all audiences, ages and classes.—Floyd Smith, Manager Tivoli, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Seven Footprints to Satan"

A FIRST class mystery story. The elements of suspense and adventure are to be featured. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—L. J. Shields, Manager Ritz, Macon, Ga.

"The Shady Lady"

LOVE, romance, thrills and charm can be exploited in this one. Phyllis Haver also should be played up as the star. Audience appeal: Mostly adult appeal, although many of high school age attended.—Lawrence Lehman, Manager Mainstreet, Kansas City, Mo.

"The Shopworn Angel"

PLAY up Nancy Carrol and Gary Cooper. Also the romance of the picture. Audience appeal: principally the younger element and feminine fans.—Evert R. Cummings, Manager Capitol, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The team of Carrol and Cooper should be emphasized here, together with the fact that there is a unique love story. Audience appeal: for all classes.—Michigan Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Show Folks"

EMPHASIZE Eddie Quillan in parts where his work is well known and appreciated. Appeal is general, especially good for those interested in the show business.—A. B. McCoy, Manager Mary Anderson, Louisville, Ky.

"Show People"

EXPLOIT the many film stars who appear in the picture. Play up the fact that the story reveals the "inside" of movie life. Bits of action from the making of other movies and double role of the star with scenes from other M-G-M pictures all make excellent exploitation possibilities. Audience appeal: general.—E. T. Crall, Manager Rialto, Newport, Va.

"A Single Man"

AUDIENCE appeal: Suited for flapper audiences.—Michigan Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"The Sin Sister"

EXPLOIT Nancy Carroll and the northern scenes as well as the dramatic moments. Universal appeal.—John Blunk, Manager Alamo, Louisville, Ky.

"Stark Mad"

PLAY up H. B. Warner and the great mystery scenes. Audience appeal: for younger people and those liking melodrama. —Walter McDowell, Manager Strand, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Strange Cargo"

PLAY it up as the strangest of all mysteries made as a 100% talking picture. Get them guessing with the question: Was his beautiful sweetheart a murderess? Bring out the fact of the 14 stage players in the cast and name the more prominent. Audience appeal: to the old and not so much to the young due to the lack of a strong love theme. The mystery and comedy elements prove highly entertaining.—William E. Stumpf, Manager New, Baltimore, Md.

The mystery angle played up in the exploitation. Also Lee Patrick and George Barroud, June Nash and Russell Gleason. The thrills and the wierdness were used to advantage. Audience appeal: especially appealing to neighborhood houses.—Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis, Mo.

"Sunrise"

GAYNOR'S name in provinces seems to have more pull than the film's Broadway run. Go heavy on the billing. Appeal: adults of all classes and ages.—Sol Braunig, Manager Majestic, Providence, R. I.

"Synthetic Sin"

PLAY up Colleen Moore and emphasize the comedy angels. Audience appeal: for all classes and ages.—Manson Floyd, Manager Kirby, Houston, Tex.

"The Tide Of Empire"

EXPLOITED it as a world premiere, also as an historic epic of the west and as a super special. Audience appeal: all ages and especially such places as like westerns.—State Theatre, Cleveland, O.

"True Heaven"

STRAIGHT romance, very good. Audience appeal: for all ages and classes—H. S. Amos, Manager Capitol, Macon, Ga.

Lois Moran and George O'Brien, the starring players of the film, are the only two angles for exploitation.—Milton Overman, Grand, Paris, Tex.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin"

PLAY up the old novel which is still the subject of hot controversy and compare the present day tolerance with the intolerance of 75 years ago. Advertise the jubilee singers in negro spirituals. Audience appeal: all ages and all classes.—Eddie Bremer, Manager Majestic, Houston, Tex.

"The Water Hole"

PLAY up the romantic angle and the star—Jack Holt and Nancy Carroll. Emphasize the "he-man" adventure. Audience appeal is general.—John J. Burns, Manager Keith's, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Weary River"

EXPLOIT as Barthelmess' first talking and singing venture. Also the heart interest and novelty of the theme, the name value of the star and the beauty of Betty Compson. Audience appeal: for all classes and all ages. Universal interest.—Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, Ohio.

"West Of Zanzibar"

PUT Lon Chaney in a story of some far off country and the crowd will break in the theatre doors. Picture particularly appeals to juveniles and men. Selling point: emphasize the story of revenge in darkest Africa and underline Chaney's name.—P. J. Nolan, Manager Rex, Ottawa, Ont.

"White Shadows in the South Seas"

PLENTY to exploit in this film. The romance and the adventure angles should play most prominent parts in an exploitation campaign. Appeal might be made on factual interest of the transformation of the tropics. The costume stunts might go well. Audience appeal: all ages and classes.—Piccadilly Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

"Wild Orchids"

EXPLOIT Greta Garbo's name and those of Lewis Stone and Nils Asther; also the romance in the story. Audience appeal: from high school age up and for all classes.—J. F. Flex, Manager Loew's Palace, Indianapolis, Ind.

Greta Garbo's name is its greatest recommendation, with Lewis Stone also of value; play up the story as a vivid, exotic drama. Audience appeal: for all classes, except children. —Andrew D. Mustard, Manager Strand, Atlantic City, N. J.

Good idea to trade on pull of the star's name. Plan up exotic surroundings and Garbo's wardrobe. Audience appeal: to sophisticates and lovers of romance.—E. J. McCarthy, Manager Loew's State, Providence, R. I.

Play up the oriental setting and the lavish production. The popularity of the star should not be overlooked. Audience appeal: all classes. —Manager Broad Theatre, Columbus, O.

Exploit Greta Garbo, Nils Asther and Lewis Stone, also the elaborate Javanese settings and the native dances. Audience appeal: sophisticated class and the young people who like drama.—Homer McCallon, Publicity Manager, Loew's State, Houston, Tex.

Broadway Show Reviews

"Wolf" Booking At The Colony Causes Roxy Jam

Columbia Sells Feature To Universal House And Tries To Switch Later

There was a booking jam on early this week over the Columbia special "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" between the Colony Theatre and the Roxy. Both houses wanted the picture. Dave Werner, who is handling the Colony for Universal in addition to his duties at the home office, saw the feature and immediately signed a contract for it. Later S. L. Rothafel looked at the picture and expressed a desire for it for the big house next week.

Columbia then tried to effect a switch with the Colony so that they might get the exploitation value and prestige out of having their feature in the Roxy and up to the early part of the week were trying to get Werner to release them from the booking.

It finally looked as though they would make a deal by giving the Colony "The Younger Generation" and putting "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" into the Roxy.

What consideration will be made to the Colony for making the switch isn't known, but the chances are that they will make the deal worth while to the management of that house, because the fact that the Roxy played the "Wolf" picture will add a tremendous sales value to their picture.

Roxy has booked in "Speakeasy," a Fox all-talking feature for the Anniversary Week at his house and a special show is being built around that picture.

"Belle of Samoa" Dropped From the Gaiety Program

"The Belle of Samoa," a Movietoue short subject which was heavily advertised as one of the features of the new program at the Gaiety theatre opening on Wednesday night with "Hearts in Dixie" as the feature, was dropped from the bill at the last minute. The reason given was that the program would have run to too great a length had the number been retained.

William Fox reviewed the program at the Gaiety on Wednesday and ordered the "Samoa" number out. The show with a Movietone overture, a Fox Movietone News (current issue), "Old Tunes For New" a Movietone short, and "Friendship" the Eugene Walter written and directed dramatic thriller, together with the feature ran from 8:45 until 10:50 P. M.

"Lucky Boy" Heads Capitol Show With Fair Stage Program To Balance

TAKEN all in all, the bill presented at the Capitol this week is far from outstanding. One of the reasons for this is the length of the Tiffany-Stahl feature "Lucky Boy," which runs for an hour and a half. The picture is too long and could have been cut to advantage. During the showing of the last reel and a half of the feature the house became restless, which is a sure sign that they thought the picture was running on and on like Tennyson's brook. The combined overture, magazine and stage show, running for a minute more than an hour, made the whole program take a little more than two and a half hours. Decidedly too much show altogether.

A medley of popular numbers comprising four songs served as the overture by the Capitol Grand Orchestra, running nine minutes. Included were "When Summer is Gone," "Roses of Yesterday," "You're the Cream in My Coffee," and "You Were Meant for Me," the latter the hit theme song from "The Broadway Melody." The selections were applauded individually.

For the Magazine and Fox Movietone News the house had four shots from the latter, starting with the New York Fire Department dashing through the crowds on Fifth avenue, the indoor baseball practice at Yale, Stribling and his baby son in training, and one other shot. Two silent shots from the M. G. M. News finished the fourteen minutes of time allotted to news events.

A Chester Hale production, entitled "Versailles," graced the stage, with Dave Schooler and the Capitolians in silks and laces and powdered wigs of one of the Louis periods forming the background to the picture. It opened with a graceful minute by the ballet, after which there was a vocal solo by one of the male members of the ensemble. Emil Boreo, who was a member of the original Chauve-Souris Company brought to this country, and who made a distinct hit with his March of the Wooden Soldiers, offered that number at the conclusion of two French numbers at the piano. A ballet number, with the Rodion Trio, a trio composed of a man and two women in spectacular adagio work, featured. Yvette Rugel appeared following a number by Dave Schooler and the band, and sang three numbers with her counter-harmony version of "Swaunee River" as the outstanding feature, with the audience demanding an encore after she had completed it. Boreo reappared in costume for another specialty, which did not click as his opening number did. The stage presentation ran exactly thirty-eight minutes.

"The Rainbow Man." These three scenes show Eddie Dowling as the star of the Sono-Art Production of that name. In the second shot his companion is Marian Nixon, the leadinig lady of the picture

"The Spieler" With Strong Show Gives The Roxy A Pleasing Bill

AN altogether pleasing bill is presented at the Roxy this week with Pathe's "The Spieler," a talking feature, as the principal offering. The picture is not a 100 per cent talker, having only a couple of short dialog sequences but they are going to surprise you for Renee Adoree has an Irish brogue instead of a French accent. Laugh that off.

But Roxy, the master craftsman of all of the Broadway showmen, has built up a surrounding program that is highly entertaining, even though the stage entertainment as a whole does not compare equally with that of the previous week.

For the opening of the program the organ, with Reine Valerie again seated atop of the instrument when it appears out of the well, is again a novel touch. Roxy has arranged two amplifiers on each side of the house that carry the little songstress' voice and the effect is pleasing. She is using "If I Had You" as her number this week with Emil Velazeo accompanying her. The number runs four minutes.

"Capticcio Italien" is utilized as the overture for the next twelve minutes of the time.

The third unit of the show is the "Ballet De Nuit" with Patricia Bowman and Lillian La Tonge and Leonide Massine as the featured members. The setting and costuming are beautiful and the dancing exquisite. Eleven minutes.

Beatrice Belkin, who possesses a charming coloratura, next offered "The Shadow Song" from "Dinorah" and scored heavily with it. Her voice reminds one of that of Galli Curci, and she uses it most effectively. Five minutes.

Massenet's "Scenes Pittoresque" furnishes the material for the next unit which is entitled "The Angelus," giving the Roxy ensemble an opportunity to vocalize. The Flemish setting and costumes are a pretty background for the number, which runs six minutes.

The 32 Roxyettes get their opportunity to shine in the unit carrying the title of "Taps" and the girls uncover a hard shoe dance routine that would delight the ears of no less a personnage than Ned Wayburn, who is the daddy of ensemble hard shoe stepping. This is a most flashy dressed number with the girls in red, black and white.

Five minutes are given over to the Fox Movietone News in which the Hoover Home Folk sequence proved to be one of the distinct comedy features of the evening. The Roxy audience laughed long and loud at what some of the Iowans pulled.

There is a flash prolog of three minutes prior to the opening of the feature. It has a number of circus sideshow freaks, such as the fact woman, th egiant, the fire-eater, hula daneer, midgets, etc., on a platform with a spieler making an opening, the Roxy ensemble acting as the umpchays out in front.

The feature runs an hour, which brings the total running time of the show to just about a minute over the two hour limit.

May 1 Set As The Opening Date For "The Show Boat"

Universal has set May first as the opening date for "The Show Boat" at the Globe Theatre in New York. They have secured the theatre under an indefinite lease from Charles Dillingham at $6,500 wekely. "Three Cheers," the present Will Rogers-Dorothy Stone musical comedy will remain at the house until the picture arrives.

According to the present plans it is figured that the film version of Edna Ferber-Ziegfeld novel-revue will remain at the Globe at least eight months and it is possible that this will cause "Broadway" another Universal talking special to be placed in another Broadway house.

Many Changes In Paramount Show After First Day

Elaborate Overture Discarded, Vocal Soloist Dropped And Half Of Team Out With Flu

The show at the Paramount Theatre this week underwent an upheaval after the first day's performances. There was an elaborate overture which was entitled "Assyrian Fantasy," in which Xenia Makietzova, Allan Wayne and David Bines were featured as dancers and Wm. Royal as tenor, which was dropped after Saturday and replaced with a medley of Victor Herbert melodies. Also Virginia Johnson, soprano, who was appearing with Jesse Crawford, and singing "Yo Te Amo," the theme song of "The Wolf Song," was not in the show after the first day. On Wednesday, Van, of the team of Fauntleroy and Van, in the "Harvest Time" unit, was out of the running because of an attack of flu.

After the bill had been revised and was again running smoothly in the middle of the week the entertainment was quite enjoyable.

Victor Herbert's melodies are always acceptable on Broadway, and in conducting them Dave Rubinoff seemed to have calmed down considerably, the result being that the audience got a chance to enjoy the music instead of watching his acrobatic antics. The overture ran eight minutes. A number of shots from the Paramount News followed for the next four minutes. Several of the shots had been seen at other Broadway houses last week.

Jesse Crawford and his wife share the spot light equally this week in the playing of three numbers, starting with "Precious Little Thing Called Love," followed with "I'll Get By" and "Where the Shy Little Violets Grow," with Mrs. Crawford getting the larger share of applause, because of her jazzy handling of the numbers. Six minutes were allotted them.

Three minutes of Fashion in Color were shown with Alice Day, Olive Hasbrouck, Dorothy Gulliver and Thelma Todd acting as the models.

The "Harvest Time" unit took up thirty-five minutes and was shown in two sets. There was a farm-yard opening scene for the introduction of the rube characters, with the girls doing a rube number, which was followed by the stage band in "Clarinet Marmalade," after which Ted Lawrence was given a chance to offer his whistling specialty, which scored the first applause hit of the act. The Varsity Four, singing "Daisy Days," offered a little close harmony, after which the remaining half of the Fauntleroy and Van team offered his specialty on the musical saw. The Stanley Twins, in a dancing specialty, pulled another solid applause hit, as did also a team of dancing boys that were on earlier. These boys were not programmed or announced, and probably shot into the act to fill a gap. Back in one for a short time a Clown Band was introduced, which gave time for a change behind them to an interior for the Barn Dance, which was the finale.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Franklin Much In Favor Of Sound On Film Method

Declares It Gives Better Results And Is Easier To Handle

Harold B. Franklin, president and general manager of Fox West Coast Theatres is decidedly in favor of sound-on-film recording as bringing better results and being easier to handle than the disc records. He contends that the chain's experience proves that sound-on-film prints last as long and are as serviceable as the silent prints.

With regard to the sound situation Mr. Franklin says:

"To begin with, we have a preference for the sound-on-film system because it is of decided advantage to have the sound a part of the film itself, in that way eliminating the possibility of mistakes either in shipment of discs or handling in the booth itself. From a practical angle, we have found that prints are thrown out of synchronization frequently with the disc system, because projectionists do not always replace film when patches are made, and every time this is done a number of frames are eliminated from the picture, thereby throwing the sound out of synchronization. Regardless of the close supervision that we employ in this connection, the human equation enters into it to such an extent that we consider this to be one of the serious handicaps of the disc system. With sound-on-film, the film is always in synchronization regardless of patches that are made.

Labor Problems Hit Cleveland Installations

Labor conditions are seriously hampering the sound picture problem in Cleveland because they are reported as being almost prohibitive. It is said that many houses cannot consider installations because of this.

According to the reports any theatre installing a sound reproducing device is compelled to employ an additional operator at a 50 per cent increase above the scale for silent theatres, and in addition to this they have to employ a stage hand to operate the draw curtain in front of the screen even if they have a control system in the booth for this purpose.

It is estimated that the total cost of increased overhead operation under the conditions would be between $500 and $600 increase a week without including the extra cost of film or regular maintenance charges. Exhibitors claim to be anxious to make the installations but protest they are unable to do so.

$40,000,000 Year's Western Electric Sound Output, Estimates of A.-P.

ACCORDING to an A.P. story, O. L. Rice, vice-president of the Western Electric Company in charge of the Hawthorne plant, announced in Chicago that sound picture apparatus is now being installed at the rate of 250 units a month. He estimated that this year's output would aggregate $40,000,000.

Audible picture machinery, according to Mr. Rice, has been installed in 1,271 theatres in the United States, 16 in Canada and 23 in other countries. The company has 1,082 unfilled orders for the United States, 37 for Canada and 125 for other countries, according to the statement.

World Wide Sets Feature Releases Of Sound Pictures

Several With Dialogue And Music To Be Ready Before Summer

World Wide Pictures is planning an extensive schedule of releases of foreign made productions with sound and dialogue. The first of these, "Moulin Rouge" with sound and song synchronization by RCA Photophone is ready for exhibitors.

Herbert Wilcox's all-talking production, "Black Waters," made in Hollywood, but released by World Wide, will be ready for distribution by the middle of March. This picture is from John Williard's stage success, "Fog."

The next two are due in April. They are "Kitty" and "Week End Wives." The former is from Warwick Deeping's novel and was produced by Burlington Films at Henley. Victor Saville directed. "Week End Wives" was made in Paris and Deauville and has Jameson Thomas, popular leading man of England, in the leading role. Monte Banks also plays a part.

"Piccadilly" with Gilda Gray and Anna May Wong will be a May importation. It is now enjoying a run at the Carleton, Paramount's long run house in London. When released here it will be synchronized with music and songs.

Other releases of sound and all-talking pictures will follow in the late Summer and Fall. Sound stages will be completed in May at Brighton and Elstree.

New Photophone Terms Applied On Down Payments

Exhibitor Gets Additional Time For Completion Of First Installment

RCA Photophone has revised the terms of contracts with exhibitors for the installation of sound reproducing equipment. There has been no reduction in the cost of the equipment installations but the conditions of the payments have been modified a trifle for the benefit of the exhibitor.

Originally the exhibitor was compelled to make a 25 per cent down payment on whatever equipment was ordered installed. This down payment was made with the signing of the contract. Under the new terms the theatre owner is given a little more time to make his down payment.

On the signing of the new contract the theatre owner now makes a payment of 10 per cent, with the additional 15 per cent payable at the time installatiou is actually started in the theatre. There is usually a delay of some months between the signing of the contract and the starting of installation. The theatre owner now gets the benefit of that time intervening to complete the down payment. The change became effective February 20.

Rathbone, Elliott Nugent Signed For M-G-M Talkie

Basil Rathbone and Elliott Nugent, prominent on the Broadway stage, have been signed by M-G-M for work in talking pictures. Rathbone's stage successes have included "The Captive," "The Czarina," "The Swan" and "The Command to Love." Nugent is both an actor and author.

Dallas Survey Not Favorable To Sound Films

Majority of 700 Voters Against Various Forms Of Talking Pictures

The Dallas News, Dallas Journal and the Greater Palace Theatre, in Dallas, Texas, have concluded a lengthy survey to determine the relative popularity of the different forms of sound pictures and silent films. There were approximately 700 votes cast and the majority of these showed no favoritism for any form of sound pictures. There were ten questions put up to the voters but nine none of them asked directly if they preferred silent to sound pictures. The trend of the answers, however, would indicate that the silent features were preferred.

Here are the questions and the way they were answered:

1. Do you prefer all-talking motion pictures? Yes, 203. No, 505.
2. Do you prefer pictures that are part-talkie and part-silent? Yes, 239. No, 544.
3. Do you prefer silent pictures with synchronized music scores? Yes, 251. No, 446.
4. Do you like sound effects, such as shots, knocks, etc.? Yes, 334. No, 364.
5. Do you like stage stars of experience in talking pictures? Yes, 343. No, 358.
6. Do you prefer good-looking actors regardless of talking ability? Yes, 283. No, 399.
7. Do you like talking motion pictures made from stage hits? Yes, 266. No, 434.
8. Do you like the short all-talking comedy skits? Yes, 268. No, 408.
9. Do you prefer synchronized music to the theatre's orchestra? Yes, 205. No, 509.

Ann Arbor Soon Will Have Two Houses Equipped

Ann Arbor theatregoers will soon be spared the trip to Detroit to have their sound pictures. Two houses are to have installations completed within the next two months. The first talkie show in an Ann Arbor theatre will be on March 24, when the Wuerth, a downtown 777-seat house will present a Vitaphone feature.

The Michigan, largest house in the city with 2200 seats, will be ready for talkie features not later than April 10. Meantime, University of Michigan electrical engineers plan presenting this week at the university an industrial talking film by means of portable equipment.

Phil Goldstone Making Talkies With A. Weiss

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Phil Goldstone, associated with Alfred Weiss of Agfa Film Corporation in the production of talking pictures, is planning to make future talkers on the coast. Goldstone will equip a sound stage at one of the independent rental studios with the Biophone reproducing apparatus for recording by that method.

Franklin Is Writing History of Sound

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 28.—The history of sound and talking pictures will be given in detail in a new book on motion picture theatre operation now being written by Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres.

On the subject of sound pictures for entertainment, Franklin will trace the history of experiments and development for the past fifty years. The large electric companys are cooperating with Mr. Franklin in his research work.

Big Objections To Recording Out-Doors Overcome

biggest objection to the universal use of disc recording; the fact that the method was not adaptable for the shooting of exterior scenes on location. The Warner system of remote control allows them to go anywhere for exterior locations, their only problem is the setting up of connections to the nearest telephone wire.

From now on, both Warner and First National will utilize the portable sound trucks for the shooting of exterior scenes in the sound and dialogue versions of their productions, and it is understood that three more portable sound trucks will be provided for the two studios to meet the production schedules of next year.

Gottesman In Favor of Sound On Disc System

Alfred E. Gottesman, operator of a chain of New England theatres equipped with Vitaphone, expresses himself as decidedly in favor of the disc system of sound reproducing. He says the disc has the more even tone and the better quality.

In discussing the general sound situation, Mr. Gottesman says the RCA system seems to be the clearest of the sound-on-film devices, but that there is also considerable outside noise on that. He gives it as his opinion that while the sound-on-film system appears to be the easier to handle, the sound-on-disc is both more serviceable and gives generally better tone of reproduction.

Filming 4 Talkie Shorts At the Astoria Studio

Eddie Cantor in "The Ziegfeld Midnight Frolics," James Barton in "Moonshine," Donald Ogden Stewart in "Humorous Flights," and Fred Allen in "The Installment Collector," all short talking picture sketches are now in production at the Long Island studio of Paramount.

Metropolitan Is Now Recording Outdoor Scenes

First All-Talking Sequences Made For Sono-Art's "Rainbow Man"

Metropolitan Sound Studios have broadened their activities to include the making of talking pictures on outside locations. One of the first of the large exterior all-talking sequences to be made is for Sono-Art's production of "The Rainbow Man," starring Eddie Dowling, in which a minstrel show parade through the streets of a small town is being filmed with the minstrel band and all of the natural noises of the streets and the talking of the crowds.

Other exterior sequences being made are in many varied locations, with dialogue running all through them, for the latest of the Octavus Roy Cohen stories which Christie is filming for Paramount, and future production plans call for a large amount of exterior work on all of the Christie Talking Plays as well as in the productions of other companies which are making their talking pictures at the Metropolitan Sound Studios.

Metropolitan's portable equipment records on film by the use of the latest type of outfit which is the first to be constructed at the Hawthorne plant of Western Electric. It is mounted on a large Reo Speedwagon, and includes batteries, film recorder very similar to the ones which are used in the regular studio recording rooms, seven microphones, and sufficient cables and connections to enable the producers to record scenes extending over a very large area.

New Invention Protects Gears Inventors Claim

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Feb. 28.—Qualitone Corporation engineers have invented the "Qualitone Drive," a specially assembled driveshaft that is said to insure against stripping gears or damaging projector head when talking pictures are run on projection equipment. Qualitone Corporation manufactures the Qualitone apparatus for sound recording and reproduction.

Scoredisc Service Ready To Start On Production

Scoredisc Service Corporation, which provides non-synchronous music service to sound reproduction appliances, has started active production at its factory in New York City. Each feature picture released after August 1st, 1928, will be Scoredisc-treated, it is announced by the company. It is figured that distribution of Scoredisc will be started late in March, when a full score for each feature picture released will be ready for the market.

Extras Feel Effect Of Talkies

Tendency Towards Small Sets Cause Employment Drop

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 28.—Film extras are feeling the effects of the current talker production wave in Hollywood. Figures on average daily placements through the Central Casting Office shows that only 637 extras worked each day during the month of January of this year; as against 1,047 in January, 1927; and 756 in January, 1928.

With talking and sound pictures becoming the major portion of coast production, the tendency will be to reduce the number of extras required for each picture. In making the talkers, producers find it much safer to get away as much as possible from big and lavish sets.

But the redeeming feature for the extras that are able to obtain employment in the talkers is the fact that an engagement in a dialogue picture runs for a greater number of days than a similar engagement in a silent production. This is occasioned by the fact that the producer is able to clear up the extras required for silent sequences much quicker than is possible when the sound is recorded. The sound picture schedule makes it imperative that the extras be in scenes in their natural sequences in the picture, which sometimes means that the extras are carried for a number of days.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

IT takes only one wise-crack to establish a man permanently in Hollywood as a brilliant wit . . . Arthur Caesar rolled enough off at the last Wampas meeting to immortalize himself . . . not the least of which was the remark that "for centuries and centuries the Bible has been an established success and it took a motion picture to make a flop out of it." . . . Eddie Leonard tore down a bigger hit with his songs than any singer in Wampas history has. . .

THAT reminds me . . . Universal is supposed to be planning to co-star Harry Jolson with Eddie Leonard and also use John Boles and possibly Laura La Plante . . . I'm wondering if film people who sign vaudeville names have any knowledge of what they are doing . . . and if the guy who is thinking of teaming Harry Jolson and Eddie Leonard ever saw a vaudeville show . . . there is only one Eddie Leonard and probably no vaudeville actor in history has been so loved by audiences as the "Prince of Minstrels" . . . the other fellow possesses most of his talent in his name . . . unless a miracle has happened in the last six years . . .

SPEAKING of vaudevillians in pictures . . . there's a woman now being starred by a company who wanted her to look ten years younger . . . they sent the make-up artist to do the wark . . . and he was successful in removing ten years . . . and when they saw the finished job they said . . . "Take off twenty years more" . . .

THE chap using the by-line "Gordon Trent" in a trade-paper may be interested to know that almost a dozen of the original "Gordon Trents" are in Hollywood and associated with pictures . . . the very first was George Terwilliger who used the name before he came to The Morning Telegraph . . . and brought it with him . . . George is now a p.a. in Hollywood . . . the other "Gordon Trents" in the colony are Joe Farnham at M-G-M . . . Fritz Tidden with Clarence Brown . . . Weed Dickinson now scenarizing at Fox . . . Adam Hull Shirk until recently with Columbia . . . and at any party can be found any number of former Telegraphites . . . who used to "Gordon Trent" . . .

JEANNETTE LOFF, of Pathe, refused to give a cigarette testimonial because . . . she said, "I never go into anything blindfolded" . . . Edmund Breese has stopped playing judges to become a city editor in "Headlines" . . . incidentally Vivien Oakland returns from vaudeville to pictures in the same fillum. . . . William Beaudine is finishing "Two Weeks Off" . . . when he gets through I hope he looks over the way his men in his auto laundry work . . . they never touched the inside of my Bouncing Bessie . . . Estelle Taylor has left these parts to join Jack Dempsey in New York. . . . Lina Basquette will play a return date at Loew's State, Los Angeles soon . . . Camilla Horn now speaks English better than the average American girl in Hollywood . . . Tay Garnett is oiling up the yacht . . . heigh-ho and avast! for Catalina, orange juice and halitosis! . . . Wilbur Mack, ex-vaudeviller, is spending time between Warner Brothers studio and Lakeside golluf . . . Mack will be in "The Argyle Case." . . .

CARL LAEMMLE, JR., and Bob Welsh are eating together in public places to prove that they are still in charge of Universal . . . Robert Fraser gets his first talkie role in "Careers" supporting Billie Dove. . . . how they overlooked such a voice and personality up to now is to be added to Hollywood's mysteries . . . the Bachelor's Table of Montmartre is preparing for the return of Ned Sparks from New York . . . where Ned has been working in "Nothing But The Truth" . . . Tom Mix ran out on a party in his honor by leaving town before schedule . . . he didn't know about the plans for the party . . . Victor McLaglen is going to get plenty of hot fan notes when the women see him in the Scotch outfit he wears in "The Khyber Rifles.". . .

THERE'S a report that Baclanova has been taking her good notices on her work very much to heart and told a newspaper representative recently that "No American paper can afford to be without Baclanova's name" . . . so it's come to this now . . . a few bigger people than Baclanova can ever be, have made the same remark and apologized shortly after when they found that ignoring people is one of the easiest things for newspapers to do. . .

THE studio clean-outs at Universal and Fox recently are the main topics of conversation in Hollywood at present . . . . in some cases all agree good judgment was used . . . particularly with the "yes-men" at the "U" . . . but if it is true that Harry Zahner was included then poor judgment was used in his case . . . the big shock was Ben Jackson at Fox . . . one cannot believe that Bill Fox doesn't intend to keep Ben on in some more important position . . . if he doesn't then there is truly no reward for loyalty and good service in pictures . . . I've known Ben Jackson ever since he managed Fox' Audubon Theatre in New York and a more capable man the Fox organization has never had . . . this goes despite the fact that it has been difficult to get into Ben Jackson's office for the past two years. . . .

Typographical Error Thrills Stock Buyers

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27.—Los Angeles and Hollywood stock market dabblers got the thrill of a lifetime in picking up the Los Angeles Examiner recently to discover that Radio Keith, which had closed at 37½ the night before, jumped to 73¼ before the market opened the next morning. Many rushd to telephones in order to sell immediately. They discovered that it was merely a typographical error.

Sidney Clair Tipped Off By Coast Clerk

WHEN Sidney Clair, well known song writer who was brought to the coast by Fox, filled out the employment card required of all new employees on the lot, giving his name, address, phone number, etc., the girl behind the desk asked, "What do you do?"

Clair replied, "I write song lyrics."

The girl then asked, "Couldn't you write the words too?"

Opinions on Pictures

Mysterious Island

Looks Like a Big One

(Pre-Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

"MYSTERIOUS ISLAND" has all the elements necessary to tag it as a big production, and it is difficult to see why it will not go over as a box office success.

The picture is a distinct departure from anything that has been done for several years; presenting a highly interesting dramatic story into which is woven an undersea spectacle.

Photographed entirely in Technicolor, the production has a richness that would not be possible on regular film stock. The results attained from the color process are the best I have seen so far.

M-G-M had plenty of trouble before "Mysterious Island" was finally finished. The picture was originally started about three years ago, with Ben Christensen directing. After completion of a four reel prologue, the company abandoned production, deciding that the story was impractical for the screen. Last year, Lucien Hubbard took the picture off the shelf to see what he could do with it.

Hubbard wrote an entirely new story, and started production. The finished picture does not contain more than a few hundred feet of the four reel prologue photographed for the first version.

The story, laid in period of 1850, concerns a nobleman who devotes his life and fortune to probing the mysteries of the ocean depths. He owns a large island off the coast, and is supervising the building of diving boats to help him in his scientific investigations.

A nobleman friend evinces interest in the invention, and tries to gain the support of the scientist to use his underwater boats to conquer the world. The scientist turns down the proposal, with the baron then seizing the island. From there on, the dramatic action takes the principal characters of the story in two diving boats to the bottom of the ocean, where they find themselves in a strange underwater kingdom.

When the scientist finally gets back to his island, he realizes that his diving boat invention would be used for evil in the world, and he destroys his plant, boats and plans.

An excellent cast portrays the important parts, including Lionel Barrymore, Lloyd Hughes, Jane Daly, Mantagu Love, Harry Gribbon, Snitz Edwards, Gibson Gowland, and Dolores Brinkman.

Drawing Power: In rough preview form, with temporary titles, the picture looks like a run attraction in key cities. It has plenty of exploitation possibilities for the general run of theatres, and is entertaining to all.

It is entirely likely that M-G-M will hold "Mysterious Island" for a New York opening early next fall; with general theatre release depending entirely upon how long the production goes on Broadway.

Film play and direction is credited to Lucien Hubbard, who is entitled to take the bows for salvaging a shelved picture, and making a good job of it. Percy Hilburn was cinematographer, and produced excellent results on the screen, besides having a number of beautiful shots that are outstanding in cinematography.

Port of Dreams

Needs a New Harbor

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

WHEN producers, writers and directors rush out of a theatre in which their picture has been previewed without holding a long "autopsy" and without carrying on a lengthy lobby conference, you can rest assured that they are none too enthused over the picture. And they rushed from the Golden Gate, where "Port of Dreams" was shown in Los Angeles last week.

This was originally called "Salvage" and was by no means a bad story. It was supposedly to concern a young boy in prison for a crime his father committed. He is paroled and one of the parole rules, (according to the picture), is that he cannot marry or enter business on his own for the duration of his prison term from which he has been paroled. He falls in love with a girl, she with him, and faces the alternative of waiting eight years before he can marry her, or marry her and return to prison for eight years.

Regardless of whether the actual promise is true or not, it is the makings of a good story. But in "The Port of Dreams" it has been poorly told. It drags wearily until the last reel which is very good. It has been synchronized musically and with dialogue, poor judgment being used in both instances. Talkies have reached the point where they must be fish or fowl. The picture that runs along silently, suddenly bursts into speech and then lapses into silence is now an illegitimate child. Audiences don't care for them and the pictures can't be good. "Port of Dreams" would be vastly improved were it silent all the way through. An instance of poor judgment is talk in sequences which don't require them, and then playing a courtroom scene, most effective for talk, in silent form

Mary Philbin is starred. This Philbin girl has been developing a new personality in the past year.

Fred Mackaye, a youngster pulled out of the extra ranks to play his first lead, does very well and proves worthy of more big assignments. It is Otis Harlan, who walks off with the picture.

The House of Horrors

Any Theatre Will Be With This

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

FIRST NATIONAL'S latest "meller-drama," "The House of Horrors," is correctly named. If it isn't classified as a horror by audiences, it will be admittedly rated a bore.

Mack Sennett is going to have several fond memories when he sees this feature length slapstick melange. Besides having three of his graduates gather for a home-coming reunion, he will see many of his cobweb-covered gags of ten years ago stalk forth without even refurbishing.

Everything is there in "The House of Horrors" except the custard pie. Maybe that will be inserted in the sound version. In any case, it will neither add nor detract from the present story; because there is none.

Chester Conklin and Louise Fazenda, who were classmates a number of years ago at Sennetts, play the main roles. Perhaps the previous experiences of First National officials with this pair teamed made them believe that Conklin and Fazenda would put over any picture, regardless of story material. Thelma Todd, more recently at Sennett's, is seen as the slick little siren—who after all turns out to be only a newspaper reporter.

First National will install sound and dialogue in this picture. Maybe that will be the shot-in-the-arm it needs. However, in its silent form, the film seemed to need a drastic major operation.

The picture consists largely of wind blowing, doors opening and closing, and books falling off shelves. Even the sequences where Louise Fazenda runs around madly and merrily garbed in 1876 model lingerie fail to cheer the audience.

The main action of the story centers entirely in an antique shop, this providing plenty of gagging opportunity that is not fully utilized. In fact, the opening sequences with Conklin doing some table-tipping and enjoying a spiritualistic seance of his own, gives a promise which is not fulfilled later on.

Drawing Power: Will only be accepted where audiences are not particular about the picture story nor the age of the gags and situations presented. Conklin and Fazenda have done some good work in features teamed, and this is your only hope of getting them in. Don't promise anything, for the picture is not up to even program standard.

The Carnation Kid

A Fair Program Talking Feature

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THERE isn't anything very hot about Douglas McLean in "The Carnation Kid," a Paramount talking feature which is the current week's attraction at the Paramount, New York. In fact, McLean has been seen to much better advantage in a great many silent features in the past. As a matter of fact, the story, which is an underworld comedy, is decidedly light and there are some glaring directorial faults in the production which was directed by E. Mason Hopper. From a box office angle there is little to recommend the picture, except that it will get by and get a few laughs.

The theme is the threadbare one of mistaken identity, where Douglas McLean, a harmless portable typewriter salesman traveling out of Chicago, is mistaken for a fearsome gangster and machine-gun manipulator. The action opens on a train bound for a small town which is in the grip of a bootlegging underworld element. The local district attorney is making a fight against the roughnecks, and they in turn have sent to Chicago for a gunman to do a bump-off job. He is on the same train with the typewriter salesman and when the cops come aboard he compels McLean to change clothes with him and makes his escape through a window.

Of course when McLean hits the small town he is mistaken for the real "Carnation Kid" by the gangsters who are awaiting his arival and they install him in a suite at the most expensive hotel. When he starts talking about his compact noiseless machines the gangsters think he means machine guns and they order twenty-five shipped immediately by air. There has been a little romance started on the train by a flirtation and it is continued in the town for the girl is the daughter of the battling District Attorney, and when Doug saves her father from being shot during the big political rally she is ready to fall right into his arms.

The best talking performance in the picture is contribnted by William B. Davidson, while McLean personally fails to come through as he should, and the two women are simply awful. They are Frances Lee, who is playing the ingenue lead, who, when she talks, fails to register for the camera what she is slipping the mike, and Lorraine Eddy, who does the heavy blonde vamp stuff, while good to look at won't get any starring contracts as long as the talkies continue. Maurice Black and Carl Stockdale in minor parts do very well, indeed. They are both gangsters and Stockdale registers very well as to voice.

Drawing Power: Will please moderately any type of an audience. There are laugh moments that will get over, but in the main your only chance is to play it as a series of laughable mishaps in the underworld.

"Now And Then"

(A Paramount Musical-Talking) Novelty)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THE difference in a whoopee party of 50 years ago and today form the basis of this short that Joseph Santley wrote and directed for Paramount. It opens with a cocktail party of today in progress with the usual jazzy music and stepping. Grandmother walks in on the scene and the youngsters tell her that they are willing to bet that in her younger days she never had as good a time as they are getting out of life. To this she replies that she recalls some very pleasant parties that her mother gave, and one in particular at which she sang "Shoofly," at which she goes into the song; as she finishes there is a fade-in to the scene in the drawing room of a home of fifty years ago where an afternoon musicale is in progress. Here the comedy is handled perfectly, with a walrus moustached gentleman carrying the burden of it by his repeated visits to the punch bowl between the various musical bits.

Ruth Etting

(Paramount Singing Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is another of the Ruth Etting song series of Paramount shorts. In this she delivers two numbers, each of a different type. The first is "My Mother's Eyes" and this is followed by "That's Him Now." In both instances she sells the number to the audience and gets over a hand. Eight minutes.

Hearts In Dixie

Hot Jiggity Jig Jigs

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

POOR Ol' Uncle Tom, they done gone dug him up again. And all to little purpose, after the first novelty wears off. While the novelty lasts, the picture will get a little money, but when the first flash is over they can wrap this one up cone-shaped. There will be a place for the picture in the little "arty" theatres and the highbrows will say it's "a great film," but that isn't what the rank and file of fans, that make the picture theatres the country over, will say. To them it'll be just a lot of jigs jigging.

In the first place the exhibitor wants to get this in his mind. This is a picture played entirely by a colored cast, with the better known folk songs of the slave days as a musical background. It is a picture that evidently has for its theme the stirring up of sympathy for the poor, down-trodden colored youth of the south who finds it impossible to get an education south of the Mason-Dixon Line and has to come north to absorb his knowledge. That is a condition no longer existing and the day of the Uncle Tom type of negro has long since passed.

At the same time let it be noted that the negro voice in general, especially when taken en-masse as is the case here, does not reprodnce clearly. Whether this be the fault of the recording or the reproduction is a question, but the chances are that the fault lies in the recording. To catch the dialogue as spoken by the majority of the players in this talking film requires constant attention, and then one can only get enough to get the sense of what is being said.

The story, which was provided by Walter Weems in collaboration with Paul Sloane and A. H. Van Buren, both of whom had a hand in the direction, is simplicity itself. It concerns an old negro, who works in the cotton fields despite his great age, whose daughter is married to a shiftless young darkey constantly suffering from the "misery" and who sits sunning himself all day long while the woman does all of the house work and manual labor as well about the cabin and farm. There is a young son and daughter, both of whom adore their "Pappy," as the grandfather is called. The mother and daughter are taken ill and both of them die because they have clung to the colored traditions and called in the voodoo doctor, and after this the old "Pappy" decides that the young boy will be shipped North to be educated as a physician. He sells his farm and mule to get enough money to do this, and although it breaks his heart to see the youngster go, he sends him away to be educated so that he may return and contribute to the advancement of his race.

All this is graphically told in dialogue and direction. The cotton fields with the negroes happily engaged in picking cotton, singing at their tasks. The night time revels, with spirituals, folk melodies, dancing, laughing, fighting, love making, etc., are all prettily pictured. A negro wedding, during which the single hint of a modern melody is permitted to creep in, in shown with the feast that follows, and here the widowed father of the youngster about whom the story hinges, wins himself another wife, although his former one is dead but a month. This developes into one of the biggest comedy scenes of the picture.

Stepin Fetchit, a negro dancer, who enacts the shiftless boy, is featured over the cast, but it is really Clarence Muse, who plays "Pappy," that wins the sympathy of the audience. although the majority of his scenes are overdrawn and overplayed. Little Eugene Jackson as the young boy does very well, indeed, and was the least camera conscious of all the players.

Drawing Power: It will undoubtedly draw the entire negro element that there is in the vicinity of any house where it is played. That is one angle that the exhibitor must guard against. Yet it is the only angle that he has to attract people to the picture, the fact that it is played by a wholly negro cast, and is the first one of the feature length sound pictures with negro players.

Produced and distributed by the Fox Films Corp. Length: approximately 6,650 feet. To be released: Mar. 10. A Movietone production. Running time: an hour and ten minutes. Story by Walter Weems. Directed by Paul Sloane, stage direction by A. H. Van Buren.

"Bobby Folsom"

(Vitaphone Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

BOBBY FOLSOM is a standard single in vaudeville. She isn't exactly a headliner but has been featured on a lot of bills. This is her first singing and talking picture and it seemed at the opening as though she was frightened of the "mike," but she manages to get over her little Puritan maid characterization in great shape. The opening number is "Priscilla of the Puritan Days," in which this romance of Miles Standish and the wooing of Priscilla in his behalf by John Alden is set forth in charming manner and very aptly handled by Miss Folsom. Then with a quick change of costume in view of the audience the little artiste becomes "A Modern Priscilla," one of the Broadway soubret type that has married an 85-year old sugar daddy. A drunken bit here by Miss Folsum is highly amusing and gets any number of laughs. The running time is eight minutes.

William Beaudine, the director, instructs his two daughters: Helen (right) and Margaret in movie technique, Dorothy Mackail and Jack Mulhall making an appreciative audience. The two young Beaudines are making their debut in "Two Weeks Off," a new Mulhall-Mackaill First National-Vitaphone vehicle which Mr. Beaudine directed.

The Iron Mask

Doug Talks A Little In Loveless Film

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is the first time in years that the public in New York has got a chance to leap right up to the box office and get a load of Doug Fairbanks in a new picture at popular prices. Heretofore for years agone Doug has always managed to feed it to the waiting public at two bucks a smack before he let them get a peek for six bits or less. Just to show Doug that Broadway appreciates this they are kicking in with enough of the six bits to smack the Rivoli house record in a Dobbs topper.

Of course, Doug and his boys may have had their own idea in giving "The Iron Mask" direct to the picture house public without the benefit of a legit run in advance. If so they were wise, 'cause there ain't no two bucks worth on tap in this one. But in the picture houses it should wow 'em and probably will.

"The Iron Mask" is a sequel to "The Three Musketeers," and it is loaded with a lot of the swashbuckling stuff that made Dumas and Stanley Weyman the best selling writers of their day. The story for "The Iron Mask" was worked out by Elton Thomas, who frankly states via the program that it is based on "The Three Musketeers," "The Iron Mask" and the Memoirs of D'Artagnan, Richelieu and De Rochefort. Well, with a background like that he should have done a pretty good job. But he seemingly got so mixed up in his sword play that he killed off his heroine early in the story, or maybe he got around to the stage where he thought that the flaps wouldn't believe that the lovely Constance, as played by Marguerite de la Motte, wouldn't fall for as old a guy as Doug as D'Artagnan, and figured the only way out was to have her bumped off.

Even without any great love interest there are enough thrills in the picturization to make it well worth while for anyone to sit through the picture. It is advertised that Doug talks. He does, too, but only a little bit as a sort of a prologue introduction and epilogue finish to the picture itself. Of course, that doesn't make this picture a talker in the accepted sense.

At the start of the story we have Athos, Porthos, Aramis and D'Artagnan in the service of Louis XIII, but Richelieu orders them to disband under pain of death, so the four go their various ways, D'Artagnan with the Cardinal, for the latter has expressed the wish that he enter his service. This comes after the heroine has met her death as a result of an order that Richelieu has issued to the effect that she be confined in a convent and not permitted to communicate with anyone, because she was one of the two people present when twin heirs were born to the throne of France. At his death years later the Cardinal admonishes D'Artagnan to look after the young King and see that no harm befalls him at the hand of "the other one."

It is when De Rochefort completes his plot to place the missing twin on the throne that the original Musketeers are again brought together to rescue the King from his imprisonment and return him to his rightful place. All four give their lives in this cause.

Doug looks best as the greying D'Artagnan, although in the earlier scenes he is as athletic and acrobatic as ever, and his sword play is still as stirring as it was in the old days. Dorothy Revier as the Lady De Winter shows that she has a lot of what they are showing the most of before the cameras in Hollywood these days, otherwise we prefer the Lady De Winter of the first "Musketeer" film, but alas she has gone.

Drawing Power: It's Doug Fairbanks in a sequel to "The Three Musketeers" and that's 'nuf said for anybody.

Wolf Song

A Program Talker That Will Please

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

JUST a little program talker that will please the fans because it has any number of love scenes in it. But it isn't a picture that they will go out raving about, and it certainly is far from being $2 material for a Broadway house. If Paramount guessed that it was because Lupe Velez sings a couple of songs, they guessed wrong.

"Wolf Song" is a story of the old west, in the days when the old Spanish and Mexican aristocrats held sway in the land. Lupe Velez and Gary Cooper are teamed up as the young lovers of the story. Lupe, as the daughter of a haughty landed overlord, and Gary as a young Kentuckian who has come west to win his fortune. Gary is shown as running out on a shot-gun wedding back in Kentucky when the girl and her father are seen in the distance approaching the slovenly cabin in which he is living. Next he is shown as one of a trio of trappers who have been in the mountains for two years and are making their first visit to civilization in that time. The boys are after strong likker and weak wimmen, and that is where the beautiful daughter of a haughty Don falls for a dirty unkempt trapper. Of course, if you can believe that you can believe the rest of the story.

The girl elopes with the trapper as he starts back into the mountains, and after they have been married and lived for some months at a garrisoned post halfway between her home and the Canadian country he decides that the call of the wild is too strong for him to resist and he starts out to rejoin his rough boy friends. But once on his way the nights become lonely and he decides that the call of the wild is too much after all and he turns back toward home again, only to be shot at and wounded by an Indian and forced to drag himself to the fort to find that his wife has been taken back home by her father.

Then, without stopping, he undertakes to follow her and arrives at her home and collapses in the front hall. The girl's father is standing there pistol in hand but doesn't shoot and the fade out comes with Lupe picking her wounded husband up in her arms.

Lupe Velez indulges in a flock of respiratory acrobatics whenever she has a love scene with Gary. Lupe's voice is pleasing enough but she is difficult to understand. Gary is far from being a lady killer in his make-up in this offering and it is difficult to visualize this picture adding to his lists of conquests among the fair fans. Louis Wolheim gives the best performance of the entire cast.

Drawing Power: Should be about 80 per cent of what a good talker should pull. Lupe and Gary Cooper may get the younger flapper element and they will like the love stuff.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length: Sound version, 7,021 feet; silent 6,060 feet. Running time: an hour and thirteen minutes. Released: Jan. 25, 1929. Directed by Victor Fleming.

The Spieler

Interesting With Talk Sequences

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"THE SPIELER," like "The Barker," deals with the carnival racket. It was made by Pathe and has as its principal players Alan Hale and Renee Adoree, and they both talk, with the surprise being uncovered by Miss Adoree when her French accent sounds like an Irish brogue. There is a lot of good sound stuff in addition to the short talking sequences and in all the picture is all around good entertainment. It must have been pretty good for Roxy to have picked it for his big house. There is one thing about it and that is that it shows enough of the inside of the grifting with a carnival to make picture audiences want to stay away from that form of amusement and that is an angle that the exhibitors shouldn't overlook.

In addition to the two featured players, there is a mighty good cast with Fred Kohler doing the heavy lead, Clyde Cook as a high-wire walker, Fred Warren and Jimmie Quinn as a couple of grifters and Bob Perry shooting his pan in front of the recording box every so often.

The manner in which the picture is directed is worthy of note. It is one of the first efforts of Tay Garnett on his own, and if this is a sample of what he is going to do then he is on his way to sit among the top-notchers among the megaphone wielders. He has touches of genius in any number of his shots.

The opening of the story shows Alan Hale and Clyde Cook in jail because they have been caught grifting on one of the lots. As soon as they finish their bit they join out with the Cleo Show, which is run by a woman who is trying to keep her show free from graft and fires anyone that she has the slightest suspicion about. Flash and Luke (Hale and Cook) decide that this will be a perfect haven for them for the cops will never think of looking for them with a straight show. They manage to get jobs and discover an old friend in Red Moon (Kohler) who is an out and out grifter. Moon doesn't stop short of murder to achieve his ends and he does engineer a couple of bump-offs during the telling of the story. In the end, after a romance has been worked up between Cleo, the diving girl-show owner and Flash, the latter is the cause of the passing on of Moon in a free-for-all among the racketeers.

Drawing Power: The fact that this is the first chance that audiences will have to hear the heroine of "The Big Parade" should account for something at the box office. You need not be afraid to recommend this one and all classes should see it. If you play it in the carnival season it might be a smart thing to show it the week before one of those shows hits your town to wise up your public of the grift and gimmicks that are used in crooked carnivals.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Length: Sound, 5,606 feet; Silent, 5,806 feet. Running time: one hour. Sound by RCA Photophone. Released: Dec. 30, 1928. Story by Hal Conklin, directed by Tay Garnett.

"Friendship"

(Dramatic Thriller in Talk—2 Reels)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

FROM a production and direction standpoint this is the very best of the dramatic talking pictures that has been turned out by the Fox Movietone organization. It is a dramatic thriller that is played in two scenes without resorting to any motion picture hocus-pocus, title, inserted scene or otherwise to denote the lapse of time. The public is really credited for the first time with having sufficient sense to figure something out for themselves.

Eugene Walter, the playwright, is both author and director of "Friendship" and he has turned out a highly creditable piece of work, both in the dialog, situation and picture. The story in brief is that of a young actor who had led a wild life from which he was rescued by four friends, a manager and three actors. They are responsible for his reformation and later success in the theatre. He has called them together to a little dinner at which he imparts the fact that he is to be married. But when he informs them who the lady is they at first stand aghast and then reluctantly express their congratulations. At this point when he is called to the phone they plot to save him and the result is that the manager insists that he go abroad to London to appear for two weeks in a play that is about to open, and the boy consents to go without taking the lady to whom he is engaged on the trip.

Then the scene changes to the evening of his return from abroad. Again the same four friends are present and as he is again called to the phone, by the lady, they ask him to hear what they have to say before he talks to them. They then disclose that she is unworthy of him and that in his absence she has been unfaithful to him with his three actor friends. He takes the blow standing up and then raves at the mockery of what they have done in the name of friendship, for he married the woman the day that he sailed.

A real kick, a real wallop and played to the 'nth degree by a real cast with Donald Gallaher doing splendid work as the young actor, sharing honors with Robert Edeson as the manager and Edward Earle likewise contributing a good performance. Joseph Striker, Carl Miller and Paul Fung are also in the cast.

"If Men Played Cards As Women Do"

Paramount Short Talker)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a comedy which was the work of George S. Kaufman and served in one of the Broadway revues. It has a lot of laughs and is cleverly played by Frederick Santley, Huge Cameron and George MacFarland in the principal roles. It is the night of a poker party and the boys gather, each, in woman fashion on entering contributing a bit of scandal regarding some of their mutual friends, and all of them discussing each other behind their backs. This is well worked out with the audiences getting the full benefits of the under-cover stuff. Laughs come along fast and some linger, even though picture only runs eight minutes.

"Old Tunes For New"

(Dr. Sigmund Spaeth Fox Movietone)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is an old vaudeville gag that has been revamped by Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, a music critic of note and a writer on musical topics for the New York daily papers, and presented via the Movietone method. Dr. Spaeth goes a little further than the usual vaudeville composer pianist was wont to do, for he openly accuses Irving Berlin, Con Conrad and others of stealing their tunes. He sits at the piano and plays the original operatic or classical melodies and then shows how they found their way into the popular ditties of the day.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

By Charles E. Lewis

A "Sound Opinion" From A Member Down In Southland

W. H. Hall manager of the Columbia Theatre, in Baton Rouge, La., is a manager who realizes the great asset which his membership in the CLUB means to him. He has written a letter to me and his views on sound are sufficiently interesting to warrant printing a portion of his letter here. See what you think of it?—

"If you will be kind enough to permit me to say a few words regarding the exploitation of sound pictures which I consider the most important angle connected with this new kind of show business, that is truthful advertising, in laying out your newspaper ads and lobby copy tell your patrons exactly what kind of a picture you are presenting. If it has musically synchronized sound effects use the word sound in prominence omitting the slogan "Hear What You See" as this is very misleading to your patrons. Bear in mind that they are not as familiar with ads that carry double meanings as you are. It is well to say on this kind of a picture presented without talking, trying to sell sound as though it had talking is the surest way for your patrons to lose interest in this type of entertainment.

"If a picture has talking parts but not 100 per cent, state about how much of the picture really talks, then on the 100 per cent talking picture state that every character in the picture talks, by doing this you have appealing variety to all classes. Remember that not all the theatregoing public have accepted talking pictures and while they have shown favorable interest in them. It would be the wrong time to use any catchy line in your ads that would mislead them. You have a very delicate subject and to get the best results should be handled in such a manner. Truthful advertising is your greatest asset in talking pictures. It has been in the past that a bad picture well advertised will do business, but today with a new kind of entertainment it is bad business to try and fool your patrons you are depending on for daily support. Especially when we are trying to educate a percentage of patrons that dislike sound pictures."

There is a lot of good common sense in that paragraph and we do not hesitate to pass it on to our other members and readers. Truth in advertising is absolutely important and essential at this time more than ever.

We are keenly interested in hearing from Mr. Hall again in the very near future, and I believe lots of the other members feel the same way.

The Pulmotor Was A Success On Brother Goldquist Of Illinois

From Savanna, Ill., we once more get word from Frank C. Goldquist, manager of the Web Theatre in that city. We had to "jar" him up, as he says, but the effort was certainly worth while because it brought an immediate response.

We were particularly impressed with one part of his letter which mentioned the fact that a manager must understand the town and the patrons he is appealing to when laying out a campaign. To use his own word—"I have pulled stunts in Peoria and Danville I would have been arrested for in Savanna." Of course Frank did not exactly mean they were that serious. The point he wanted to convey was that the stunts which were successful in one place could not have been used elsewhere without some slight alterations. And in this respect we quite agree with him. Any good exploitation stunt can be fitted and modeled to fit any other town, but the basic principle still holds good wherever it is used. What was that old expression we used on the Club pages last summer? "Fit the picture to the stunt or the stunt to the picture." Makes no difference how you say it because it all amounts to the same thing in the long run. More about Goldquist in a later issue. His stuff is always worth reading. Thanks, Frank.

Meet The Youngest Manager On The Chakeres Circuit

Let me make you acquainted with Lee J. Euering, the youthful manager of the Majestic Theatre in Springfield, Ohio. Lee is one of those "go-getting managers" with more than sufficient pep to overcome the years of experience that he might possibly lack. He is known as the youngest theatre manager in the middle west. Euering runs a Vitaphone and Movietone house and unless his reputation has been exaggerated, then we can certainly look forward to seeing some mighty fine exploitation ideas on "sound" pictures.

Lee stands aces high with his employers and they show their sincere faith in his ability by backing him up one hundred per cent. Lee should more than make good with such factors in his favor. We have also learned from a very reliable source that his staff of ushers have been marvelously trained by Lee personally.

Selling All Houses In Town On A Full Page Advertisment

The P. J. Schlossman Co., of Muskegon, Mich., makes no secret of the fact that they practically control the theatres of that city. In fact, they are so proud of it that they used the full page ad which we are reproducing on this page. And you will admit that the entire "layout" is certainly both impressive and dignified. It represents the modern method of advertising which is sweeping the country. Advertising is the life of this business and it is a pleasure to talk about good ads. Just read this ad, over carefully boys and see if it don't appeal to you. As a matter of fact, the same idea brought down to a size within the bounds of your pocketbook would go a long ways towards stimulating interest in your theatre or theatres and it could be branded as darned good stuff, too.

A happy thought would be for a group of theatre managers or owners in a city or town to get together and do the same thing, sharing the expense between them. If you create interest in your theatres then the good is felt throughout the town, it does not necessarily follow that any one particular theatre should do any advertising on so large or elaborate a scale.

We would like to hear more about this fine group and the managers on that circuit, if we can call it that.

Moore Sells The "Trail" With Live Atmospheric Front

Marsline K. Moore, manager of the Publix Worth Theatre, in Fort Worth, Texas, is one of those managers who believe in atmospheric front displays for pictures that lend themselves to that particular type of exploitation. We have found it to be effective in certain cities and when properly handled can be made dignified as well. The accompanying photograph shows a night view of the Worth Theatre front during the showing of "Trail of '98" and we cannot deny that it looks mighty fine.

We would like to hear from Mr. Moore often as we suspect that he puts over many things of interest to the CLUB members. Are we right, Moore?

Recent Visitors To Club Headquarters In New York City

We were delighted to welcome many visitors during the past week to the CLUB offices in New York, among whom were R. J. Ryan of Long Island; Sydney Oshrin of the Bronx; R. W. Webb of the Union Theatres in Australia was another interesting visitor and to judge from his description, Australia is certainly coming to the front in new and beautiful theatres. Conditions there are also improving and "sound" has been installed in five theatres in Sydney.

If you are in New York, make it a point to stop in and say "hello." We are always glad to have a "chummy" chat with either CLUB members or readers of the NEWS.

Modern and Beacon Sells "Ghost Talks" In Boston Tie-Up

R. B. Ripley, publicity director for the Netoco up in New England, conceived and put over a fine picture and newspaper tie-up on "The Ghost Talks." This picture was scheduled to play the twin Netoco houses, Modern & Beacon, and through the arrangement Mr. Ripley made, the Boston Traveler announced a "Ghost Story Contest." The idea being that all readers of the Traveler were urged to send in short stories of their own spook experiences and for the best story submitted each day, there would be a first prize of $10 and a second prize of $5.00 plus a pair of passes to see the picture. There were also passes for the next ten good stories.

The tie-up was arranged so that it would run for the two weeks that the picture was being shown at the two theatres.

Now we all know that at some time in our lives we have had some sort of a "spook" experience, in fact I can think of several good ones myself, but I don't dare talk about them ??? If you can take this idea and put it over in your town when you run this picture then you have a corking good "stunt" all thought up by someone who has had a chance to try it out first. That—to a certain extent—removes a lot of the risk that we ordinarily run in trying out these stunts, but it's worth working, if you can sell your newspaper the idea. Paste this one up where you will find it when you are laying out your campaign on "The Ghost Talks."

Marpole Deserves Credit For Great Vitaphone Tie-Up

J. D. Marpole, manager of the Tokay Theatre in Lodi, Clifornia, should certainly be voted a choice place in the Manager's Hall of Fame for the excellent manner in which he launched his "sound" policy entertainment in the Tokay Theatre. I have before me a copy of the Lodi Sentinal, the leading newspaper of his town, and he certainly "sold" them one hundred per cent on the tie-up because we find some great reading matter pertaining to "talkie" pictures in this newspaper. On the page devoted to the "sound" stories we find a header right across the top roading "TOKAY THEATRE FIRST TO PRESENT TALKING PICTURES IN LODI." Then a story is featured dealing with "Talkie Picture History Full Of Interest." This article gives the history of the talking pictures from three years back and covered all phases of it. Mr. Marpole's picture occupies a prominent spot and credits him with bringing the "talkies" to Lodi. Another fine story, "Tokay Theatre Makes History in This City" adds, still more, to the interest of the layout. Another story dealing with George Jessel in "Lucky Boy" (the opening attraction) builds up still more interest in the inauguration of this new entertainment. Another story headed: "The Voice Of The Movie And What It Means," is an address by John E. Otterson, President of the Electrical Research Products.

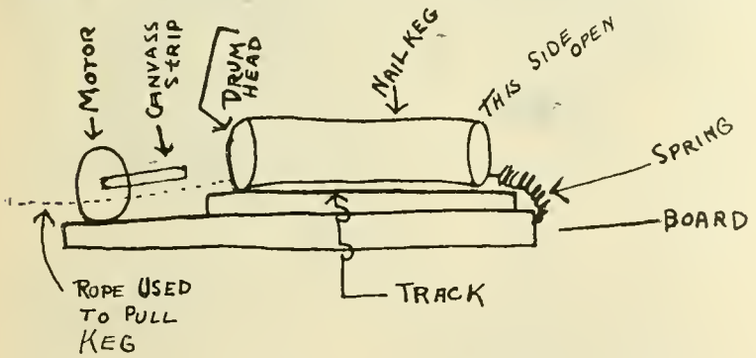
Then the crowning spot of the entire issue is a two page spread right in the center of the paper, with a wonderful merchants tie-up. And every ad in this spread is a boost for the Tokay Theatre and the new policy. We wish we could spare the space to reproduce it; it is a corker.



The editorial page adds still another feather in Marpole's cap, for it is a wonderful tribute to the theatre and talkies combined.

Our sincerest congratulations to you, Mr. Marpole; you have put over one of the finest pieces of work that was ever brought to our attention. We know you will make your mark in this business because this business needs such men with the stuff that you are made of. More power and success to you and we are delighted to know that you are one of the oldest members of the MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB. We are proud of you.

Manager, Mechanic, Inventor, and What Not, All By Oshrin

In enumerating the various accomplishments necessary to be a good manager, we certainly overlooked a few which Sydney Oshrin, manager of the Allerton Theatre in the Bronx, N. Y., called our attention to.

In this era of "sound," noise or anything else you might feel like calling it, he decided to build some of the effects himself, so we picture here his first "rough" layout for an aeroplane effect machine. While it might look intricate at the first glance, a closer inspection will show how inexpensive and simple the contraption really is. The description itself merely says—"A nail keg with a drum head on one end was placed on tracks, motor with a single piece of canvas was used to beat against the drum head. The keg was moved back hand forth to make the effects as desired." A piece of leather on the end of the canvas gave a machine gun effect. Now, we ask you, what could be more simple? It does prove that necessity (plus sound pictures) is the Mother of Invention. But it did take Sydney about 10 days to perfect it.

Newark Ohio Comes To The Front With Ed. Heihle's Notes

Capitalizing on another local angle is just one of the many ways that Manager Ed. Heihle keeps his new Midland Theatre in the public eye at all times. The latest episode in this direction came with the distribution of some 2,000 copies of a very popular song written by a local song-writer. The entire back page of the music sheet was used by Heihle to advertise the theatre and it represented a fine piece of well worded copy. He has promised us pictures of the new Midland Theatre and I, for one, am very anxious to see them as the theatre was under construction when I stopped off in Newark, Ohio, last summer. Maybe we will find room to show them in the NEWS. We will decide when we see them. So shoot them along Ed.

Pacent Device Gains Favor in North Ohio

THAT the Pacent Reproducer device is gaining favor in Northern Ohio is emphasized by a report from Cleveland to the effect that the installations of the apparatus that have been closed in the past two weeks include the Bexley Theatre, Dover; Temple, Bryan; Liberty, Wellsville; Royal, Findley; and the Regent and LaSalle, Cleveland. In addition, a local circuit has been reported in negotiation for about seven installations.

Jimmy Carrier is in town as general manager of the local Universal theatres, consisting of the Hilliard Square, Cedar-Lee, Oriental, Detroit, and New Broadway.

Movie-Phone, a synchronous sound device made by Movie-Phone Corporation of Chicago and handled locally by Edward Casanave, has been sold for the Miles Royal Theatre, Akron, Harkness Theatre, Clyde; Southland, Columbus, and the Castamba, at Shelby. Casanave now has J. A. Furrer, L. B. Solether and C. A. MacDonald on his sales force.

Paul Kemmerly and Fred Casson have resigned from the local Loew organization. Kemmerly was manager of the Stillman, and Casson was in the publicity department.

William A. Haynes, who resigned last week as assistant general manager of the Loew theatres in Cleveland, plans to leave for the coast.

The Princess Theatre, lower Euclid avenue, has turned to a first-run policy.

Hi-Mark, which had a temporary exchange here several months ago, has re-opened under the management of Oswald Brothers in 401 Film Building.

Ernest H. Hunt, organist at the State Theatre, who has won renown locally for his original organ novelties, is suffering from neuritis, and has gone south to recover.

William James, president of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, has dusted off his golf clubs and has gone to Florida for a few weeks.

W. F. McGinnis has changed the policy at the Tivoli Theatre, Lorain, and is now playing vaudeville and pictures instead of musical comedy and tab shows.

Week's Regional News From Portland, Ore.

THE Hollywood Theatre, Salem, Ore., suffered a $10,000 fire during last week, from undetermined cause.

Robert Marsden, Jr., and Denny Hull, operating the Coos Bay Amusement Co., are equipping their Egyptian Theatre at Marshfield, Ore., with the Western Electric equipment with scheduled opening on March 6th.

Visitors to the Portland row during the week included D. J. McNerney and Dave Bershon, of the United Artists.

James Frank McBride, of Hollywood, has been chosen supervisor of the Oregon campus movie which will be produced at the University of Oregon at Eugene.

William Musil has purchased the Star Theatre at Richland, Ore., from O. M. Gardner.

Fred Normand, for a number of years a familiar figure on film row and recently manager of the Music Box Theatre, has become representative for Photophone in the territory north of California line.

H. J. Updegraff, of the Roseway Theatre, Portland, reported a projection room fire, destroying two reels of film.

Sound Houses Boost Montreal Silents

THE Strand Theatre, Montreal, Quebec, has dropped its policy of four program changes each week and has reverted to the schedule of new programs on Tuesdays and Fridays. The Strand continues to have a silent screen and it is situated in the immediate vicinity of the Capitol and Palace Theatres, which are wired. Great crowds of theatre-goers flock to this section of the city and the Strand gets a goodly share of them, particularly when the big houses are packed. In fact, synchronized programs at the rival houses have made business very good at the "silent" theatre, it is declared.

A race for sound equipment at Windsor, Ontario, resulted in the introduction of synchronized programs at two local houses on practically the same date. The Capitol Theatre, Windsor, recently purchased by Famous Players Canadian Corp., opened February 20th with a Western Electric installation. The Palace Theatre, of which H. C. Merritt is the proprietor, also opened with the Harmony sound equipment installed by a Detroit company of which Thomas McGuire is president and George B. Cash is engineer. The Palace is the first theatre in Canada to have the Harmony device.

The third theatre in Ottawa, Ontario, to be wired is the Avalon, which was erected and opened last December by P. J. Nolan. The Avalon was credited with being the first house in the Dominion to be actually constructed for sound picture presentations. The equipment is Western Electric.

It is very seldom that a feature of any kind is held over at the Pantages Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., at any time but this was done for the week of February 18 with the screen attraction "Submarine." The remainder of the program, including the vaudeville bill, was changed in its entirety.

The first show each evening at the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, does not start until 7:30 o'clock, the second performance starting at 9:30. To encourage the crowds to come early so that the house can be refilled for the second show, Manager H. E. Wilton conducts a snappy radio program from the stage from 7:00 to 7:30 o'clock. This is done with the help of a large receiving set, through which appropriate concerts are given to the early patrons. Mr. Wilton says the radio concert has the desired effect.

W. A. Summerville, proprietor of the Prince of Wales and the Gerard Theatres, Toronto, has made another bid for a place on the Civic Board of Control for which he was unseated early in January because of a technicality. Mr. Summerville, who has served the city for eight years as an alderman, has again been nominated as a candidate in the special election to complete the Board.

Severe Weather Takes Whack At Seattle Biz

A HEAVY snowfall and the longest uninterrupted stretch of severely cold weather that Seattle has experienced in twenty-two years has put a decided crimp in show business in the entire Northwest territory for the last two weeks. Only the "super de luxe" shows have been able to draw anything like normal patronage. With a slight rainfall now apparent, however, it is predicted that this week will see the end of "winter."

Waldo Ives, progressive young exhibitor of Anactortes and Mount Vernon, this month completed installation of sound equipment in his Empire Theatre in the former city and Lincoln Theatre in the latter. A. A. Haley's new houses in each of these towns will bring Ives his first competition in many seasons.

Announcement from Tiffany-Stahl recently to the effect that Oscar Hanson had been appointed general sales manager of the company brought smiles to many film men of his territory when they thought how "another home town boy made good." It seems that Hanson began his career in the film industry as a shipping clerk on Seattle's film row, fifteen years ago, and also served for several seasons as a booker.

Two popular members of film row suffered unhappy bereavements in their families recently. George Ballentine, Fox manager, and Charles W. Harden, former United Artists chief, each lost their mother. Mr. Ballentine was unable to leave this city for his mother's funeral because of the severe illness of Mrs. Ballentine.

Rolla Duncan, well known exhibitor of Olympia, closed his Avalon Theatre in that city last week and has gone to Billings, Montana, where it is reported that he will assume a political position. Guil Homan of Seattle has been negotiating for the lease of the Avalon, and will undoubtedly open the house again within the present month.

Jack Tillman, Columbia's exchange manager in Portland, spent a few days in Seattle, talking business with A. J. Sullivan, head of the local Columbia office.

John Danz's key house, the Colonial, last week began its showing of sound films, following the installation of Vitaphone and Movietone apparatus. At 25c this house plays the big features direct from the leading suburban showings at 35c, together with a wide range of sound shorts and talking newsreel.

Another Vitaphone-Movietone installation completed last week was that in Jensen-Von Herberg's Bagdad Theatre, suburban house directed by Leroy V. Johnson.

DeLuxe Theatres, Inc., last week reported that amateur cracksmen one night during the week attempted to crack open the safe in the office of their Neptune Theatre, but had been unsuccessful and had been frightened away by night watchmen before more strenuous methods were used.

W. K. Bloom, former sales representative for R-K-O in this territory, last week became associated in the same capacity with Manager Ben Fish's local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange. Mr. Fish, incidentally, has been playing host recently to "Sheriff" George Hickey, M-G-M's genial Western division manager, on his regular tour of the Coast exchanges.

The Princess Theatre, Columbus, Miss., comes in the "big league" class with the installation of complete Western Electric sound reproducing system — Vitaphone, Movietone and non-synchronous devices—and extensive remodeling and redecoration.

Mrs. Alma A. Walton, secretary of the Memphis Film Board of Trade, is in New York for a conference.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, passed through Memphis en route to Hot Springs, Ark., last Thursday night.

Morton Van Praag, general sales director of Universal, was in Memphis last Monday, en route back to New York from Hot Springs.

Columbus, Miss., will have a new negro theatre when remodeling of a store building is completed by G. C. Cooper.

R. V. McGinnis is reported to have resigned as manager of the Capitol and Newport Theatres, Newport, Ark., to become field manager for a new company which is to take over operation of the theatres at Marked Tree, Pocahontas, and Walnut Ridge, Ark., formerly operated by the Tri-State Theatres Corporation.

T. J. Simmons, formerly manager at Gurdon, another former Tri-State house, will take McGinnis' place, it is reported.

J. O. Denman, former attache of the Strand, Memphis, has become assistant manager at Loew's State. He succeeds Robert E. Fowler, who became manager of Loew's Strand when Harold Evans left to become manager of Loew's Richmond, Va.

H. B. Travis, formerly ad manager with the Memphis Paramount branch, is writing publicity for the Loew Memphis theatres.

Savannah, Tenn., has a new house, the Churchwell, which opened Friday, February 22. E. K. Churchwell is owner. The house seats approximately 200.

The Pacent Electric Company has opened branch office in Memphis at 502 South Second Street, with J. N. Talley in charge.

Theatres reported closed during the last week include: Colonial, Swifton, Ark.; Electric, Decatur, Ark.; Electric, Mulberry, Ark.;

Stanley's Met, Philly Closes Temporarily

THE Stanley Company's Met, a 4,000-seat house at Broad & Poplar Streets, which was opened only 5 months ago, has closed its doors and will remain dark for the present at least. The Met was leased by the Stanley Company and the Stiefels for a term of 5 years at an annual rental of $30,000. Several smaller houses in the vicinity of the Met which were compelled to close their doors after its opening may now have an opportunity to reopen.

The policy of the Stanley Company's Orpheum Theatre, Germantown, Philadelphia, has been changed from vaudeville and picture to a straight picture policy. For the present at least the Orpheum will be run on an all-sound policy, opening with "Interference," and as its opposition, the Germantown is not wired, it will probably suffer as a result.

The concert given by the Stanley Music Club in the Stanley Theatre on Sunday evening, February 24th, was featured by an excellent interpretation of the "Pathetique" symphony of Tschaikowsky by a group of 100 members of the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Arthur Rodzinski.

The Forum Theatre, Frankford, Philadelphia, was the scene of a real wedding ceremony last week, when Jesse W. Fletcher and Miss Flora Nagle were married on the stage of the theatre. At the close of the ceremony the young couple received many varied and useful gifts contributed by business men of the neighborhood.

Petition Blue Repeal At Orlando, Fla.

JOHN B. CARROLL, former general manager of the five Consolidated Amusements houses in Tampa, and who was promoted a few months ago to district manager of the eight Publix houses in Tampa, Lakeland and St. Petersburg, received another promotion this week. He is now supervisor of all the Publix theatres in South Florida. The new position places him at the head of 17 theatres with headquarters at Miami.

Charles K. Ellis, who will be remembered in Tampa through his connection with the S. B. T. Properties, in the boom days, dropped in on us again last week.

A petition was presented to the city council of Orlando this week requesting the repeal of the ordinance prohibiting Sunday movies. After throwing out several hundred names it was found there was still sufficient to require action. Mayor Giles said he did not think the council would repeal the ordinance so an election would be necessary.

E. George Wood, formerly on the West Coast for Publix, has been assigned to production work in Jacksonville and Miami.

Fred Lee, who has been in charge of advertising for the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, for a year, has been promoted to assistant manager of this house, according to announcement.

Jesse L. Clark, district supervisor for Publix, with headquarters in Jacksonville, returned last Thursday from Miami, accompanied by C. B. Stiff, personal representative of L. E. Schneider, Southeastern division supervisor of theatre management.

Henry D. Behr, of New York, of the Publix electrical department, arrived Thursday in Jacksonville to make a survey of the electrical situation in Florida theatres.

Grand, At Louisville Closing For Repairs

THE Grand Theatre, Louisville, is closing during March for repairs.

S. L. Martin, Columbia Amusement Company, Ashland, Ky., who has been sick for the past month, is now improving.

Vitaphone and Movietone were initially presented at the opening of the new "sound policy" at the Princess Theatre, Mayfield, Ky., Monday night, February 18.

The Community Theatre, Bradfordsville, Ky., was destroyed by fire recently.

The Kentucky Theatre, Louisville, has raised its price of admission to 25 cents since the installation of sound equipment.

Hollywood—Continued

Wray Returns

John Griffith Wray has returned to motion pictures following a voluntary retirement of a year's duration. His first directorial effort will be "Diversion" for First National. It will be a Vitaphone adaptation of the John Van Drutan play.

Directors Switched

Sidney Franklin will direct Norma Shearer in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" for M-G-M. Robert Z. Leonard was slated to make the picture, but has been switched to Marion Davies' next picture instead. This will be Franklin's first talking picture.

Vaudeville Author

Andy Rice, vaudeville author who was brought here by Fox, has been signed under a long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He will do original comedies, dialogue for features and skits for musical screen revues.

"Coquette" In Work

Mary Pickford began work on the silent version of "Coquette" recently. Sam Taylor, who made the talkie version, will also direct the synchronized production.

Saunders Leaves P F-L

Paramount has not taken option on contract of John Monk Saunders, scenario writer, and he has left the company. Saunders was under contract for about three years, and last worked on "Docks of New York."

With First National

Ralph Lewis, Lucien Littlefield, and Carroll Nye have been signed by First National for "The Girl in the Glass Cage" which Ralph Dawson will direct.

Willat Signs

Irvin Willat has been signed to direct at First National. There is a strong possibility of he and his wife, Billie Dove, being combined for a picture. This, however, will not take place until Miss Dove has completed "Two Careers."

Pathe Players

Ethlyn Claire and Lew Ayres are two young players who have signed with Pathe.

New Clark And McCullough

Norman Taurog began direction of "The Medicine Man" starring Clark and McCullough this week. This is the third of a series of Movietone shorts with the famous team which Taurog has directed. Others in the east are Sylvia Field, Gavin Gordon, Symona Boniface, Fred Graham and Clifford Dempsey.

Pathe Originals

Norman L. Sper and George R. Rogan have been placed under a long term contract to do originals for Pathe. Their first two, "Smiley" and "Who Killed Anna Keane?" were written in collaboration with Jimmy Gleason and have been accepted by Pathe.

12 Two Reelers

John Reinhardt, former actor who branched out as an independent producer and director with "Satanesque," has completed a deal with Inspiration Pictures and the Halperin Brothers whereby he will make a series of 12 two reelers. They will be comedies and dramas bearing the Inspiration-Halperin name. Release arrangements are being made through Tiffany-Stahl.

Abbott—Moran And Mack

Moran and Mack, the Two Black Crows, will be directed in their first Paramount talker featured by George Abbott, former stage director. Abbott recently directed several short sketches for Paramount in the Long Island studios. Production is scheduled to start early in March.

With Clara Bow

In the cast of "The Wild Party," new Clara Bow Film, is Marceline Day.

Xavier Cugat

Xavier Cugat, Spanish violinist and caricaturist, has been engaged by Pathe to write the theme song, arrange the musical score and design the costumes and settings for a new talking film with a Spanish background.

'Goes Free Lance

Charles Kenyon, Fox scenarist, is leaving the studio at the expiration of his present contract. He intends to free-lance.

Paramount Signs Skelley

Hal Skelley, who played the lead in the New York stage production of "Burlesque" has been signed by Paramount to play the same role in the talkfilm version which gets under way the middle of March.

Working For Fox

Ray McCarey, formerly with Hal Roach, is now working for Fox as a comedy constructor.

Alice Joyce In "Squall"

Alice Joyce plays the mother in "The Squall," the picturization of the stage play by First National.

"Listen Baby"

The first Pathe picture to be supervised by William Counselman under his new contract was "Listen Baby."

In Chevalier Film

One of the principal players in Maurice Chevalier's first screen vehicle for Paramount is George Fawcett.

"Behind Closed Doors"

Virginia Valli and Gaston Glass are co-featured in the Columbia production, "Behind Closed Doors," mystery drama.

"B'way" Cast

Otis Harlan is in the cast of Universal's special, "Broadway."

SCENE: Office of a leading first run exhibitor. Enter Mr. Exhibitor, beaming and chuckling. He has just witnessed a trade showing of Douglas MacLean's talking comedy-thriller, "The Carnation Kid." Mr. E. has the picture booked and he's tickled to death. He lights up a Corona-Corona and summons his secretary:

"Take a letter to Doug MacLean"

"Dear Doug: I just saw your talking picture, 'The Carnation Kid' and it's sure a knockout from every conceivable box-office angle. It's by far your best since 'The Hottentot' and it sweeps you right up in the front rank of the talking stars. The way 'The Carnation Kid' mixes the thrills with the laughs and the talk with the music is great. The story speeds along like a breeze. Every voice in the picture is A-1. Frances Lee is the cutest little trick I've seen in some time. And the scene where that big, beautiful blonde, Lorraine Eddy, tries to vamp you because she likes her men rough will start any audience roaring. Congratulations, Doug. A bow to Al Christie for giving you such a swell show. And another to Al Cohn for writing the story. What a break for you boys and Paramount! And for us smart fellows who have these great Paramount talking pictures coming week after week."

A Paramount Picture

A TIP ON SHORTS

PARAMOUNT has captured the sound short feature business. No question about that. This company's entrance into the field has turned sound shorts from a headache to a box office joy. Real quality and popular appeal of the subjects has done it. The difference between Paramount's class one- and two-reelers and the rest of the product in the field is a matter of comment throughout the trade. Exhibitors by the thousands have been quick to appreciate Paramount quality in the whole show in sound.

"Paramount has three short subjects now running at the Criterion, N. Y., that far surpass any sound shorts yet made. They are 'TWO LITTLE CHINESE MAIDS', 'HIGHLOWBROW' and 'THE FALSE ALARM FIRE COMPANY'. The three of them will relieve any exhibitor of a lot of worry, for after seeing them he will be in a position to say to himself—'if a company can make them so good in such a variety as I have seen, I need not have any worry where I am going to get the short reels I want in sound.' "

—Exhibitors Daily Review

CHRISTIE TALKING PLAYS—"The Christies seem to have beaten all other producers to the screen with their talking comedies of colored life."

—Motion Picture News

"THE CARNIVAL MAN"—"This two reel talking act, with Walter Huston, is a knockout."

—Earl Hall Payne, Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Ky.

PARAMOUNT SONG CARTOONS—" 'Sidewalks of New York' is the cleverest novelty in sound we have ever seen. Howard Theatre audiences applauded. It is recommended for every theatre, regardless of size."

—Weekly Film Review (Atlanta)

"THE MELANCHOLY DAME"—"This talking comedy, taken from Octavus Roy Cohen's Saturday Evening Post story, is great. Let's have more of them." (Temple Theatre, Toledo, O.). "A riot of stomach laughs" (Los Angeles Herald). "A pride for the Christies" (Exhibitors Herald). "Sprightly dialogue tells a bright story in excellent voicing. Christie seems to be 'in' " (Zit's). "The good news on 'Melancholy Dame' has spread like wildfire and any number of exhibitors have called up for a booking." (R. B. Wilbanks, Branch Manager, Charlotte, N. C.)

Proven Box Office Merit!

35 PARAMOUNT SOUND ACTS Produced with the same class as Paramount sound features. One- and two-reels. Talking, singing, dancing. With such stars as Eddie Cantor, Ruth Etting, Eddie Peabody, Walter Huston, Borrah Minnevitch and others.

13 CHRISTIE TALKING PLAYS Including the famous Octavus Roy Cohen Saturday Evening Post stories. First one, "The Melancholy Dame", now cleaning up everywhere like an ace feature picture. Other talkers featuring famous stars.

5 FAMOUS COMPOSERS MUSICAL GEMS Produced by James Fitzpatrick. Already a favorite with first-run theatres. Twice as good in sound.

6 SONG CARTOONS Presented by Alfred Weiss. Sparkling musical novelties that get the audience singing.

EDDIE CANTOR—"'That Party in Person', Paramount talking short, ran 16 weeks on Broadway to continuous applause." Criterion, Rialto, Paramount Theatres, Hippodrome.

"JUST ONE WORD"—"Interesting and amusing for its novelty." —Billboard

"THE MELANCHOLY DAME"—"You can't go wrong with this one. Christies have set a tough pace for themselves. If the others live up to this standard, the whole group is worth buying."
—Motion Picture News

"We are booking Paramount Sound Shorts as fast as they are received by the exchange. Already played Eddie Cantor, Ruth Etting. Playing 'Just One Word' and Borrah Minneviteh this week. Have booked 'Sidewalks of New York', 'The Melancholy Dame' and 'Two Little Chinese Maids'. This is indication of what leading first run theatres think of them."
—Royal and Newman Theatres, Kansas City

"Paramount Sound Shorts, 'Kisses', 'Melancholy Dame' wonderful. Exceptionally good."
—Jacob Lourie, New England Theatres

"The Octavus Roy Cohen stories being made by the Christies for Paramount release are examples of what is liked best in sound shorts."
—Inside Facts (California)

"IF MEN PLAY CARDS AS WOMEN DO"—"Will amuse the women muchly. Well played."
—Variety

"A BIRD IN THE HAND"—"Made by Christie. Good entertainment with robust giggles. Audience found it very humorous." —Variety

"THE MELANCHOLY DAME"—"A very good and well recorded comedy subject, playable in any house on any bill." —Variety

RUTH ETTING—"Miss Etting has good appearance on the screen and expert disc voice. Her shorts are important. She stands a good chance of becoming a decided favorite in them." —Variety

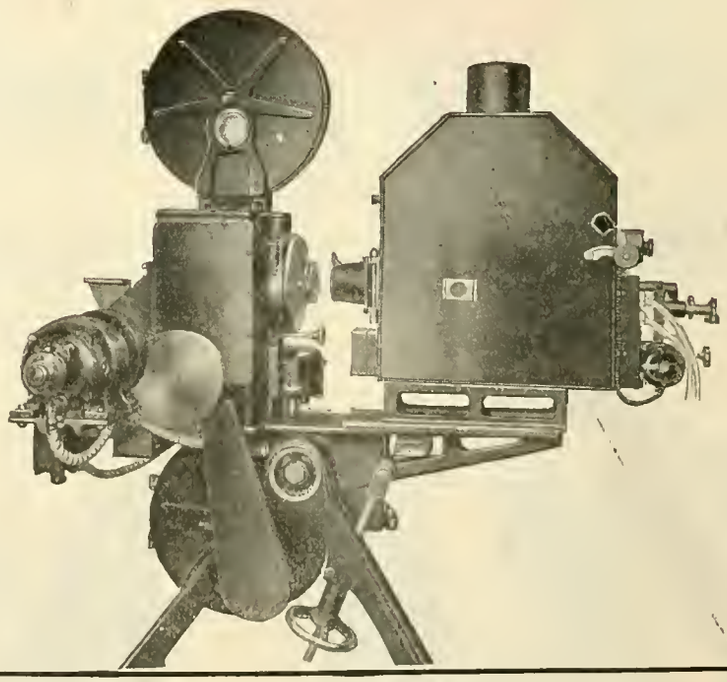
The wheels are humming

WITH the introduction of the RCA Photophone the statement was made that "Superior facilities and superior resources automatically attract superior public support."



Although but ten months have elapsed since the initial announcement of RCA Photophone, the correctness of this statement is attested today by a demand that is taxing the production resources of the world's largest electrical organizations.

In this brief period, the RCA Photophone has become the standard by which the tonal quality and efficiency of sound reproduction are measured. Sound pictures made by the RCA Photophone system of recording are receiving universal public acclaim.

The facilities of the plants of RCA, General Electric Company and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company are constantly being expanded to bridge the gap between date of order and date of installation.

On the present basis, theatre owners may confidently anticipate a calibre of delivery service in keeping with the resources and production scope of these organizations.

And they may confidently look forward also to an equipment that embodies all the advances of today, plus the assurance of such improvements as may develop tomorrow.

GUTS!

—it's an ugly word but it says plenty—

SHOWMEN KNOW what the word means. You've got to have it to stay in show business. To cope with changing times, to hang on to a fickle public, to meet the overhead requires—guts!

IN THE PAST YEAR this industry has witnessed exciting and trying days. Theatres linked up with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product have stood like Rocks of Gibraltar, firm and foremost, secure and safe. Of all companies, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has given a bold and uncompromising challenge to uncertainty by delivering its greatest product during a time of greatest need. M-G-M's unswerving answer to your need, Now and Forever, is Great Pictures enacted by the magnetic stars of popular favor. The past year has cemented more firmly than ever the bond between Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the 15,000 theatres it serves. The past year, too, has been a lesson in theatre insurance to other exhibitors, who now finally recognize that the one safe and dependable source of picture supply is M-G-M. Day by day theatre-owners are switching from previous affiliations to M-G-M, convinced by sheer, outstanding, box-office performance.

LET US list briefly a few M-G-M releases of recent months:

Stop Crying! Go To Work!

The Small Exhibitor and His Present Crisis

By William A. Johnston

STOP crying! It is our belief that the small exhibitor is devoting too much attention to worry over his situation, and not enough to work.

We realize fully that many little exhibitors are meeting very serious, very depressing problems, and, in some cases, insoluble difficulties.

Because we know this to be true—and with an earnest desire to help—Motion Picture News will, within the next few weeks, publish a series of articles showing how small exhibitors with aggressiveness and showmanship ability have overcome "the grief" that is also burdening their fellow-exhibitors in many parts of the country.

"Please give the little theatre a little help."

This appeal is made to us by a theatre owner in the Middle West, who writes a very strong summation of the situation now confronting the smaller houses.

Their plight he lays to the following causes:

Good roads;

The building of community auditoriums and arenas;

Talking pictures in the big nearby theatres.

The situation is serious. No doubt about that. The casualties among the little theatres are growing by leaps and bounds.

And, of course, the Middle West is the chief scene of their demise. Out there, the full effect of the good roads movement is being felt by the exhibitor. If he is within a reasonable distance of a big city, or even a middle sized one, his theatres are virtually reduced to neighborhood status. Instead of being isolated as he once was, he's now practically in a suburb, because paved roads make it so.

The building of public auditoriums, with big seating capacities and affording plenty of space for basket ball games, etc., is proving added competition.

But, of course, the biggest factor of all is sound. The larger theatres are wired. The little houses—most of them—are not; cannot afford the equipment necessary to compete. The result is that their former patrons, keen about talking pictures in particular, drive into the nearby city, and the small exhibitor's gross goes down correspondingly.

No wonder the little exhibitor is trying to figure out where it will all end.

Yet the small exhibitor is in exactly the same status as the small retailer in any line of business. And, while we sympathize deeply with him, we believe nothing will be accomplished by mere moaning on his part.

The cure for a bad situation is to get to work and do something about it. Remember that the whole industry is undergoing a revolution—a change in style, a radical change, which has turned everything more or less topsy turvy.

It's like beginning all over again—in production, distribution, exhibition. Never in film history was there so great an opportunity for enterprise, originality and the fighting spirit.

The small exhibitor, like everybody else, must grasp this fact. If he is in danger of being licked by sound competition, we suggest that he follow the example of D. V. Marquis, of Bartow, Florida. His town was

Mr. Woodhull Tells Us What He Thinks!

March 6, 1929.

Mr. William Johnston,
Motion Picture News,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York, New York.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

By this time you must have received many letters of appreciation and congratulations upon the pages of your weekly issue devoted to the "Motion Picture News Weekly Box-Office Check Up". I have studied each issue carefully and desire to add my sincere congratulations to those already received.

This compilation of box office results should prove of great value to exhibitors. It affords them the opportunity to take into consideration location, weather, prices and attractions used to complete or augment the showings. Your plan of establishing 100% as the normal business figure and then deducting therefrom or adding thereto is a happy and useful method because it eliminates the publication of gross figures which for many years I have considered a dangerous and destructive method. Publishing salaries of stars and box office takings, many of them false, have been used by common enemies to our business in legislative halls and other important places much to the detriment of the welfare of our industry.

It is impossible for me to see all pictures and I assure you that your box office check-up has proved very useful to me in my daily work. Many plans to provide this necessary information to exhibitors have been tried in the past but I consider this present method of yours the best one that has come to my attention to date.

Cordially yours,
R. F. Woodhull
President Motion Picture
Theatre Owners of America

Stop Crying! Go To Work!

closed on Sunday. Adjoining towns were not only open but were sound-equipped. He couldn't swing a sound installation unless he had Sunday opening. And if he didn't have a sound installation, he couldn't stay in business.

Instead of folding up, he went to work and persuaded his town to vote Sunday opening and saved the whole situation for himself. Shortly, his house will be wired.

Another instance of the fighting spirit: the manager of an Atlanta suburban house, W. J. Davis, had his own sound equipment built and installed. Its reproduction qualities are excellent, as we happen to know first hand from one of our staff representatives.

These are two examples of successful initiative that have come to our notice. There are, and will be, others, published in early issues of Motion Picture News.

Of this the little exhibitor may be sure: whatever the problem, it won't solve itself. The greatest help the little theatre can get is the help it gives itself.

Wall St. Predicts Other Mergers As Result Of Fox-Loew-M. G. M. Deal

ZUKOR-BROWN DENIALS

State That There Is Nothing To Rumors Of A Combination That Would Bring About Balance Of Power

WALL STREET financial circles, immediately after the official announcement of the closing of the deal by William Fox for the purchase of "a substantial block" of the common stock of Loew's, Inc., predicted that this placing of the control of the Loew Circuit and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions in the hands of William Fox would bring about another series of mergers so that the balance of power would not remain with the Fox group. Rumors to the effect that Paramount-Publix and the Radio-Keith-Orpheum combine were revived, only to be denied vigorously by both Adolph Zukor and Hiram S. Brown.

The official announcement of the closing of the deal by Fox for Loew-M-G-M was made on Sunday afternoon. As soon as the market opened on Monday morning Wall Street was buzzing with rumors of other deals to come. The first link-up that was predicted was that there would be an understanding between Adolph Zukor, of Paramount-Publix, and Hiram S. Brown, of Radio-Keith-Orpheum theatres and pictures, whereby the operation of the R-K-O theatres would be taken over by Publix for a period of five years and the R-K-O interests would devote themselves to the making of pictures. Later in the day there was another story to the effect that the Warner Bros. and Hiram S. Brown were in negotiation. Both of these reports were denied by Mr. Brown and Harry Warner.

Zukor's Denial

Another rumor, which cropped up on Tuesday was to the effect that R-K-O held an option for the purchase of Paramount. This was denied by Adolph Zukor, who stated that "There is absolutely no foundation to such a report."

In issuing his denial Hiram S. Brown stated that, with Mr. Sarnoff in Europe, there would not be a chance of any kind of a deal being made which would involve the Radio-Keith-Orpheum interests.

The Warner Bros. are interested with R-K-O in several holdings in Philadelphia, and any calls on the part of the Warners or Spyros Skouras, head of the Warner theatres at the R-K-O offices, would be to discuss their joint policy.

Thalberg Leaves Coast On Hurried N. Y. Trip

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—Irving Thalberg left hurriedly for New York, Monday carrying a number of executives and writers as far as Barstow with him for a last-minute conference on pending M-G-M production. It is reported that Thalberg will confer in the east with Louis B. Mayer and Fox over the status of executives and on production plans.

Hoover Liberal In Views Toward Industry Mergers

No Radical Changes Likely In Government Stand On Matter

The Hoover administration is not likely to make any radical changes in the government's attitude toward mergers in industry, according to word from Washington. It is the impression that the present policy of investigating proposed mergers as a routine matter will be continued by the Department of Justice. Hoover is said to favor the plan of halting illegal mergers before they are consummated, rather than wait until the law is violated and then institute expensive litigation.

As Secretary of Commerce, Hoover took the attitude that trade associations should not b esubjected to interference as long as their activities were not in violation of the anti-trust laws. For the last few years the Department of Justice has viewed leniently amalgamations which did not result in the suppressison of competition. This attitude was inaugurated largely because of the views of the present Chief Executive.

Films Stimulate All U. S. Business, Says Milliken

Carl E. Milliken, former Governor of Maine, and now secretary and head of the public relations department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, pointed out in a speech before the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce this week the stimulus that motion pictures gives to all forms of American business.

Mr. Milliken declared the movies "the greatest single agency in putting before our people the comforts and conveniences which modern life afford the man who will develop his earning power."

LOEW BOARD REMAINS

Entire Personnel Re-Elected As Officers; Fox Announces Metropolitan Deal to Be Closed

WILLIAM FOX, in an official announcement made last Sunday at the Roxy Theatre, confirmed the purchase by his organization of the controlling interest in Loew's, Inc., which also owns the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corp. The rumors of the deal were in the air for about a week prior to the official announcement, which was made by Mr. Fox and Arthur Loew, vice-president of Loew's. No intimation was given of the price that Fox paid for the holdings which give him control, but unofficially it was understood to have been at the figure of $120 a share. Arthur Loew stated that the shares held by his mother, his brother and himself were purchased for cash. Fox also secured the holdings of Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., since the death of the founder of the circuit, Marcus Loew. Schenck refused to state whether he had secured cash for his holdings or had taken Fox stock.

On Tuesday of this week at a meeting the directors of Loew's re-elected the identical personnel that has been functioning as officers of the corporation prior to the Fox deal. After this meeting Mr. Schenck issued a statement that he expected to continue as president of the corporation, and that he would maintain the policies that had been in force in the past. Economies would result, particularly in the production division of the business, as a result of the alliance between Fox and Loew, according to his statement. He also stressed the fact that he had informed all of the department heads of the organization that they would continue to function as they had before the Fox transfer was made.

Metropolitan Situation

There is an unrest apparent among the independent exhibitors in the Metropolitan territory on the houses of whom William Fox holds options to purchase. Some of them are of the belief that with the closing of the Loew deal Fox will not exercise these options in toto, but that he will pick and

Midtown In St. Louis Closes In Box-Office Battle

Succumbs Under Plea Of Lack Of High Class Sound Attractions

The first casualty has been reported of the big battle of the box-office of St. Louis, Mo., which started when the new Fox Theatre, Grand and Washington Boulevard, opened on January 31. The Midtown, one of the Skouras-Warner chain of houses, closed after the last performance on Sunday, March 3. The official reason for closing is the lack of sufficient high-class sound pictures to attract the type of patrons that are needed to make it a success.

"Abie's Irish Rose," which a few weeks ago set a new season's record at the Ambassador Theatre, another of the Skouras-Warner group of houses, was set into the Midtown on February 23, with the belief that it could continue its down-town success, but somehow it failed to maintain this pace. The result was the engagement was matured earlier than expected, and the house will be dark for some time.

The Midtown opened about four months ago with "The Singing Fool" as the feature attraction, and the Jolson personality got it away to a big start. It continued the attraction for twelve weeks, exceeding by a fortnight Jolson's previous vehicle, "The Jazz Singer," at the Grand Central the previous year. However, "The Wolf of Wall Street" and "Abie's Irish Rose" failed to click at a Jolson pace.

When the Midtown reopens the feature picture probably will be "The Desert Song," to be followed by "Noah's Ark," a new Jolson picture, and similar attractions. The time for the reopening is somewhat problematical. It will charge a $1 top and will feature long-run productions.

Amusements Net $1,231,050 For Year To Ontario

The Public Accounts report for the Province of Ontario, Canada, read before the Legislature showed a net revenue to the government from amusements of $1,231,050.45 for the past year.

The account showed that Ontario had collected $1,337,148.68 during the year in amusement tax, theatre fees and censorship charges, the revenue secured through amusement tax alone being $1,187,226.98.

Cameramen's Agreement May Be Signed In Near Future

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—William Canavan, international I. A. T. S. E. executive, left here Monday after two weeks on unionization business. Canavan held several discussions with producers representatives over the pending agreement covering the cameramen's union. It is expected the agreement will be signed on Canavan's return to New York.

Caesar Leaves Fox To Do Freelance Work

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 7.—Arthur Caeser, Hollywood's wit, and author of "Napoleon's Barber," "The Diplomats" and others, is leaving Fox, who brought him to the Coast. Caeser intends to free-lance. He denies the allegation that Fox was faced with the alternative of paying his salary for an additional period or buying Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and decided in favor of the latter.

Fox Takes Over Walter Reade— Schine Circuits

choose the houses that he wishes to retain. This trend of thought exists despite the definite statement made by Mr. Fox on Sunday at the time of the announcement of the Loew deal that the negotiations for the 175 theatres in the Metropolitan area would be consummated within a fortnight by the Fox Metropolitan Theatres Corp.

103 Houses In Deal

On Wednesday Fox made another announcement to the effect that deals had been closed for the Walter Reade Enterprises and for the Schine Circuit. The former includes 15 theatres in New York and New Jersey, while the Schine Circuit represents 98 houses in upper New York and Ohio. Part of the latter circuit was the Robbins chain of houses, and the circuit was until recently affiliated with Universal. The Reade houses include two legitimate theatres in New York, the Morosco and the Bijou, and the Astor a former legitimate house now leased to Loew's for motion picture extended runs. The Columbia, the burlesque house on Broadway, is also part of the deal, as are old Savoy on 34th Street and the Metropolis on the upper east side. The New Jersey houses are located in Asbury Park, Long Branch, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy and Trenton.

Total of 600 Houses

The combination of Fox holdings in the theatre field now represents in the neighborhood of 600 theatres. It is composed of the original Fox Circuit in the Metropolitan area, the Poli Circuit in New England, the Loew Circuit extending across the country, the Schine Circuit in New York and Ohio, the Reade houses in New York and New Jersey, the Fox theatres in Philadelphia, Washington and Denver, the West Coast Circuit extending from the Mexican to the Canadian lines on the Pacific Coast, and the MidWesco in Iowa, and the Northwest.

The Fox assets prior to the Loew deal were said to be in the neighborhood of $65,000,000. Those of the Loew Enterprises and M-G-M approximately $108,000,000. This gives Fox combined assets of more than $100,000,000 more than those of his nearest competitor in the theatre owning and picture production field.

Sound Pictures Boost Profits Of W. E. Co.

With Over 1,000 Theatres Equipped, Report Is Best In History

The Western Electric Company's annual report stresses the progress made in the past year through the Bell Telephone Company laboratories and the Electrical Research Products Company in the commercialization of sound motion picture apparatus. As a result, partially of these activities, the company enjoyed the best year in its history. Over a thousand theatres were equipped during the year, and the net profits of the concern were $19,707,880.

"As a by-products of its telephone research work, the Bell Telephone Laboratories developed a system of synchronizing sound with motion pictures, which was first commercially developed and commercially demonstrated in 1926," the report says.

"At the close of 1928, Electrical Research Products had equipped a large number of leading motion picture studios and more than 1,000 theatres with the Western Electric sound system. The company has a large volume of sound equipments on order, and expects to equip upward of 3,000 additional theatres during this year."

The Hawthorne works of the Western Electric, just outside of Chicago, is now the second largest industrial institution in the country, having more than 32,000 employees. The research laboratories are the largest in the industrial world, with more than 4,600 employees.

Last year was the best in the company's history. Sales amounted to $287,931,000, an increase of 13½ per cent over 1927. The volume of business increased 22 per cent, the difference being due to lower prices. Net profits were $19,707,880.

First National Will Make "Great Divide" As Talkie

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—First National will produce "The Great Divide" as an all-talker, all-sound Vitaphone production with Reginald Barker directing. The film rights to the property were acquired by Warners from M-G-M, who produced it about five years ago. "The Great Divide" was originally made in feature length by the Lubin Company, in 1915, and was one of the first features of six reels to be produced by that company.

U. A. Will Star Lupe Velez With Her Next Vehicle

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—Lupe Velez will be elevated to stardom in her next United Artists' vehicle. No title has been selected for the story being written by Jules Furthmann with the Argentine as its locale. Lewis Milestone will direct. Story is to be ready and production started on Velez's return from New York. It is to be all-talkie.

Paramount Leads L. A. Houses With Gross of $39,000

"Weary River" Percentage Of Week Is 160; Big Business Reported

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 7.—The Paramount Theatre with a gross of $39,000 lead all Los Angeles houses last week with a seven-day run of "Weary River." Business was exceptional with a percentage of 160. "Broadway Melody" in its fourth week at Grauman's Chinese was next in line with a gross of $33,500, or a percentage of 225.

"The Bellamy Trial" was another that did splendid business in a seven-day showing at Loew's State. The take for the week was $27,000, which met the average of the house. It was helped by the Laurel-Hardy comedy, "We Faw Down" and a presentation of the Fanchon and Marco Idea.

"In Old Arizona" in its tenth week at the Criterion did $18,500 for a percentage of 135. It was accompanied only by short subjects and Movietone News.

Other grosses for the week were: "Strange Cargo" in its second week at United Artists, $8,200; "Conquest" in its second week at Warners Hollywood, $18,500, and "The Divine Lady" in its fifth week at the Carthay Circle, $11,000.

"Arizona" Gross $200,000 For Ten Weeks Run In L. A.

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 7.—"In Old Arizona" grossed $200,000 in a ten and one-half week run at the Criterion here. The film closed March 7 after having opened on Christmas day. The average gross of $21,000 weekly sets history for the Criterion, which for the past few years has averaged $8,500 a week.

By March 4 the picture grossed actually $192,096, with three days run to go before closing at an average of $3,000 daily. "Abie's Irish Rose" follows it for a run.

How The Heck Will They Tell "Pep And Prep" Apart

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—An unusual procedure, which most likely will be changed, is the announced intention by Fox of making a sequel to "Pep and Prep" under the same title. The first "Pep and Prep" was directed by Dave Butler and he is likely to handle the sequel, with Frank Albertson and Matty Taylor also cast.

Just how Fox plans to overcome exhibitors and fans confusing the second "Pep and Prep" with the first, is the mystery. And also the reason for a new title undoubtedly scheduled for announcement.

Hollywood Trend Rapidly Leaning Toward Talkies; Silents Being Discarded

Publix Purchases Site For New S. F. House

PURCHASE by the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation of a 47½ x 165 site on Market Street, San Francisco, directly east of the St. Francis Theatre, is announced. The purchase was made with the view of possible construction at a later date of a new Publix theatre, to supplant the present St. Francis. The purchase gives the company a total Market street frontage of 185 feet, including the St. Francis. The price was not announced.

Columbia Puts Stock Issue On Curb Exchange

Extensive Expansion Plans Advanced As Reason For Move

The first public issue of stock in Columbia Pictures goes on the New York Curb Exchange on Friday of this week. The issue is for Columbia expansion purposes in the sound and silent fields, according to announcement by Joe Brandt, Harry and Jack Cohn, who retain control of the company.

The common stock, it is stated will be on the market at $31 a share. There will be 25,000 shares of no par preference and 300,000 shares of no par common, of which 100,000 will be outstanding. The issue is being handled by Goddard & Company, Inc.

With the control of the company remaining in the hands of Joe Brandt and Jack and Harry Cohn there will be no change in the policy of the company. Columbia has enjoyed prosperity, but tremendous expansion is anticipated as the result of the public stock issue.

Columbia Pictures have their own exchanges in the United States and Canada and their pictures are being well distributed abroad. Details of the expansion program will be announced shortly.

Paramount Plans Gilbert, Sullivan Operetta Series

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 7.—Paramount is planning production of a series of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. The intention is to make them at the Long Island studios, casting them from legitimate and musical comedy fields. There is no copyright on the film rights, so they are in the public domain.

Recent Indications Are That Majority of Companies Favor Only Features Having Sound

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—This center of motion picture production is rapidly becoming 100 per cent all-talkie. The trend seems to be entirely that way, though some of the leading companies are still standing behind the silent versions as being a necessity. Silent pictures, however, are on the wane.

The most startling of decisions of the past week in favor of the talkies was that of Mary Pickford that there would be no silent version of "Coquette." Miss Pickford and United Artists' studio officials have carefully considered the loss on foreign markets, and the number of possible unwired houses which they would lose by such action. They figured it too small to go to the trouble of making a complete silent version.

In addition to this came RKO's plan to discard all silent pictures and make all their product dialogued. Still further evidence came with the start of actual construction of sound stages in the last studio leasing for independent production. All other independent studios, with the exception of Tec-Art, had been equipped for sound production several months ago. Tec-Arts' sound stages go into construction this week.

Silents from Talkies

What silent pictures will be made by major producers, with the possible exception of Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be cut down from dialogued productions. M-G-M and Fox producers are still given big appropriations for silent features, and they are said to be wavering on this policy. Warners, First National, RKO, Pathe, Paramount and Universal are concentrating on talkers. Even United Artists, which was the most conservative organization in the entrance of talking pictures, has cast aside fears.

The independents are following suit. Tiffany-Stahl is going slowly, as is Columbia. Since they serve a great portion of the unequipped market, they are going more slowly. But with the increase in wired houses they are planning more for sound and less for silent.

Congress Fails To Pass Single Film Measure

Threatened Legislation In Form Of Bills Gets No Consideration

For the first time in several years, Congress has gone through an entire session without paying its respects to the motion picture industry, the session just closed being entirely devoid of film legislation.

Although there were several measures affecting motion pictures pending in the House and Senate, none of them came up for consideration and, March 4 being the end of the Congress as well as the session, all legislation not enacted died and, if it is to be revived, must be reintroduced as new measures at a subsequent session.

The most important legislation which threatened the industry was included in the bills introduced in the Senate by Senator Brookhart of Iowa and in the House by a number of Representatives, which prohibited block and blind booking, provided for compulsory arbitration and otherwise controlled the production and distribution of films. Also in the Senate was a resolution introduced by Senator Walsh of Montana, providing for an investigation of the Department of Justice's activities with respect to motion pictures.

In the House was a bill providing a "blue" Sunday for the District of Columbia. None of these measures was given any consideration during the session, although it had been promised by Senators Walsh and Brookhart that they would press for adoption of their legislation.

On the other hand, no action was taken on the one bill which would possibly have afforded some relief for the industry—that repealing the present prohibition upon the interstate movement of prize fight films. This legislation was proposed by a number of Representatives, but there was not sufficient pressure back of it to get any action.

Warners Offer Globe Theatre In Philly For Sale

The Globe Theatre, a motion picture and vaudeville house at Juniper and Market Sts., Philadelphia, has been offered for sale by Warner Brothers, who acquired the house in taking over the Stanley Company. The property has a frontage of 180 feet on Juniper Street and extends 58 feet along Market Street. It is reported that a 35 story building may replace the Globe.

RKO Reported Likely To Open House In Gloversville

The Schine Brothers in Gloversville, New York, may have some opposition in that village, for according to an authentic report, the Keith interests are endeavoring to locate in the village and last week inquired as to the possibility of securing the use of the state armory there.

1,384 Houses Wired In United States by W. E.

ACCORDING to the latest figures given out, Western Electric Company has wired 1,384 theatres in the United States for sound pictures, as of February 23. During the week previous to that the company wired 46 houses, all of them for both sound-on-film and sound-on-disc reproduction.

United Artists: both versions, "Lummox," Lupe Valez untitled vehicle, Norma Talmadge's untitled vehicle; talkie only, "The Locked Door."

Samuel Goldwyn: both versions, "Bull Dog Drummond."

Tiffany-Stahl, untitled Reginald Barker production, both versions, also "Midway."

New Penn. Bill May Exempt All Sound Censorship

Would End Authority Given State Board Through Court Ruling

A new bill introduced in the State Senate at Harrisburg, Pa., puts a new light on the censorship situation. A few weeks ago the fight against censorship of talking pictures seemed to be lost when the State Supreme Court handed down a decision that the State Board of Censors had the authority to supervise the talkies.

Senator Aron has introduced a proposed amendment to the censorship act of 1915. This, if adopted, would specifically exempt not only talkies but all pictures synchronized with any sort of sound from the jurisdiction of the censors. It also would exempt news reels and reels made for purely local use.

The introduction of the Aron measure is looked upon as a bit of very clever strategy. It is recalled that the State Supreme Court, the highest court in Pennsylvania, in its talkie ruling gave the board the right to pass on sound pictures under the law of 1915, which prescribes the censors' duties, notwithstanding that law, which was adopted before the talkies were invented, makes no specific reference to tallkies. It was the Supreme Court's idea apparently, that the act in principle applied to talkies, though the act nowhere directly mentions them.

That is why the Aron amendment is regarded as a masterstroke if it can be put across. It is argued that if the clause specifically exempting talkies can be put into the censorship law, the Supreme Court ruling no longer will apply, and that if any one thereafter were to contend that the board had authority over talkies it would involve a new court fight, with little chance of success for the champions of censorship.

One Lone Firm Chartered In N. Y. During Past Week

For the first time in many months one lone company was incorporated in New York State last week in connection with the motion picture industry. This company has taken the name of the Franklyn Warner Distributing Corporation, and will act as a distributing agent for motion pictures. The headquarters of the company will be in New York City and the incorporators are: David Bernstein, Isaac Schmal and Harriet G. Levy, all of New York City.

British Gaumont To Make Western Features In Canada

Arthur Lee of the British Gaumont Corporation of Canada, Toronto, has announced that his company is proceeding with the production of at least six Western features in Canada with an English cast, the maximum cost of each being $75,000.

Publix Starts Fifth Managers' Training Class

28 Men Are Enrolled From Over 1,000 Applicants All Over U. S.

Publix launched its fifth class in the Publix Theatre Managers' Training School on March 7th, and it is the largest that has yet enrolled. It numbers twenty-eight men, and these were selected from over one thousand applicants. Selection was made after personal interviews.

From the four previous classes of the school, seventy-four men are now engaged in theatre operation in different sections of the country and abroad. This represents over 90 per cent of the graduates of the school.

Jack Barry, who organized the Managers' School in 1925, and has been its director since that time, will continue in charge, with Henri Schwartzberg appointed as his assistant.

The men enrolled for the Fifth Class are the following:

Ralph H. Ayer, East Lynn, Mass.; Herbert C. Brown, Charlotte, N. C.; Charles E. Carden, Birmingham, Ala.; William H. Collier, Jacksonville, Fla.; L. O. Daniel, Jr., Dallas, Texas; Harry L. Forsted, Gardner, Mass.; John B. Goodwin, Minneapolis, Minn.; Eugene F. Goss, Boston, Mass.; S. Sidney Holland, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Stanley S. Joseloff, E. Norwalk, Conn.; Frank V. Kenneheck, Omaha, Neb.; Nyman Kessler, Chelsea, Mass.; Charles M. Keyser, Chicago, Ill.; Irwin A. Lesser, Paris, France; Ferdinand Lobkowicz, Vienna, Austria; James W. Marshall, Miami, Fla.; Albert E. Miller, Washington, D. C.; Bruce Powell, New York City; Clark C. Rader, Columbus, Ohio;; Harold J. Shepard, New York City; Frank E. Shipley, Des Moines, Iowa; Walter B. Shuttee, Kansas City, Mo.; Sam J. Swirnberg, Minneapolis, Minn.; Kingston T. Tan, Swatow, China; Richard Watson, Ann Arbor, Mich.; Paul S. White, New York City; Jerome Zigmond, Denver, Colo., and Josef Zimanitch, Russia.

British Players Coming Here For Talking Scenes

A company of English players appearing in "Kitty" is coming to America to complete important dialogue sequences in a production made on the other side. These principals, directed by Victor Saville, will make the trip within the next few weeks as the English sound stages will not be ready until late in May, and "Kitty" is soon to be released here by World Wide Pictures.

The picture, byWarwick Deeping, author of "Sorrel and Son," was produced at Henley, England's fashionable boating center.

Eight California Houses Contract For Qualitone

Eight Southern California Theatres contracted for Qualitone sound projection devices during the past week, according to Samuel Freedman, president of the corporation. Among the houses signed were the Meralta Theatre, Largo Theatre, Maywood Egyptian, Circle Theatre and the Marcal. All are within Los Angeles city limits.

Last Week's Rain And Snow Hit Broadway Houses A Blow; Only New Ones Over Average

Fairbanks' "Iron Mask" Breaks Rivoli Record With $56,300; "Wolf Song" and "Dixie" Both Draw

THE Broadway film houses suffered a blow last week as a result of rain and snow storms. The box offices all along the line reflected the inclement weather and the percentages based on the actual box office figures in dollars and cents showed that all except four theatres were below the average business at those theatres based on last year's receipts. Of the four that went over the average, three held pictures that were new arrivals on the street. One of them, Douglas Fairbanks' "The Iron Mask," in for an extended run with eight shows a day, smashed the house record at the Rivoli by getting $56,300 on the week, which is about $7,000 better than the former record held by Harold Lloyd in "Speedy."

The other two were "The Wolf Song" with Lupe Valez at the Embassy, which did $9,384, and Fox' "Hearts in Dixie," at the Gaiety, which in four days drew $6,827. The latter having with it a strong daily advertising campaign which is costing a lot of money. The fourth attraction to go over the average is "The Broadway Melody," which for its third week managed to draw $23,198.25, giving the picture $73,615.75 on the run to date.

Roxy Gross Off

Not a single other house approached its average. The biggest of the lot, the Roxy, with "The Spieler" as an attraction, finished the week with $88,045.25, it being the first time that the house has dropped below the $100,000 mark in nine weeks. Based on last year's average the business was done to 85 9/10 per cent. At the Paramount, with "The Carnation Kid" as the attraction, the receipts were $64,200, which gave the house a percentage figure of 88 3/5. The Capitol, which held "Lucky Boy," a Tiffany-Stahl production with Georgie Jessel starred, played at $62,281.20, fixing the percentage there at 91 2/5.

The Strand, which held over "The Barker" for a second week, came under the wire with $32,427, giving the house a percentage rating of 93 2/5, with the business dropping about $12,000 under the first week's showing.

Warners Plan All-Color and Dialogue Special

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—Warner Bros. have completed plans to make a super-special all-color dialogue musical comedy titled "On With the Show." Alan Crosland will do the directing and the entire production will be shot with the technicolor process. The budget for the picture calls for $600,000.

The cast for the picture will be made up of Betty Compson, Louise Fazenda, Sally O'Neill, Joe E. Brown, John Davidson, William Bakewell, the Fairbanks twins, Arthur Lake, Sam Hardy, Lee Moran, Thomas Jefferson, Harry Gribbon, Josephine Houston, Henry Fink, Wheeler Oakman, Otto Hoffman, and Ethel Waters.

Private News Reels Now Being Supplied Homes

60,000 Projectors Installed May Hit Attendance At Movie Houses

Whether home equipment is going to cut into the receipts of motion picture houses may soon be determined. During the week a Brooklyn department store advertised the sale of 16 mm. film for home consumption, showing news reel views of the Hoover inauguration. The price of 100 feet of the film was fixed at $7.50.

This film is not that of any of the regular news reel services, but is made by a New York firm that specializes in advertising and industrial films. They have only recently inaugurated the news service and it will now become a regular feature with them. They intend covering news events in the same manner as the news services and will dispose of their product through the department and kodak and film stores.

Just how serious this competition will be to the picture houses remains to be seen. It is said however, that Bell & Howell and the Eastman Kodak Compauy, who are distributing these home projectors have already disposed of upward of 60,000.

Victor Talking Machine, RCA Merger Now Operative

The Victor merger with RCA was declared operative during the week, more than the required seven-eighths of the Victor stock having been deposited under the terms of the exchange agreed upon between the two companies.

Common Sense To Solve Problems Says Jesse Lasky

Good Showmanship Principles Guiding Lights Of The Future

"The film industry faces a situation unparalleled since its start," says Jesse L. Lasky, "and common sense is the factor that will solve all problems. The new screen entertainment possibilities will be worked out on a sound and sensible basis with only the principles of good showmanship and common sense needed as guiding posts.

"The future of talking pictures is the future of the motion picture industry itself. Talking pictures are to stay because they widen the screen's entertainment scope. In the future the public is not going to ask whether a picture is dialogue or silent. The question will be, is it a good show? Talking pictures are going to make for better entertainment. The public really hasn't seen anything yet. Possibilities of the new field are tremendous."

Answering the question whether or not all pictures will be talkies, Mr. Lasky said:

"No. It all depends on good entertainment. Subjects that are suitable for dialogue will be made as talking pictures. Subjects that best adapt themselves to silent treatment will be made as silent pictures. The ratio of talking and silent pictures depends upon the way strong dramatic subjects shape up, and upon the public's reaction to the two types of pictures."

Victor Engineers Start Work On Roach Stages

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 7.—Preliminaries to construction of sound stages are being made by Victor Recording engineers this week. Roach has a six-year contract with Victor for the synchronization of all his product to be released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. M-G-M uses the Movietone process, but it is understood that the Victor system is interchangeable. Two Victor engineers will be in charge of construction.

Roach plans 12 "Our Gangs," six to be all-talkies and six silent ones. Each of the series will have different plots, in other words, will not be different versions of the same picture.

Columbia Assembling Strong Cast For "Donovan Affair"

A strong cast of players is being assembled by Columbia for "The Donovan Affair," this company's all-talkie special. To the names of Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier, William Collier, Jr., Agnes Ayres, Fred Kelsey, John Roche and Ethel Wales, were added this week those of Wheeler Oakman, Edward Hearn, Hank Mann and Alphonse Ethier. All these were seasoned stage players previously to taking up screen work. Frank Capra is directing.

National Anthem Gives Theatre New Problem

WHEN a theatre performance closes in a Canadian theatre, the playing of the National Anthem is a customary requirement. Thus, still another problem has arisen for managers whose theatres have been wired. With no orchestra, organist or pianist in the pit at the close of shows, it has become necessary for exhibitors to secure phonograph records of "God Save the King" for use on the non-synchronous machine, immediately after the regular presentation has been sounded.

Rain And Snow Hits Broadway Below The Belt

"The Girl on the Barge," which held forth at the Colony, did $9,675 on the week, which was a little better than 82 per cent, while "The Wolf of Wall Street," in its fifth week at the Rialto, got $24,980, showing a total of $203,728, which is averaging better than $40,000 a week for the run thus far. This is the final week of the picture, which will be succeeded by D. W. Griffith's "Lady of the Pavements" on Saturday, with Lupe Velez here to burn the town up for the opening.

The little Cameo was forced to put in "Behind the German Lines" for a second run on the street, with the result that business went off to $4,832 on the week.

"The Letter" Comes In

Of those remaining in the houses for two-a-day runs "Redskin," which was at the Criterion, finished on Tuesday night of this week, making way for the Paramount all-talker "The Letter" starring Jeanne Eagels. This is the first feature length talk production which the company made at its eastern studio. The final week of Dix' run showed $8,437, dropping the house to 62 4/5 per cent. "The Redeeming Sin" finished at Warner's Thursday night and was followed on Friday with Davey Lee in "Sonny Boy." The Costello picture stayed three weeks in all and on its second week got $15,045.25.

"Weary River," at the Central, went right along to the tune of $17,796, while the old reliable, "The Singing Fool," at the Winter Garden in its twenty-fifth week there, played to $21,571.75. Although both of these pictures show up badly in the percentage column, the reader in looking at those figures should realize that in the case of "Weary River" the figures are based on the average business of the run of the picture at the house, this being done because a $2.50 top scale was inaugurated for this engagement, and in the case of "The Singing Fool," at the Winter Garden, the same thing is true, for this was the first picture to play that house and the business of the earlier weeks of the Jolson run there have set so high an average for the house that the present figures look insignificant in comparison, yet they are good business for the theatre.

Action In French Quota Crisis Now Expected April 15

Recommendations of Industry Will Be Passed To Commission Then

Final action in the French quota crisis is now expected by April 15. Suggestions made by members of the French industry covering picture imports to be permitted next year have been passed to a French government official, who, after studying them will make his recommendation to the commission.

Drastic changes are expected, but it is not likely that the French trade recommendations will be entirely approved. The French industry is reported in rather a bad way and claims to need considerably further protection.

American interests will get special government consideration, but it is said the best hope of the United States is a revision of the French demands to prevent complete withdrawal of American films from France.

It is said that America must materially aid in the financing of French productions or face radical curtailment of film imports, the reduction proposed said to be from the 500 of last year to 350 this year.

In Washington it is said that the Government prefers to let the film industry act in the situation, rather than to make any governmental representations.

Originality Only Now Means Success Says C. B. DeMille

The production premium in the coming year will be on originality, according to Cecil B. De Mille. The "prescription picture" is doomed and pictures made by obvious and uninspired formula, or as poor reflections of past successes, are out forever, says the producer-director for M-G-M.

"Everyone is striving to get to the forefront of talkies," said De Mille. "That means that those who succeed can do it on merit alone. The days when a director could coast in with moderate success by aping some one else; those days are past. For this we should be thankful, as no art progresses under conditions of imitation."

Ruth Taylor Joins Ranks Of Freelance Players

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—After eighteen months of concentrated publicity to build her into stardom, Paramount has decided not to renew Ruth Taylor's contract. She will join the ranks of free-lance players. Ruth Taylor jumped into prominence when she was "discovered," following a contest, as the perfect Lorelei for "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." She was placed under a five year optional contract.

Independents Hold Balance Of Power, Says Myers

Declares They Represent Difference Between Profit And Loss

In an interview, in Washington, D. C., with "The National Exhibitor," Abram F. Myers, head of the Allied States Association, declares that the independent exhibitor still holds the balance of power in the industry in that he represents the difference to producers between profit and loss.

Among other things pointed out in the interview and attributed to Mr. Myers is the statement as his opinion that the industry could get along without Federal supervision provided exhibitors and producers, by certain concessions and reforms could arrive at open and above board methods of doing business, which would eliminate all suspicion of unfair dealings.

Mr. Myers said:

"Politics and not business have heretofor characterized this industry and direct dealing has been practically unknown. That's one of the reasons why we have all been subjected to government inquiries and investigations and we will be forced to continue to submit to these things until our business is transacted fairly and on the surface. This is the only industry where the manufacturer meddles into the affairs of the retailer, and it's a bad thing."

Union Theatres Puts Over Big Australia Deal

Union Theatres, Ltd., of Australia, has purchased for $1,000,000 all of the theatres in Adelaide with the exception of one, and thereby claims to have the largest theatre company outside of America and England. The purchase was made from the Greater Wondergraph Company, Ltd.

According to the Sydney Sun, by this latest purchase Union Theatres now owns or controls five theatres in the city of Adelaide. They are West's Olympia, the Work, Wondergraph, Grand and Pavilion.

Union Theatres will further expand by organizing a new company in South Australia to be known as Union Theatres South Australia, Ltd. It will have a capital of $2,000,000.

Warners Plan To Establish Film Exchange In Memphis

Warner Brothers will establish a film exchange in Memphis for distribution of their pictures in the mid-south territory, it was definitely reported along Film Row in Memphis this week.

The new office, rumored as planned to open about Apr. 1, probably will take in parts of territory now divided between the present exchanges at Atlanta, St. Louis, Dallas and Oklahoma City.

Talkies Show Lead In North Middle West; "Singing Fool" And "Lucky Boy" Both High

"Fool" Breaks Record At Battle Creek; Jessel Picture Heads Parade In Milwaukee

SUMMARIZING from a section of MOTION PICTURE NEWS' Check-Up of box office reports in territory embracing Milwaukee, Omaha, Battle Creek, Mich., Des Moines, and Grand Rapids, Mich., last week's percentages again indicate that dialogue and sound pictures are getting the heaviest attendance.

"Lucky Boy" led Milwaukee with 125 per cent, and "The Barker" also went 15 per cent over normal. All other houses were up around the good business mark, the holiday helping to swell the receipts.

Very unfavorable weather conditions cut heavily into the Omaha trade but, in spite of this, "The Canary Murder Case" showed considerable strength, going 30 per cent over normal. "The Man Who Laughs" and "The Doctor's Secret" were both 25 per cent off. Blizzards and one inch of snowfall were undoubtedly accountable.

At Grand Rapids, two M-G-M pictures, "Woman of Affairs" and "Trail of '98" got away to slightly under normal for the week, while in Battle Creek, "The Singing Fool" broke the town records, playing to approximately 34,000 at the Regent. The management is talking of booking the "Fool" for a return showing, and if this is done it will be the first time it has happened in the breakfast food city.

Los Angeles Theatre Tries New Sign

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 7.—The first theatre on the West Coast to use an "electric traveling word sign" will be Loew's State, Los Angeles. The sign is to be established on the marquee with a weekly change of copy. It's message can be changed each five minutes if a special attraction or some emergency comes up.

The cost for its installation for Loew's State is estimated about $20,000. Should it prove successful in the Los Angeles house, the Fox West Coast office will install a similar sign on the marquee of a key house in sixteen cities. The total cost for this number will be $150,000.

Big Increase In Projector Exports During Past Year

2,911 More Home Devices Shipped In 1928 Than Previous Year

Projector exports show a big increase for the year 1928 over those of the previous year. Standard 35 millimeter and 16 millimeter home projectors for 1928 show an increase of 2,911 over 1927.

During 1928, 5,953 projectors with a declared value of $950,202 were exported to 71 different countries throughout the world, as compared with 3,042 projectors valued at $641,461 exported in 1927. These figures include both 35 and 16 millimeter projectors, and probably do not give as true a picture of standard projector exports as might be desired. However, this condition will no longer exist, as a distinction between the different size projectors is being made at the port of exportation in the new table of classifications which become operative January 1, 1929.

Europe, best market for pictures, is likewise leading projection market. During 1928 there were exported to Europe 2,092 American projectors of both types valued at $348,910, as compared with 991 projectors valued at $241,859 in 1927.

Nazimova To Make Talkie For Release By Columbia

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—Nazimova has been signed to make a talking picture. It will be produced by Eddie Small and released through Columbia Pictures. While the contract has been signed no story has yet been decided upon.

First Picture Completed At New RCA Sound Studios

The first sound film was completed during the week at the new Photophone Gramercy Studios in East 24th street, New York City. Godfrey Ludlow, concert and radio artist, played two concertos on his violin in the first of a series of artistic sound pictures for RKO. He was accompanied by a 75-piece symphony orchestra under the baton of Caesaro Sodero playing "Symphonic Espanole" and "The Old Refrain."

Sessue Hayakawa At Work On Vitaphone Short Film

Sessue Hayakawa, Japanese motion picture actor, is at work on his first talking picture at Warner Bros. Eastern Vitaphone studios, under the direction of Bryan Foy. The sketch is a two-reeler and is titled "Dead Laughter."

Began advertising campaign three days before showing, playing on name of Philo Vance. Used William Powell's picture in all ads and played up all-talking and mystery angles. Audience appeal: High school and adult.—Russell Bovin, Loew's Theatre, Canton, Ohio.

Featured picture as an all-talking, mystery thriller, William Powell as star and S. S. Van Dine as author. Adult appeal.—H. Pennock, Manager, Minneapolis, Minn.

Rattling good mystery talking film. Feature author's name as book has great following. William Powell's name also big asset. Climax holds audience spellbound. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—Al Fourmet, Manager, Empire Theatre, San Antonio, Texas.

Emphasize all-talking, Philo Vance story and mystery angle. Audience appeal: High school age up, all classes.—Emil Bernstecker, Manager, Metropolitan Theatre, Houston, Texas.

Feature it as all-talkie and fact that it is one of the best mystery plots of the year. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—L. J. Finske, Manager, Newman Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Play up Powell as real talkie star; fact that story was a best seller; mystery and thrills; don't overlook comedy angle. Audience appeal: All classes.—A. N. Roy, Manager, Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

Exploit talking version of famous best-seller "Mystery that baffled millions!" Audience appeal: Elite; older elements.—Walter Merkel, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Springfield, Mass.

Exploit especially; tie newspapers with Dot King murder. Exploit all-talkie. Exploit Powell. Audience appeal: One hundred per cent with all types reached.—Lionel Wesson, Manager, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines.

Exploit from all-talkie mystery angle with fine cast. Audience appeal: All classes.—Frank Hookalio, Manager, Washington Street Olympia, Boston, Mass.

Recommend playing up the best mystery and author's name (S. S. Van Dine). The title is a drawing card itself. Audience appeal: Not for children.—Acting-Manager M. Westfall, Stanley Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

"Case Of Lena Smith"

CATER to older ones who like "East Lynne" type of stories. Play up mother love. Audience appeal: From high school age up.—J. M. Franklin, Manager, B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Canada.

Exploit mystery element. Audience appeal: General.—Dr. James Wilson, Manager, Fox-Palace, Springfield, Mass.

"Captain Lash"

EXPLOIT comedy side of film, with McLaglen in swaggering, rough-neck, but comedy role. Film sells itself when seen. Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—Eddie Bremer, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Houston, Texas.

Play up McLaglen and dramatic angles of film; mention previous McLaglen successes; play sea angle. Audience appeal: Mostly those who like melodrama.—Coliseum Theatre (West Coast) Seattle, Wash.

Play up the McLaglen of "What Price Glory." Audience appeal: General.—Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Carnival Man"

EXPLOIT this short as something unusual. Audience appeal: Big. Made real hit.—George Watson, Manager, Strand Theatre, Des Moines.

"Charge Of The Gauchos"

PLAYED strongly on name of Francis X. Bushman, and historical background of picture, as well as actual filming in the Argentine. Audience appeal: Juvenile and adult masculine.—Joe Calla, Manager, Valentine Theatre, Canton, O.

"Children Of The Ritz"

EXPLOIT as sound synchronized picture of merry-mad flaming daughters who drain cup of life and ask for more and play up as Cornell Woolrich's prize winning $10,000 College Humor story, featuring Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill. Stress heavily that it is by youth about youth. Audience appeal: Will set the youngsters on edge with its jazz, please the middle age and amuse the oldsters.—Howard Price Kingsmore, General Manager, Loew's Century, Baltimore, Md.

Good results should be obtained from this one by featuring "youth's own revelation of the daring doings of the younger generation." Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—Lawrence Lehman, Manager, Mainstreet Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploit as a peppy and romantic production. Will attract youth if well played up—M. Westfall, Acting-Manager, Stanley Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

Emphasize problem of modern youth and refer to tobasco stuff. Wealth of apparel is seen on women. Audience appeal: All classes, particularly young people.—D. Stapleton, Manager, Centre Theatre, Ottawa, Canada.

Box Office Ad. Barometer

"Conquest"

EXPLOIT this as a timely melodrama of a trip to the Pole. Audience appeal is for those who enjoy melodrama done in rather obvious manner. Nothing here to offend any theatre or any audience. Should appeal strongly to the young folks who take their thrills without too close criticism of their plausibility.—George Gilliam, Manager, Cameo Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

"The Cossacks"

GO as far as you like with Gilbert and Adoree and emphasize love, action and thrills in story. Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—P. J. Nolan, Rex Theatre, Ottawa, Canada.

"The Crash"

PLAY up Milton Sills as the star with Thelma Todd as a mile-a-minute romance by Frank L. Packard—of a fighting fool who wouldn't be downed—as glorifying the unsung heroes of the railroad. Stress railroad wreck as a big thrill. Audience appeal: Particularly to those fans who like Milton Sills, to railroad workers in general, and all who like a hard-boiled, he-man romance.—Howard Price Kingsmore, General Manager, Loew's Valencia, Baltimore, Md.

"Desert Nights"

EXPLOITED John Gilbert's name in association with the type of story in which he appears. Audience appeal: Strong for everyone as this is good popular entertainment, full of romance, love, thrills and novelty—George Dumond, Manager, State Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

Play Gilbert in capital letters. Also a bit of value in advertising Gilbert and Torrence reunited. (If this picture had dialogue would do at least 20 per cent more business.) Audience appeal: To all ages and classes except very young children.—Loew's State Theatre, Houston, Texas.

"The Doctor's Secret"

EXPLOIT as 100 per cent all-talking show in class by itself and surpassing anything shown so far—that it was only picture to play two weeks at Paramount, New York, and that Ruth Chatterton, H. B. Warner and Robert Edeson are in cast. But hold back Sir J. M. Barrie's name as it stands for the Peter Pan and whimsical stuff while this story is a wonderful sex picture. Audience appeal: A strong social drama that will appeal to every class.—Howard Price Kingsmore, General Manager, Loew's Century, Baltimore, Md.

Place emphasis on all-talking film, particularly on Ruth Chatterton, whom we believe to have the best screen voice to date; also note the author and play by that name; also emphasize society drama. Audience appeal: For the smart, knowing audience that appreciates discussion of drama; also suited to other types.—H. E. Long, Manager, Loew's State, Louisville, Ky.

Exploit names of Warner, Chatterton, Loder and Edeson; also mystery surrounding secret of the plot. Audience appeal: Adults only.—S. Chambers, Manager, Palace Theatre, Wichita, Kansas.

"Dog Of The Regiment"

EXPLOIT Rinty and thrilling escape from German prison camp to thwart firing squad; also Rinty's hopping the 'plane and dangling by rope from cock-pit. Audience appeal: Most persons, especially children and Saturday night crowd.—Mrs. Charles Barron, Manager, Kansas Theatre, Wichita, Kansas.

"The Dummy"

PLAY up the cast; the detective angle, and feature comedy element. Audience appeal: General; fit for all family types.—Bob Blair, Manager, Seattle Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Play up stars of the cast and fact that it is all-talkie to obtain best results. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—Claire Woods, Manager, Royal Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploit juvenile angle and mystery plot. Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—T. Brouchio, Manager, Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, Mass.

"Fancy Baggage"

THIS picture was played up for the cast which was the same as in "The Wildcat" which preceded it by several weeks. On the strength of this the picture did well for the first two days but fell off the last two. Not such a good picture. Audience appeal: Especially juvenile.—C. Watson, Manager, Strand Theatre, Des Moines.

"The Flying Fleet"

PLAY up Naval aviation angle and work of three leads. Any angle of this film will bring results as it is made for box office and every patron will help by word of mouth adv. Audience appeal: Everybody.—James Q. Clemmer, Manager, Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Advertise this as one of the best air pictures ever made. Novarro's name always good. Audience appeal: All ages; will pack children's matinees.—Harold K. Archbold, Manager, Varsity Theatre, Evanston, Ill.

"Forbidden Tales"

PLAY up as a strange, mysterious and thrilling assortment of four stories, two by the noted writers, Edgar Allen Poe and Robert Louis Stevenson. Exploit Conrad Veidt heavily as the star, because of his work in many plays seen here. Audience appeal: This will be enjoyed by all who have read The Black Cat and The Sucide Club. It will appeal especially to the educated classes, as it is excellently done.—Clyde V. McKay, Manager, Little Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

"Gang War"

PLAY up timeliness of such a picture when gang wars are getting so much front page in the big cities. Stress the human side of this one. Audience appeal: General.—A. B. McCoy, Manager, Mary Anderson Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

"The Ghost Talks"

EXPLOIT as first all-dialogue feature farce comedy and that it is a laugh sensation. Go strong in announcing Helen Twelvetrees, 1929 Wampas Baby star, as the heroine and note others in cast under general head of with these kings and queens of the screen. Audience appeal: This will go fine with the masses. Educated element may object to so much old hokum, but it certainly packs many laughs.—William E. Stumpf, Manager, New Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

Play up mysterious angle and debut of Helen Twelvetrees with accent on her legitimate stage record. Appeal: All classes and ages, not excluding children.—Matthew Riley, Manager, Victory Theatre, Providence, R. I.

"Geraldine"

EXPLOIT as a charming comedy every picture fan will enjoy and play up Booth Tarkington as author and Eddie Quillan and Marian Nixon as players. Play up jazz-mad youth angle. Audience appeal: To all lovers of Tarkington stories and those who enjoy clean comedy from a jazz-mad youth angle.—J. Lawrence Schanberger, Manager, Keith's Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

"The Godless Girl"

USED Cecil B. DeMille's name prominently as the producer, as well as Jennie McPherson's name as the author. Audience appeal: It has a universal appeal, making it a valuable attraction for all types of houses.—William Watson, Manager, Hippodrome, Cleveland, O.

Play up Lina Basquette and moral angles of film. Exploit reformatory action. Audience appeal: For those who like raw melodrama.—James Q. Clemmer, Manager, Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Exploit the DeMille name as producer; the powerful moral lesson; play up sensational features strongly, the fire especially. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—George B. Peck, Manager, Victory Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

Exploit fact that Monte Blue plays the lead in a thrilling railroad drama and that it is a talkie. Played up as a picture which offers a thrill every minute. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—A. R. Lever, Manager, Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

"Haunted House"

SOLD this picture on thrill and chill combined with comedy. Exploited comedy value of Chester Conklin and beauty of Thelma Todd. Has appeal for those who like chilly comedy, especially men.—Patrick McManus, Manager, Princess Theatre, Joliet, Ill.

"Hey Rube"

PLAY for Western audiences that like action and fast drama of the Jack Holt type. Audience appeal: For all ages and classes.—J. H. Boswell, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

Play up carnival scenes and use circus angle in promotion. Audience appeal: All who like circuses.—Burns O'Sullivan, Manager, Palace Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

"Hot News"

EXPLOIT Bebe Daniels for name value if she has local following. And the thrilling kidnap and fight scenes. Audience appeal: To younger generation and lovers of action.—Evans Linton, Manager, Olympic Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

"Home Towners"

AN excellent example of stage comedy transferred to the screen in sound film form. Announce it as an "all talkie." Audience appeal: Married people and comedy seekers.—Ray Tubman, Manager, Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Canada.

Country-Wide Reports On

"Home Coming"

EXPLOITED this as a much-discussed drama and aroused local interest in its subject and its cast. Audience appeal: Is strong for the adults. It is probably too simple and too sordid to appeal to the younger generation. It's logical and sad ending will reach adults better than young folks, who want only to be amused.—Frank A. Hines, Manager, Keith's Palace, Cleveland, Ohio.

"In Old Arizona"

BEST selling angle is that film is first full length outdoor talking picture. Another big draw is the quaint humor that runs throughout the story of the lovable bandit. Do not overlook theme song "My Tonia," one of the most tuneful theme songs to date. Have your orchestra play it week before showing film. Radio stations find song so popular they are willing to play it, especailly Nick Lucas' version. Have phonograph in lobby play various records of "My Tonia" during week preceding as well as week during which film is showing. Audience appeal: Every age and class.—Raymond M. Willie, Manager, Majestic Theatre, San Antonio, Texas.

The fact that the Leland Theatre, which played this picture last week, had installed sound apparatus, was the leading feature in large newspaper advertising in Albany's papers during the week. Also featured the fact that it was the first sound picture to be taken entirely out of doors and amid scenery of considerable beauty.—Manager Sayles, Leland Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Second week for this feature and did capacity business by featuring name of story, all-talking angle and names of players. Word of mouth advertising greatly helped second week. Audience appeal: All ages and both sexes.—Joe Calla, Manager, Strand Theatre, Canton, Ohio.

Recommend emphasizing as the first out-of-door all talking picture. Although the fact that it is a 'western' and picturesque should not be overlooked. Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—Sid Lowrence, Manager, Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

Featured fact that it is the first all-talkie to be made outdoors and is a sensation picture of the golden west without a silent moment. The audience to be sought is general as the picture appeals to all classes.—Sid Henry, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

"Interference"

EXPLOIT names of Clive Brook, Evelyn Brent, William Powell and Doris Kenyon. If house is wired plug fact that film contains voices and noises as in regular stage presentations. Audience appeal: For those liking heavy drama.—Milton Overman, Manager, Plaza Theatre,, Paris, Texas.

Feature New York top price run at Criterion and fact that New York critics rated it finest talkie to date; stress strong drama and success the original Pertree play enjoyed.—Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, British Columbia.

"The Iron Mask"

"Lady Be Good"

EXPLOIT comedy angle. Also Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill—back stage life—first hand glimpses in the life of vaudeville actors and actresses—romantic angle. Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—Duncan Inverarity, Manager, Granada Theatre, Spokane, Wash.

Exploit Jack Mulhall-Dorothy Mackaill star combination. Stress back-stage scenes. Good for laughs. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—J. B. Allman, Manager, Allen Theatre, Akron, Ohio.

"Lady Of Chance"

RECOMMEND exploiting name of Shearer for she generally has good following. Audience appeal: Higher type than usually found in picture audiences.—Wm. Mick, Manager, Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

Popularity of Norma Shearer as star is this picture's chief exploitation value.—E. T. Crall, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Newport News, Va.

For this locality the star's name is worth playing up. Audience appeal: General.—Michigan Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Lady Of The Pavements"

EXHIBITORS will do well to bill this film as a smashing love story with "poor to riches" angle. Has appeal to all classes and ages.—E. J. McCarthy, Manager, Loew's State, Providence, R. I.

Exploit this one as a "story of a Miss of the streets," featuring Lupe Velez. Audience appeal: Mostly adults.—Walter Maloney, Manager, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploit it as D. W. Griffith's first singing picture. Audience appeal: "Flapper" audience, generally younger folks.—Herbert Izrael, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

Exploit romance angle and talkie sequences. Audience appeal: High school age and up, all classes.—Joseph Brennan, Loew's State, Boston, Mass.

"Little Wildcat"

EXPLOIT wild romanticism: human wildcat out to capture her man- Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—Dr. James Wilson, Manager, Fox-Palace, Springfield, Mass.

"The Lone Wolf's Daughter"

EXPLOIT Bert Lytell in drama of character everybody knows and knows just what to expect. He has audience built up. In his line he is just as distinctive as Sherlock Holmes is in his. Audience appeal: To people who like picture between melodrama and problem play. Those who are curious and like detective stories. —Walter McDowell, Manager, Strand Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Lonesome"

ADVERTISE as a joyous romantic story of a glorious holiday. Also featured as a perfect talking picture with dialogue where dialogue really means something. Audience appeal: Juvenile and family patronage.—Ray J. Stinnette, Manager, Capital Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

"Love Over Night"

THERE is an opportunity to exploit the title —however, play up the fact that it is excellent comedy; has unusual city and subway scenes. Audience appeal: Especially the younger set.—Michigan Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Lucky Boy"

EXPLOIT similarity to big Jolson successes but do not compare the films. Play up the heart appeal angles. Audience appeal: All types, especially adults.—John Hamrick, Blue Mouse Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Exploit George Jessel and his song numbers. Also the strong mother interest, but particularly the singing of Jessel—the wide scope of emotional play—from comedy to pathos. Audience appeal: All ages and all classes.—Clem Pope, Manager, Clemmer Theatre, Spokane, Wash.

Exploit George Jessel, popular Broadway idol —melodious songs in sound—Jessel singing "My Mother's Eyes." Apeal to all classes.—Floyd Smith, Manager, Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Exploit star as original jazz singer. Play up mother theme and many songs introduced by star. Audience appeal: All classes.—Edwin Adler, Manager, Strand Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

Use George Jessel's name in advertising; the fact that he sings. Audience appeal: Has a general appeal to all classes and types.—Wm. Mick, Manager, Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, Wisc.

"Man In Hobbles"

EXPLOIT "In-Laws" angle and name of Peter B. Kyne, the author. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—Arthur Phillips, Manager, Uptown Theatre, Wichita, Kans.

"Marquis Preferred"

PLAY up name of Adolphe Menjou, a natural drawing card in most towns. Interest public in whimsicality and novelty of all Menjou's plots.—E. T. Crall, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Newport News, Va.

Typical Menjou vehicle. Play up Menjou for family audiences. Appeal: All ages.—Tod Browning, Manager, Keith's Memorial, Boston, Mass.

Entertaining picture. Audience appeal: Special appeal for women and general.—John J. Burns, Keith's Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Melody Of Love"

PLAY up sentimental features and fact that this picture is Carl Laemmle's first all-talkie. Audience appeal: Sufficient hokum in this to get by with almost any audience.—Arthur Phillips, Manager, Uptown Theatre, Wichita, Kansas.

"Michigan Kid"

THIS film drew a good house for the four days it ran. Adventure exploitation draws well. Rence Adoree and Conrad Nagel were exploited for all their names were worth. Theatre closed for redecoration after this feature. Crowds packed the house over the week-end. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—Martin Dryer, Manager, Regent Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

"Million Dollar Collar"

ANOTHER good melodrama with Rin Tin Tin—all that's necessary—but this also has a good story which is worth playing up. Audience appeal: Children and middle-aged particularly, but the story is so conceived that it has general appeal as well.—John Blunk, Manager, Alamo Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

Emphasis on the novelty of the feature being a dog's "talking picture" drew adults as well as young in goodly numbers. Rin Tin Tin's reputation brought crowds. Name should be stressed where he has local following. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—Arch McCallum, Monager, Fay's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

How to Sell Your Features

"My Man"

EXPLOIT Fannie Brice, for years Ziegfield star and present star of "Fioretta." Also her first Warner Brothers talking, singing feature. Audience appeal: General.—Ralph W. Thayer, Manager, Eckel Schine Theatre, Syracure, N. Y.

"Naughty Baby"

ALICE WHITE, shown in various states of undress, is the drawing card of this picture. It appeals particularly to young people.—T. R. Earl, Manager, Imperial Theatre, Asheville, N. C.

"Night Club"

EXPLOIT the variety of entertainment and the Broadway stars in all-talkies, including Fannie Brice and Raymond Hitchcock. Also used "Pusher in the Face" and "Bishop's Candlesticks." Audience appeal hits every class and type with this varied program with first picture getting juveniles, comedy for the youngsters and a heavy drama in "Bishop's Candlesticks" for the older fans.—George Watson. Manager, Strand Theatre, Des Moines.

"Night Watch"

THE fact that this is an excellent mystery film, plus Billie Dove's beauty, is a combination which, properly exploited, should prove successful.—Mrs. William Gordon, Manager, Palace Theatre, Newport News, Va.

"Plastered In Paris"

COMEDY element in film was whooped up here. A clown in downtown streets was used to good advantage. Sammy Cohen's reputation as a comedian drew well. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—Arch McCallum, Manager, Fay's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

"Redeeming Sin"

THE story is weak and so it can not be played up. The synchronization is poor, so it can not be emphasized. Conrad Nagel, local boy, has some draw here. Dolores Costello, pretty fair. Audience appeal: Not sufficient.—Jess Day, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Des Moines.

,"The Redeeming Sin." The sales feature of this picture is Dolores Costello-Conrad Nagel team and the Paris underworld setting. It is good entertainment for the whole family.—Tom Halliday, Manager, Plaza Theatre, Asheville, N. C.

Recommended that the screen pair, Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello, be played up. Think this is all that is necessary to sell picture. Audience appeal: General.—C. C. Atkinson, Strand Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

"The Redeeming Sin." Dolores Costello has well earned popularity here and is good for a play. Audience appeal: All ages, all classes.—Earl W. Pepper, Manager, Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

Exploit names of Nagel and Costello as they have strong following. Audience appeal: Mostly women, all ages and types.—L. K. Brin, Manager, Garden Theatre, Milwaukee, Wisc.

"Red Hot Speed"

EXPLOIT name of Denny and comedy angle. Audience appeal: High school age will like but not so much for others.—Molton Overman, Manager, Grand Theatre, Paris, Tex.

Exploit Denny's first talking picture. Clean comedy appeals to all ages and all members of the family.—Bart Grody, Manager, Keith-Albee, Boston, Mass.

"Redskin"

BIG selling point is Richard Dix and the color angle. It is best color picture yet produced. Dix is great drawing card on account of great work in "The Vanishing American." Audience appeal: General, but especially high school generation.—Wm. C. O'Hare, Manager, Texas Theatre, San Antonio, Texas.

Chief publicity angle to this picture is the fact that it is produced in color and sound, the beautiful colors bringing the picturesque life of the Indians to a reality on the screen. Audience appeal: All classes and especially art lovers.—Harl A. Wolever, Manager, Melba Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

Stressed the sound and technicolor, and mechanical novelties of the picture rather than the story or the star. Audience appeal is universal and especially strong in such localities where Dix is personally popular.—Fred Clary, Manager, Allen Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

Richard Dix was played up for his following. Also the fact that it was 80% in color and 100% sound. Audience appeal: general, strong appeal for children.—Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, Mo.

Emphasize beauty of color photography and "different" type of story. Audience appeal: For those who want something a little different and better.—Bob Blair, Manager, Seattle Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Richard Dix and the romance of an Indian and a white girl in the Indian country, together with the fact that parts of the film are in technicolor, make this a box office knockout. The whole family will like it.—T. R. Earl, Manager, Imperial Theatre, Asheville, N. C.

Stress Dix as the "Vanishing American." Sports, love and action. Star's red-blooded appeal should be stressed. Appeal: All classes and ages, even ultra-elite.—Edward Read, Manager, Strand Theatre, Providence, R. I.

Exploit the beautiful colored scenes, Richard Dix and beautiful theme song. Audience appeal: General, all ages, all classes.—Jess. Day, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Des Moines.

"The Rescue"

ANYTHING that will exploit the romantic, adventure or South Seas angle is useful. Story has direct appeal to adults as well as youngsters. Mention the fact in ads that the story is picturization of Conrad's tale. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—Thomas D. Soriero, Manager, Rochester Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Exploit as Conrad story; struggle between passion and honor and friendships. Lily Damita's performance liked and played up. Ronald Colman good. Appeal to audience liking drama and adventure. A bit high for juvenile play.—L. B. Cool, Manager, Colonial Theatre, Akron, Ohio.

Emphasize large scale upon which picture was made; lavish settings and Ronald Colman's popularity.—E. T. Crall, Manager, Olympic Theatre, Newport News, Va.

Exploit star (Ronald Colman) with Lili Damita adaptation of Joseph Conrad story of the sea. Audience appeal: Elite.—Al Anders, Bijou Theatre, Springfield, Mass.

"Revenge"

DOLORES DEL RIO is good for a boost but theme may not be generally popular. Picture deals with different angle of outdoor life. Audience appeal: Women and girls.—Ambrose Nolan, Manager, Avalon Theatre, Ottawa, Canada.

Use name of Dolores Del Rio and the "bear taming" angle. This is good only if Del Rio has local appeal. Audience appeal: Most people will like.—S. Chambers, Manager, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kansas.

"Riley The Cop"

PLAY up the comedy part. Name is misleading. Appeals to all classes that like comedy.—Evans Linton, Manager, Olympic Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

"Scarlet Seas"

PLAYED up name of Barthelmess and Compson in fast moving story at sea. Emphasized thrills. Audience appeal: High school and adult.—Marc Wolf, Manager, Palace Theatre, Canton, Ohio.

Exploit synchronized score, and Barthelmess. Audience appeal: Was just fair but general with juvenile preference.—George Watson, Manager, Strand Theatre, Des Moines.

"Seven Footprints To Satan"

CATCHY title—baffling mystery drama—play up thrills and mystery. Audience appeal: All classes.—Burns O'Sullivan, Manager, Palace Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

"Show Girl"

THE film drew well here partly because it was billed as one telling the inside story of Broadway life. Advance publicity also played up Alice White and her recent part in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Audience appeal: High school age up, all classes.—Marvin Murphy, Manager, Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

"The Side Show"

PICTURE offers intrigue and adventure on the circus lot and this should be played up accordingly. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—Louis Charninsky, Manager, Pantages Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Exploit circus angle, building on success of "Barker" if this picture has played your town. Good circus atmosphere, thrilling climax to accidents in big tent and side show.—S. Chambers, Manager, Orpheum Theatre, Wichita, Kansas.

"The Sin Sister"

FEATURE ran last of week and did not get advantage of Saturday and Sunday ads. But adventure and romance angle stressed in ads drew well. Far North angle was stressed. Audience appeal: All ages and classes.—E. L. Lake, Manager, Keith's Palace, Rochester, N. Y.

Exploit Romance; battle between good and evil. Audience appeal: High school age up.—James Skifington, Manager, Fox Theatre, Springfield, Mass.

"Spirit Of Youth"

EXPLOIT this as picture they've waited for and urge them to get a ringside seat to see a champion bout with cupid. Tell them it's a story of tender hearts and fighting fists—a hit with a big all star cast. Audience appeal: To the family trade and especially to the younger members of the family.—Nat Keene, Manager, Hippodrome Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

Live Helps On Your Bookings

"Synthetic Sin"

IN handling the advertising of the week's run of "Synthetic Sin" at the Mark Ritz, the manager played up the fact that the picture carried an appeal to the flappers of Albany and vicinity and as a result his audiences, which were capacity, were made up largely of young girls; also used cut-outs effectively in front and on one of the side streets on which the theatre adjoins.—Charles Smakowitz, Manager, Mark Ritz Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Exploit as first sound film by Colleen Moore; play up "She wanted to be bad" angle; tease on risque element. Audience appeal: For those who want light film fare.—Wm. Hartford, Manager, Coliseum Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

"Taxi 13"

PLAY this up as a speed thrill, featuring Chester Conklin with Martha Sleeper and Hugh Trevor and directed by Marshall Neilan. Exploit Chester's dash through traffic in antiquated taxi for loot and life and announce it as RKO Photophone synchronized and talking production. Audience appeal: To all who like Chester Conklin's particular brand of comedy and those who enjoy seeing a brow-beaten man win in the end. But Mr. Price thinks it is a poor business getter.—Frank J. Price, Manager, Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

Play up Chester Conklin's name; picture has good title but patrons are apt to be disappointed. Audience appeal: Children and not too critical audiences; will not draw in better class neighborhoods.—Harold K. Archbold, Manager, Varsity Theatre, Evanston, Ill.

Chester Conklin played up heavily in ads and also comedy angle of photoplay. Appeal to all ages and classes.—E. C. Bostick, Manager, Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

"Tide Of The Empire"

"Trail Of '98"

THRILLING story of the gold rush days. Exploit Dolores Del Rio if she has a local following. Audience appeal: All ages.—Grover Ranck, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Exploit romance of gold rush and beauty of snow scenes. An all-family picture.—Victor Morris, Manager, Loew's Orpheum, Boston, Mass.

"Tropic Madness"

LEATRICE JOY is a good angle. Audience appeal: for all ages.—L. J. Shields, Manager Ritz, Macon, Ga.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin"

EXPLOIT the old play and book's success and the talking and sound effects. Play up to the children and juvenile audiences. Had enormous response from youngsters and their enthusiasm steadily built up business until at end of week business would have warranted holding it over in which case it might have made a record.—Lionel Wasson, Manager, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines.

Featured it is greatest picture of age. Featured educational and memory value of picture. Also exploited unusual interest in the book by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Had great appeal for women and children with noticeable increase in matinee business.—Roy Rogan, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Joliet, Ill.

"Weary River"

ADVERTISED it extensively as Barthelmess' first talking and singing picture. As it was the third week, we advised all to hurry and see this novelty. Audience appeal is wide, and will include all classes and all types of houses with sound installation.—Charles Katz, Manager, Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

Exploit Richard Barthelmess first talking picture, excellent voice and singing of "Weary River." Convict story of man who came back. —W. F. Brock, Manager, State Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Weary River." Featured picture as first talkie by Barthelmess, played up teaming of Compson and Barthelmess. Adult appeal.—H. B. Lyon, Manager, State Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

"The Whip"

THE stars are the best part to play up in this picture as many seem not familiar with the play. Dorothy Mackaill served as a draw here. Audience appeal: Average type. Women especially should like it.—C. Watson, Manager, Strand Theatre, Des Moines.

"Why Be Good"

EMPHASIS on Colleen Moore in ads and billing went well. Should be good in all cities where she has a large local following. Audience appeal: Twelve years old and up, all classes.—E. L. Lake, Manager, Keith's Palace, Rochester, N. Y.

"Wild Orchids"

PICTURE invites comparison of Greta Garbo's work in "Woman of Affairs" and ranks with her best. Also play up the Javanese settings—stripped of all sham and pretense. Audience appeal: All classes and ages.—Walter Mahoney, Manager, Midland Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Placed stress on star name and Lewis Stone, Nils Asther in support. Interest arousing lines on what wife, offered romance when her husband neglected her, decided to do. Audience appeal: Married audience in particular, but good for play to all women.—Ray Brown, Manager, Strand Theatre, Akron, Ohio.

Stress splendid acting of Greta Garbo; her devotion and loyalty to husband angle; emphasize fine work of Lewis Stone; also exceptionally fine photography. Audience appeal: All classes.—Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa.

Covered front of theatre with white lattice work interwoven with artificial orchids. Played up name of Greta Garbo, Lewis Stone and Nils Ashter and featured glamorous tropical settings. Audience appeal: For adult consumption.—Russell Bovim, Manager, Loew's Theatre, Canton, Ohio.

Exploit star and cast. Play up Javanese features and novelties. Audience appeal: City audiences.—A. N. Ray, Manager, Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

Exploit star's name and fact that it is a clean picture. Audience appeal: Is general rather than adult.—Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbar, Mich.

Exploit star (Greta Garbo). Romance under Eastern skies. Audience appeal: High school age—younger element.—E. W. Smith, Manager, Broadway Theatre, Springfield, Mass.

Stress Greta Garbo in romantic story of Java. New kind of triangle. Excellent cast. Appeal to adult class.—Floyd Smith, Manager, Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Wolf Of Wall Street"

WITH record-breaking sales on Wall Street, it was not so hard for the Mark Strand Theatre to feature the picture and draw many men who are naturally interested these days in the trend of the market. Women are also dabbling these days. The picture was heard discussed in one of Albany's tearooms by a group of women who appeared to relish the stockmarket scenes even more than they did the love scenes.—Thomas Clark, Manager, Mark Strand Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

For a week before the film played here a stock market ticker spilling tape in a huge pile was set up in the foyer. Ads and advance publicity played up romance of the stock exchange as related to romance of love in human life. George Bancroft's picture was used to good advantage in ads. Audience appeal: High school age up, all classes.—Herbert Chatkin, Manager, Piccadilly Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Exploit George Bancroft and the fact that it is an all-talking picture. Play up the strong dramatic angle—a story of contrasting and strong emotions, with the money market of America as background. Audience appeal: From high school age up and particularly those who like drama.—Ray Grombacher, Manager, Liberty Theatre, Spokane, Wash.

Big money and the frenzy of high finance can be made tempting in this picture of big business. Also feature Bancroft where he has big appeal. Adults of all classes and ages.—Sol Braunig, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Providence, R. I.

Exploit current interest and wide publicity in recent stock market upheavals. Audience appeal: All adults.—C. A. Weidner, Manager, Broad Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

"A Woman Of Affairs"

PLAY up Greta Garbo and John Gilbert plus a great supporting cast of Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Johnny Mack Brown, Doublas Fairbanks, Jr., and Dorothy Sebastian. Each name has value. Play up the strong love drama, which is taken from "The Green Hat," wherever the play of that name is known. Audience appeal: should prove an attraction for all persons liking the higher class of drama.—Milton Overman, Manager Grand, Paris, Tex.

Greta Garbo and John Gilbert advertised as the screen's lovers were probably the big drawing card although the fact that the picture is taken from "The Green Hat," Michael Arlen's novel, was emphasized and undoubtedly had its effect on the public.—Manager Piergon, Pantages, Spokane, Wash.

Stress the fact that John Gilbert and Greta Garbo are back together again as "the screen's greatest pair of lovers." This and the emphasis on the romantic mood should bring the crowds. Audience appeal: high school age up and all classes.—Melvin Murphy, Manager, Eastman, Rochester, N. Y.

"When The Law Rides"

"The Wind"

EMPHASIZE the name of Lillian Gish. Appeals more to the older and somewhat infrequent type of patron.—Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Jersey Owners Affiliate With Allied States

Decide At New York Meeting To Join Forces With Myers Group

The New Jersey exhibitors have officially decided to affiliate with the Allied States Association, of which Abram F. Myers is the guiding head. This decision was reached at a meeting held in New York with about thirty exhibitors representing some sixty theatres, on hand. Joseph M. Seider, president of the unit presided.

Seider announced that through the efforts of the organization a cut of 25 per cent in fire insurance rates had been secured, as well as a cut of 20 per cent in liability rates, and a 33 1/3 per cent reduction from General Electric in the price of lamps under a co-operative buying plan, in which members buy their lamps direct.

Among those who attended the meeting were the following: Leo Rosenblatt, secretary; E. Thornton Kelly, treasurer; Jack Halperin, Pete Adams, Sidney Samuelson, M. Robinson, W. Ricardi, Dr. Stumpfig, Clinton Weir, Frank Gersten, I. M. Hirshblond, W. C. Hunt, Lou Gold, Jack Nelson, Jacob Fox and M. Warner.

Barbara Bedford Featured In "Heroic Lover" Role

Barbara Bradford will have the featured feminine role in "The Heroic Lover," produced by Oscar Price under the personal supervision of Richard Talmadge, for release through General Pictures, of which Mr. Price is president and Mack D. Weinberger is general manager.

Griffith Pictures Have Grossed $56,053,000

"LADY OF THE PAVEMENTS" United Artists picture, due at the Rialto next Saturday, is the 431st motion picture directed by David Wark Griffith. His films have cost $12,834,000 and they have grossed $56,053,000 over a twenty-year period. Figures computed by the D. W. Griffith Corporation in Hollywood indicate that $25,000,000 profit has been made during twenty years.

U. A. Will Show Own Product At Popular Prices

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, March 7.—Inaugurating an entirely new policy with the intention of building up business in their houses, United Artists has decided to discontinue road-showing the major portion of their products. Beginning with the release of "Coquette" they will book the pictures into their own houses at popular prices.

Beginning in Los Angeles, where the only exception is "The Iron Mask" all United Artists products is booked into the local United Artists Theatre, which has suffered because of the poor grade of productions bought. "Alibi" follows "Coquette" and "Show Boat" into United Artists.

In all other cities, including New York, "Coquette," though deemed of road-show propensities, will be shown at popular prices. It is believed this lesson was learned from the local Paramount Theatre, which has increased gross averages 75 per cent since Paramount has been booking pictures in for popular runs, which formerly were withheld for specials and road-shows.

Big Development Is Reported In British Features

Department of Commerce Gets Figures Showing Heavy Increase

Reports received from England by the Department of Commerce show a considerable development in picture production in that country since the passage of the Cinematographic Films Act at the beginning of 1928. Since the passage of the act 227 British films have been registered, 106 of which are classed as features.

During the same period 1540 foreign films were registered in Great Britain. Of these, 644 were features. There are no official figures showing the output of British made films prior to the act, but an estimate made by reliable sources states that not more than 30 British feature films were produced in 1926 and 45 in 1927.

Approximately 10 "feature" and 11 short films have thus been produced each month the last year, and the British pictures available for both the renters and exhibitors quota are more than three times the amount required by the Act. It is further stated that in addition to the British films already registered about 50 more have been made and are ready to be shown to the trade, and nearly 100 more are scheduled for production.

The number of film renters licensed under the Act is now more than 80, while licenses have been issued to 4100 exhibitors. During the past eighteen months 13 producing companies with an aggregate issued capital of nearly 16,000,000 have obtained new capital for the production of British pictures.

Opinions on Pictures

Geraldine

Silent Parts Entertaining, Dialog Slow

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS was an entertaining little picture as long as it remained silent, but when it got into the talking sequence it became draggy and dead. Just what it will do at the box office is problematical. There is nothing about it that is outstanding from an advertising standpoint, but the audiences will like the earlier portions of the film once they are inside. Pathe, however, does uncover a neat little team in Eddie Quillan and Marian Nixon, who have the two principal roles in the picture.

The story is a cute little romance built along farcical lines. Eddie Quillan as Eddie Able is a little sort of a jack-of-all-trades looking for a job, and he manages to break into the offices of a big business man. The adaptability of the kid in any emergency that arises leads the business man to ask him what he knows of women. "Everything, I have six sisters" is the answer, and so Eddie is given the job of seeing that the B. B. man's daughter manages to marry the man that she loves.

From that point on it is a case of Eddie rejuvenating Geraldine. Marian Nixon makes Geraldine a drab little figure with horn-rimmed glasses and a penchant for dancing on everyone's feet except her own, until Eddie gets ahold of her, strips off the glasses, fluffs her hair and gives her lessons in dancing. When she is ready for the big splurge he takes her to a cabaret where the man of her heart is, and he is so surprised at her changed appearance that he almost falls off his seat. When he tries to greet her she plays the chill for him and then steps out and wins the dancing prize which is another shock to the dodging Romeo. It is going along famously, this little plot of Geraldine's, until the police drop in and start to pick up the paying guests at the cabaret who have liquor at their tables. Then Gerry is pinched and Eddie manages to get her out of the place but he remains to double for her and is stuck into a cell with the other girls. In the end when she and Eddie are turned loose she decides that Eddie is the boy for her after all.

Both Eddie Quillan and Miss Nixon give corking comedy performances, while Gaston Glass, as the straight, has but little to do. Albert Gran, as the father, handles his role nicely. Only these four in the cast matter.

Up to the point where the hero of the tale is taken to jail the picture is silent. The prison scene and that in front of the station desk are in talk.

Drawing Power: The fact that it is part talkie. Play it as a flapper love tale in which the "homely girl gets her man."

Spies

A German Made Thriller That Thrills

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS UFA production is being shown at the little 55th Street theatre. Why it didn't go into the Capitol is a question. The Capitol has done some of its record weeks with UFA productions in the past, and this one surely would have pulled the average business for the house. The only possible reason for it not having made the Broadway grade must be that it lacks sound and talk. It is a mighty good thriller, with excellent direction, good photography, and a suspense that is maintained until the last scene. What more can one ask than this.

There is a great mystery element in the story that starts the audience wondering what countries can be referred to in the yarn as it develops. Only at one point is there a flash showing Japan as one of the countries to a secret treaty. Rudolph Klein-Rogge is a combination of Stinnes and Trotsky in appearance and he has the lead as the master mind of the international spying system who has developed a formidable army of escaped convicts under his banner and who at the head of a great banking house is in possession of all the funds necessary to carry on his plottings. In the end he is disclosed as a mad-man with a complex to rule the world through financial circles.

As parties to his plottings are a number of beautiful women that he uses as his pawns. One of these whom he assigns to betray a member of the opposing secret service (evidently designed to be that of Great Britain) falls in love with him and these two finally expose the master mind. But there are secret passages, fast flying planes. Shootings, stabbings, betrayals one right after the other in the picture. There is also a sex flash where one of the girl spies gets into the home of the Japanese ambassador and exercises her feminine wiles to lull him into security so that she can steal the copy of the treaty.

The picture is marvelously well cast. Klein-Rogge gives a great performance, and Gerda Maurus, playing the lead, is a good looking Swedish type that will get over. Lien Deyers, who has the role of the vamping spy who goes after the Jap, is a good looking blonde. Willy Fritsch, playing the lead opposite Miss Maurus, manages to work up a couple of love scenes to a pitch that the flaps will like.

Drawing Power: Put it over as a thriller with a great all foreign cast and good direction.

Girls Gone Wild

Just Wild Enough To Fall For

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

SUE CAROL does what traveling there is in "Girls Gone Wild," and she doesn't go very far. Fox Studios turned this one out—just the old, old tale of a madcap daughter of a millionaire and a poor boy.

It falls in the classification of ordinary program pictures. There's just enough zip in it; just enough story and just good enough titles to keep it from being "just another" film. Audiences won't go mad over it—either for or against.

The finest thing about it is the fact that it gave William Russell a chance to play an interesting and well-acted part before his final curtain fell. Russell is cast as the speed cop's father. He handles the role naturally, cleverly and sincerely. It's a celluloid requiem for the deceased veteran that he wouldn't have regretted. It gave him a chance to play as "human" a role as he could have asked.

The story concerns the daughter of a millionaire and the son of a speed cop. Nick Stuart has the juvenile role.

There's nothing big about the picture. It was made under an economy schedule as a regular program release, and stands up fairly well in this classification.

Russell really steals the picture from the two youngsters by his fine characterization. Nick Stuart is appealing as his son. Sue Carol is neither better nor worse.

Roy D'Arcy is the bold, bad bootlegger who gets bumped off. The minute he makes his appearance everyone knows he is the villain. D'Arcy apparently cannot conceal the fact that he is the heavy—his instant sneer and strut is reminiscent of the old 10-20-30 melodrama days when the villain left nothing to an audience's imagination.

The titles were, on the whole, rather effective. The picture is saved quite a bit by being well-edited, the continuity disclosing a rare smoothness for a film of this type.

There is some good acting in spots, and the cast, on the whole, is very capable.

Drawing Power: Sue Carol and Nick Stuart have been built into a starring team by Fox; and may mean something. It won't break any house records, but can be exploitated as a tale of the wildness of the younger generation, with a good cast.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films. To be Released, Mar. 10. Length, 6,000 ft. Story by Bert Millhauser. Scenario by Beulah Marie Dix. Photography by Arthur Edeson. Directed by Lew Seiler. Silent Version Only.

The Lone Wolf's Daughter

Another Of The Series That Is Fair

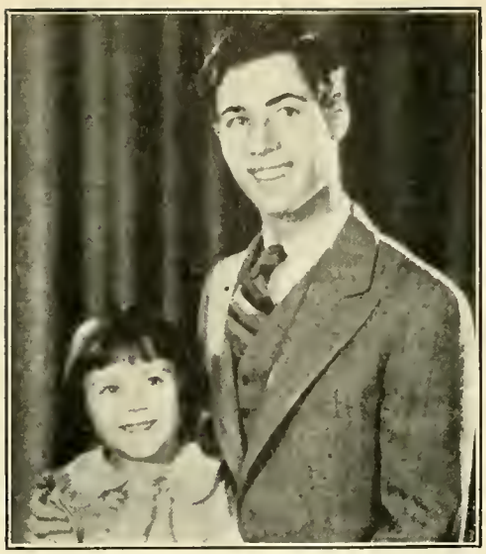
(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is another feature episode in the "Lone Wolf" series. You remember "The Lone Wolf" don't you? He was that daring French crook who was created by Louis Joseph Vance. Now he has come to America and has a ward, an adopted daughter to be precise, and to keep with the title. The picture was produced by Columbia and thought worthy of a week at the big Roxy where it is playing currently. It isn't anything that you or your audience is going to rave about, but it does serve to entertain for an hour although you do not carry away any vivid impression of the picture.

Playing at the Roxy the production must be judged from a big house standard, and as such it falls short. For the average house that needs product it will suffice but it isn't so tremendous a picture that the Roxy should have a play it, except to disclose that that house is in need of pictures.

The story deals with the love affair of the young ward of the crook, who has an admirer who is the son of a wealthy and well known family. It is to protect the girl that the Lone Wolf has reformed and is leading a very circumspect life. But there are crooks in the society circle in which his ward is moving and they, when they recognize the Lone Wolf, try to force him to assist them in their plans under the pain of exposure. For a time it appears that things are going to go badly for the former master mind of crookdom, but in the end he manages to turn up the real crooks, protect the happiness of his ward, win a girl for himself, and have the pleasure of getting before the camera with her for the clinch at the final fadeout.

This is a part-talkie, it has a synchronized score and a theme number that is sung during part of the action.



Bert Lytell again has the role of "The Lone Wolf" and, although he shows that he is aging, manages to do fairly well with what is assigned him. Gertrude Olmstead plays opposite him and looks very pretty in some of the shots. The juvenile love interest is taken care of in the roles assigned to Donald Keith and Florence Allen. Robert Elliott, as a police inspector, and Charles Gerrard and Lilyan Tashman, as a couple of crooks, are also in the cast. Gerrard is convincing, but we are sorry to say that Miss Tashman does not appear at her best either as to looks or work in this picture. Albert Rogell directed and handled the production nicely, especially the television idea which is used twice in the story.

Drawing Power: Where you have played "The Lone Wolf" this should have some draw. Bert Lytell is still a favorite in some sections.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures. Silent length, 6,214 feet. Sound length, 6,339 feet. Running time, an hour and one minute. Released, Feb. 18, 1929. Directed by Al. Rogell.

"The Framing Of The Shrew"
"Post-Mortems"
"Meet The Missus"

(Christie Talking Shorts)

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

WATCH the short-reel producers. They're going to make time in the talkies. They have an ideal chance for speed in innovations. They can get a quicker reaction concerning what the public thinks. And, naturally, they have to build for snappy effects. Remember what the slapstick silents did for production in the good old days? A lot. And that's what the new short talkies will do for technique.

I looked at a group of three two-reel Christie comedies recently and they are an ingenious collection. One was "The Framing of the Shrew" by Octavus Roy Cohen, with an all-colored cast. Another was "Post Mortems," with Raymond Griffith featured, and the third was "Meet the Missus," with Mr. and Mrs. James Gleason, prominent stage personalities, in leading roles.

I'd rate "The Framing of the Shrew" easily the best. These colored comedies are a novelty, as anyone knows who happened to see "The Melancholy Dame." "Framing of the Shrew" is a better picture. It has a well-worked out plot, and more punch than its predecessor. There is one scene where a couple of the actors walk down the street talking all the while that is almost as smart a trick as anything in that big winner "In Old Arizona." The acting throughout is excellent because it's so natural. It was directed by Arvid E. Gillstrom.

Bridge players will find "Post Mortems" amusing. To those who follow pictures closely the debut of Raymond Griffith on the talking screen will be a magnet. Griffith is the chap "who lost his voice," as is well known to the ardent film fan. In "Post Mortems" it might be said—he recovers it. More than one person who has learned about Ray's voice has doubtless wanted to hear it. In "Post Mortems" it sounds just right, and it has a delightful charm of individuality that Ray's friends well know. A. Leslie Pierce was the director.

"Meet the Missus" is an amusing bit, rating fair to good. It is from a stage playlet—the story of a couple of show people, hubby in his cups attracted by another lady, who turns out to be an old schoolmate of the wife. When hubby comes home to tell his spouse he is leaving her, and brings the other woman with him, there is a reunion between the two "girls" that leaves him out in the cold. Al Cohn was scenarist. Arvid E. Gillstrom directed this one, also.

The Dummy

Pleasing Little Talking Comedy

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is not a world beater but it is a pleasing little talking comedy. It should get some money at the box office and amuse the audiences once they are in. Ruth Chatterton is featured together with Fred Kohler, Jackie Oakie, Mickey Bennett and ZaSu Pitts. Miss Chatterton's name should have some value at the box office after "The Doctor's Secret," but her role isn't of sufficient importance in this picture to have the audience notice her work. In reality ZaSu Pitts and little Mickey Bennett run away with this picture.

"The Dummy," in its original form, was a stage comedy written by Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford. Herman J. Mankiewicz adapted it for the screen and Robert Milton directed the production. Mr. Milton is a stage director of note, he was imported to Hollywood by Paramount to stage talking productions. This is evidently the first that he has done and his work hasn't the swing and scope that a picture director would have given it, but he has provided touches that are splendid in their detail. His handling of the youngster, Mickey Bennett, is particularly good, and he does make Miss Pitts stand out in her comedy characterization.

The story is that of a fresh young Bowery kid who manages to get a job in a private detective agency. The youngster has among other accomplishments the ability to speak the deaf and dumb code, which is utilized by his employer in trapping a ring of kidnappers who steal the children of wealthy families. The opening sequences show the youngster getting his job by outwitting scores of other boys after it, and then proceeds to plant the plot. A couple has been separated, their child has been stolen and each believes the other is the guilty one. In reality a real band of kidnappers have the child. The detective plants his "dummy" for them to pick up so that he can follow the trail. Through the "dummy" he rounds up the gang, restores the stolen child and effects a reconciliation of the estranged couple.

Ruth Chatterton plays the wife and is on only at the opening and again at the finish of the picture. The same is true of Frederic March, who plays her husband. Neither have much to do. John Cromwell, another stage director from New York, has the role of the detective and his slow tempo in playing offsets the speed of the comedy. Richard Tucker in one of the crook roles handles himself splendidly. But don't overlook ZaSu Pitts, she is going to be the Louise Fazenda of the talkies.

Drawing Power: Good clean entertainment with a lot of laughs that should please any type of audience. Ruth Chatterton should pull, especially if you have played "The Doctor's Secret" ahead of this one.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Sound Length, 5,354 feet. Running time, fifty-seven minutes. Released, Mar. 9, 1929. Directed by Robert Milton.

Hot Stuff

Just Lukewarm

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

"HOT STUFF" is very cold audience fare. Perhaps First National wanted to take a flyer in producing a college picture with an all-youth staff. Anyway, the story is from a magazine yarn called "Bluffers" by Robert S. Carr, a 23 year old. Mervyn LeRoy, First National's youthful director, handled the megaphone, and Alice White is starred. Try as hard as they would, it was impossible to steam up the picture to even a lukewarm temperature. In fact, audience value is decidely tepid.

It's presented as a supposed "wild" tale of college life.

The warmest thing in "Hot Stuff" is a sequence of shots in an ice skating rink. When Louise Fazenda attempts to remain erect on the blades, the picture boils into a storm of laughs. Otherwise Louise doesn't have a whole lot to do and her character as the maiden aunt is quite overdrawn—in fact, she steals what little glory there is in the picture.

Charles Sellon gets a few laughs in the ice skating sequences by playing the knight-in-distress for Louise. After acting as a cushion for several of her spills he obtains a chair and shove it beneath her at the slightest symptom of a fall. As a result Louise tumbles for Charlie in the closing sequences of the picture—not that it means anything to the film or the story—but it does provide a slight bracer at the end.

Throughout the unreeling of the picture, the producers attempt to inject an air of blase collegiate atmosphere. All sorts of attempts are made to add tabasco enough to make it smoulder. They even have Alice risk her reputation by "going to a fraternity house at night," which is wildness in story license apparent to anyone who ever went to college.

A flock of pun titles, most of which sounded as if an ancient copy of College Humor had been badly handled, were spotted frequently to carry the story. Nobody seems to know whether the picture is carrying the titles, or the titles trying to carry the picture. At any rate, most of the smart-cracking sub-heads failed to click.

The skating gag of Fazenda's and a stunt with a telephone are two bright spots in the sea of mediocre and time-worn film situations The 'phone gag is new—at least to the preview audience. The fraternity brothers of Alice White's "big moment" harass the young couple with 'phone calls purporting to come from undertakers, ice companies and other similar films. To thwart them the glowing young swain lifts the receiver from the hook. The boys sitting at the other end of the wire listen in on the ensuing necking party. It was a bright idea that should not have been wasted on the picture.

First National introduces a gang of youngsters in support of Alice White. William Bakewell, Buddie Messinger and Ben Hall play parts of giddy college youths. The background is furnished by a dozen other young men and an equal number of bubbling flappers—quite unlike the average sorority girl.

The theme of the story is very weak. The picture as filmed is just prep school puppy love, with the players doing things that even the wildest of present present-day college students wouldn't attempt. By no stretch of the imagination is "Hot Stuff" a tale of modern college life.

Drawing Power: Bill it as a comedy on wild college life with Alice White and Louise Fazenda—and hope for the best. Protect yourself and don't make promises.

Produced and distributed by First National. Story by Robert S. Carr. Screen version by Louis Stevens. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Cameraman: Sid Hickox.

"The Brox Sisters"
(Universal Singing Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is the first of the Universal short subjects in talk to be seen by this reviewer. It compares more than favorably with any of the shorts of standard vaudeville acts that has been made to date. Instead of just taking these three girls and sticking them before a camera with a "mike" they have built a production around them. This may have been the idea of Ben Holmes who directed. If it was, it's a good one, and it still remains good even if he didn't think of it. The girls are placed in a night club scene and do three numbers. The songs selected were "'Round Evening," "How About Me" and "What You Gonna Do Do Now." The voices of the girls register nicely and the general atmosphere of the nite club is well carried out.

"This Way Please"
(Stern-Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THE adventures of the celluloid and cartoon twins, Mike and Ike, are continued in this new excerpt of their lives from the Stern Bros. studio. Samuel Newfield directed and Young and La Salle portray the team. There is a fair amount of comedy in this one.

The pair are shown in an escapade with a cop and their misadventures in a hotel where they burn 'em up as bell hops. The first sequence, which forms the first reel, shows the two as would-be dentists and in this scene a few laughs are achieved. The fun picks up in the hotel and you have your choice of pantsless, skyscraper and rough and tumble comedy which, while not new, can at least be relied on to arouse a few gurgles.

"Confession"
(M-G-M—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A GOOD short containing strong irony and tense dramatic touches. Directed by Lionel Barrymore (his first try at film megaphoning) with expressive acting and delivering of lines from Robert Ames and Carroll Nye. Metro is coupling it with "Broadway Melody" at the Astor and it more than makes a dent in the program.

The story is that of a soldier who goes to France to fight but instead meets death from a motor lorry. He has a confession to make just before he dies, but his buddy is not around when his end draws nigh and his confession falls on the uncomprehending ears of two Frenchwomen.

A LADY SAYS WHAT SHE THINKS!

"The fastest stepping I've seen lately, not excepting even the hoofers in the talkie shorts, is that done by the Motion Picture News. The Weekly Box-Office Check-Up certainly boils down vital information to essentials. It is going to be a friend in need as we navigate the uncharted waters of the present moving picture business.

"I think your Showman's Ad Tips are the greatest yet.

"Time was when the exhibitor could buy a block of pictures and run them like grinding out sausages without knowing much more about the picture than its title. That time belongs to the dead past. We have to know all there is to know, and it has to be plenty, or we are wondering where the crowd has gone to and why."

Broadway Show Reviews

Colony's New M. C., Kahn Band Offer Good Show

Walter O'Keefe From Gallant Club Clicks With House; "Geraldine" Feature

Dave Werner tried another sample of entertainment at the Colony starting last Saturday in an effort to hit upon something that will please the customers and attract business to the house. Seemingly he has been a little more successful this time and the entertainment provided seems much to the liking of those frequenting the house. He secured Walter O'Keefe, who acts as the master of ceremonies at Barney Gallant's night club, to act in a similar capacity at the house. O'Keefe proves himself a sort of a Broadway Will Rogers with his wise cracks at topical subjects, and in addition he manages to put over a number in a manner that sells it to the audience. Backing O'Keefe is Sam Kahn's stage band. Sam himself is no mean M. C. himself and, while at times he seems to try a little too hard to make his audience like him, he nevertheless gets over to them nicely. A little reserve won't hurt Sam with the Broadway bunch. His band is a nice combination that handles numbers very well.

The show runs a little short of two hours. Opening it with the stage show is seemingly good policy. Walter O'Keefe shows up after Kahn and his boys have had a whirl at the audience. He talks about Hoover and Cal, and sings a number of his own "Grace You Must Be Crazy," topical as it hits Cal moving back to the $32 a month home and his wife complaining about it. Then Kahn puts over two numbers, "If I Had You" and "Black Maria," the latter a little too hot to show well on the stage. Eleanor Coll, in a toe dance, is next, and then the band works up a real novelty in "I'm Wild About Horns." Eleanor Coll and her brother Bud, who is in the orchestra, offer another bit of stepping to be followed by O'Keefe with his own number "Since the Movies Started to Talk," which is also in "Whoopee." The final touch is slipped over by Eddie Prince with a neat bit of hoofing. The stage show runs thirty-one minutes.

A Universal shot of the Brox Sisters singing three numbers compares with any of the singing shorts of standard vaudeville acts, except that this one has something of a production built around it. It runs ten minutes, and following came an organ solo of four minutes and the feature running a minute over an hour.

Male Chorus In "Navajo" Revue Feature of Capitol's Stage Show

SIXTEEN men wearing ten-gallon hats and dressed in black and white checked cowboy costumes were the outstanding feature of the "Navajo" revue with their singing at the Capitol this week. On the screen the house is playing "Alias Jimmy Valentine" direct from its run at the Astor, and it looked on Monday as though the picture would stick for a second week. With the feature running an hour and thirteen minutes, the whole bill took just a little more than two hours to play.

Right Between The Eyes

The stage entertainment, however, hit the audience right between the eyes early in the week. It was one of those stage shows that had them applauding early and often. In fact, the audience acted just as one of those in the old days when there was a good vaudeville show at the Palace on a Monday night.

For an overture "Espana" was offered for seven minutes, after which came the combination of M-G-M silent news and the Fox Movietone. The silent shots showed a scene in France with the African troops being decorated and the N. Y. Yanks in training in Florida. The Fox Movietone held nothing that would cause talk except the camel mart in Cairo. The San Berdoo orange picking scene was so evidently staged that the audience got restless.

The "Navajo" revue, an Arthur Knorr production, followed and held the stage for thirty-two minutes. The Dave Schooler Capitolians were in turkey red Russian blouses with a sash about their midriffs and wore beaded headbands that gave them a real Indian appearance. A baritone solo opened the revue with the singer as an Indian standing against the sky background, a touch that would make an effective prologue for "Redskin." This was followed by the first appearance of the 16 Singing Rangers, with the 32 Chester Hale girls following them on in cowboy costumes for a fast dance routine. The numbers were old ones that fitted, with "Pony Boy" and "My Pony from Old Cheyenne" included. Dave Schooler did a burlesque of Will Rogers that got a laugh after which he and the orchestra worked out a comedy number "Where Are the Feathers the Indians Used to Wear?" Morton Spurr, on next, delivered a corking dance hit and had the audience asking for more, after which the Rangers were on again, this time with Lia Maris doing a number. Schooler and Evelyn Wilson offered a two-act with he doing straight for her that got the audience, after which Rome and Gaut, with their comedy specialty, mopped up. An effective Indian dance by the Hale girls finished off nicely.

A mighty good all around show that certainly pleased the house.

Roxy's Three Outstanding Units Aid "Lone Wolf's Daughter" Entertain

WITH three outstanding stage units in the program at the Roxy this week, one of them a repeat of the very delightful ballet "A Quaint Bouquet" of a few weeks ago, the show proves most entertaining. The feature of the screen entertainment is the Columbia production "The Lone Wolf's Daughter." It is a passable feature.

"How About Me?" is used for the opening number with a soloist seated atop of the organ for three minutes at the opening of the show. It is followed by a ten-minute overture entitled "Fosteriana," which is a medley of the songs of a century ago written by this young American composer which still live today. The arrangement is most effective and was heartily applauded.

The Roxy Ensemble in a most effective stage setting in which the placing of baby spots in the foots developed some exceedingly interesting shadowgraph effects against the dimly lighted set, with the "Song of the Bayou" as their vocal offering received the unqualified applause of the house. This number was the winner of the second prize in the Victor Talking Machine Contest. Rube Bloom was the composer. It only ran four minutes but held the audience all the time.

Roxyettes Effective

"Jade," a pretty ballet effect, was next for five minutes, and then came the "Hand Drill" by the 32 Roxyettes for another three minutes, and those girls certainly showed their stuff in this bit. A combination of selected news shots and Fox Movietone held the next eleven minutes.

"The Quaint Bouquet" was on just ahead of the feature.

A bevy of beauties and Reginald Denny are seen in the new Universal feature comedy, "His Lucky Day"

Paramount's Sennett Talking Comedy Shows Audiences Strong For Slapstick

YOU can't get away from it, picture house audiences, no matter what calibre they are, in a million dollar film palace or a store show, are still strong for the old slapstick form of comedy. At the Paramount on Broadway this week the audience is howling its head off at a Mack Sennett talking comedy entitled "The Bride's Relations." It is a talking comedy but it still has all the old hoke in it, and how they love it. As a matter of fact this comedy is the outstanding feature of the show. The feature of the bill is Paramount's release "The Dummy" with Ruth Chatterton featured; it might have been more successful had the earlier portion of the dialog been of sufficient volume so that those in front could have heard it. It is a fair little feature with some laughs and a few thrills, and Zasu Pitts steals the honors away from Miss Chatterton.

Dave Hates Himself

By the by, if you want to get an idea of how Dave Rubinoff hates himself get a load of this program billing: "'Rubinoff Rhapsody' played by the Paramount Orchestra, violin solo by Rubinoff, Rubinoff conducting." That's going some for three lines with his name mentioned three times. And as for the "Rhapsody" it would have been as well had he played something else. Seemingly his only reason for composing or arranging it was to give himself opportunity to play the violin solo. Eight minutes wasted.

Eight minutes were devoted to the Paramount News silent shots which showed the N. Y. Yanks in training, views of the Sharkey-Stribling Fight, the Luna Park Zoo in Los Angeles, then the trailer for next week's feature and finally the U. S. Army Tank Corps in action in the snow.

Had Them Screaming

"The Bride's Relations" held the next fourteen minutes of the bill and had the audiences screaming with laughs after which Jesse Crawford took the next six minutes for an organ arrangement of "Marrha" in which he incorporated "Marie" and "If I Had You." Crawford is seemingly slipping with the Paramount audiences for he isn't getting the applause return that was his in the days when he first came to Broadway. It might be a good idea to send Crawford on a trip around the circuit and play him up as a feature, and then on his return to Broadway he would again be a drawing card.

The Stage Revue

The stage revue was entitled "Bubbling Over" presented by C. A. Niggemeyer with Boyd Senter featured. Elaine Pring and Carl Byal seated in a pendulum effect over the heads of the stage orchestra sing the opening number after which the chorus do an upside down number which clears the way for Ted Claire and the orchestra to do "Blossoms." The Williams Sisters next step in and clean up the hit of the revue with a number called "Bubblin' Over" in which they do their eccentric comedy dancing. Two encores were compelled by the audience. A very pretty effect was used for "Sunshine of Roses" with Miss Pring and the boy once again in the spot. A rose arbor that flies was dropped to surround the orchestra. Boyd Senter with his Clarinet started with "Little Thing Called Love" and followed it with St. Louis Blues and the audience didn't want him to leave the stage. He finally had to promise to return in the finale before they would cease applauding. Markell and Faun a comedy dance team pulled some laughs and for the finale the soprano and tenor were on for a bridal scene with the chorus as a background of bridesmaids. Thirty six minutes of good fast entertainment that the audience liked.

The feature, "The Dummy," runs fifty-seven minutes, which gives the show a running time of two hours and ten minutes.

Cast of "Mother's Boy" Composed of B'way Stars

Pathe has finished casting for "Mother's Boy," first talking picture for Morton Downey. Other Broadway players scheduled for featured roles will devote their evenings to the various stage productions in which they are appearing and in the daytime will work in the film at the Pathe Studios in New York.

Besides Downey, who will sing five or six songs in the picture, the cast also includes Barbara Bennett (whom he married recently), Helen Chandler, Beryl Mercer, Osgood Perkins, Brian Dunleavy, Lorin Baker.

Bradley Barker will begin directing shortly.

AN EXHIBITOR SAYS—

"Kindly accept our heartfelt congratulations upon the initial appearance of the Box-office Check-Up which appears in this week's issue of Motion Picture News.

"To the writer's mind, it is one of the most helpful ideas ever instituted in any trade paper, and so complete in detail that an exhibitor can tell at a glance the comparative value of any one or number of pictures. Keep it up, for it's great stuff!"

Schnitzer Says Talkies Will Aid Legitimate Stage

RKO President Thinks New Competition Will Make Stronger Shows

J. I. Schnitzer, president of RKO Productions, is among those who do not think the talking picture has doomed the legitimate stage. He believes on the other hand that the talkies will stimulate the legitimate theatre to greater effort and finer production through the wholesome competition it will afford.

Mr. Schnitzer says the talkie is bound to have its effect on the legitimate stage in the respect that the cheap, gaudy and tinselly show without merit or ideas and with inferior talent will not survive. Neither will the motion picture production of similar calibre.

In discussing the situation Mr. Schnitzer says:

"Where the legitimate theatre offers patrons their money's worth, it will flourish. We have evidence of this in the very successful productions now along Broadway and on the road.

"The last thing that motion picture producers wish is for the annihilation of the legitimate theatre. The legitimate theatre is the source from which, to a large extent producers of motion pictures must draw their material. As an instance 'Rio Rita,' 'Hit The Deck' and 'Ringside' have been acquired by Radio Pictures as being ideal for the spoken picture."

New Ann Arbor House Built For Sound Entirely

Ann Arbor, Mich., is to have one of the first houses in the country built from the ground up with the paramount idea of devoting it entirely to sound, rather than building it and later adapting it to talkie demands. The plans provide for wiring and installation of all necessary equipment at once to make possible both the Vitaphone and Movietone types of presentation.

The new house is to be built on the site of the Arcade Theatre, twice swept by flames in a two months' period. It will seat from 1,200 to 1,500 and will cost $250,000. Announcements from the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., say construction is to start at once.

Well acquainted with the intricacies of both stage and screen work, Thomas Edeson, actor, and William De Mille, director and ex-playwright, can tackle any problem the talkies may offer. They recently celebrated the twenty-fourth anniversary of their theatrical association with the filming of M-G-M's "The Man Higher Up"

U. S. Reported Probing N. W. On Interchangeability

Quiz Said To Be Based On Complaints To Myers And Atty. General

The question of interchangeability of sound pictures on the different reproducing devices is to be investigated by agents of the Department of Justice, according to advices from different sources.

It is said that investigators are to be sent to Minneapolis and the Milwaukee territory to look over the various sound systems, according to "Greater Amusements." A number of complaints are said to have been received on the curtailment of service on the part of some of the distributing companies. Some of these complaints are said to have been filed with Abram F. Myers, head of Allied States Association, and others directly with the attorney general's office.

The Northwest investigation is partly verified by advices from Washington, D. C. to the effect that investigators have been assigned to delve into the problem.

James Barton Making New One-Reeler For Paramount

James Barton's next short talking picture for Paramount is to be in one reel and titled "It Happened to Him." It will include two of Barton's popular vaudeville song and comedy skits, "The Spell of the Blues" and "Annabelle Lee."

Harbord Points RCA Activities In Annual Statement

Corporation Has Made Giant Strides In Amusement Field In Year

In submitting his annual report to the stockholders of the Radio Corporation of America, General James G. Harbord, president of the corporation points out the extensive activities of the company during the past year.

Since the organization of the RCA Photophone early in the year, he says that contracts have been made with the RKO corporation for the furnishing of Photophone equipment to theatres owned or controlled by that company, and that contracts have also been made and executed for the installation of Photophone equipment in approximately 100 other houses.

The report tells of the acquisition of a substantial interest in the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and of FBO Productions. Concluding that part of the report General Harbord says:

"Through the arrangements above outlined the Radio Corporation of America acquires an important position in the amusement field. It has a substantial interest in the production, distribution and exhibition of sound pictures with increased facilities for furnishing entertainment on records, on films and through the air, in the theatre and in the home.

In the statement the comparative figures of the company for the years 1926, 1927 and 1928 are summarized as follows:

	1928	1927	1926
Gross Income..	$101,851,603.18	$65,418,620.62	$61,157,286.64

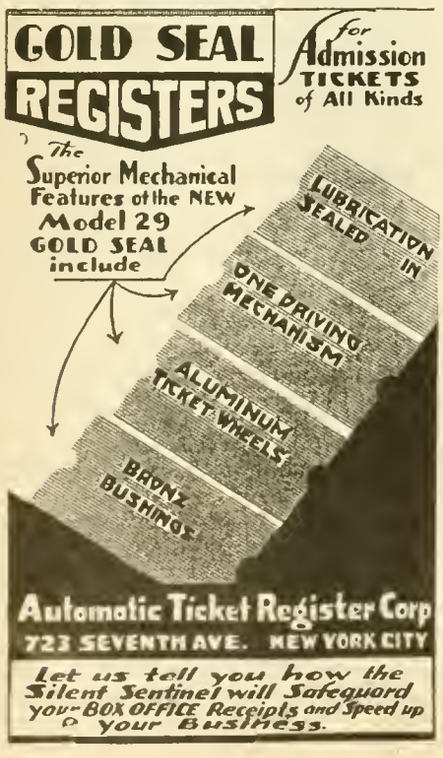
Sound Pictures In England Are Interchangeable

Otterson Says Same Rules Obtain There As In America

The recent statement attributed to J. E. Otterson in England with regard to interchangeability aroused such a storm of protest that it has been considerably modified to conform with the statement made by Mr. Otterson with regard to the same question in this country.



Product of licensees of Western Electric Company or other producers may be shown in England on such equipment as comes up to the required standard of reproduction required by Western Electric. If producers agree the tonal quality of other producers meets the Western Electric standard interchangeability is granted, leaving the question up to distributors.

Reports from England are to the effect that the issue is still considerably clouded and that it will eventually reach Parliament, with Sir Phillip Cunliffe-Lister taking the lead in trying to determine settlement of the issue. Meanwhile exhibitors in England are considerably agitated and the press declares the policy is a move to defeat the quota law.

Fox Planning Immediate Sequel To "In Old Arizona"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Mar. 7.—Fox is planning immediate production of a sequel to "In Old Arizona." It will be an all-talking Western with the title "The Cisco Kid," starring Warner Baxter. Raoul Walsh will direct.

"U" Trailers To Ask Talkie Opinions

IN order to secure further reactions on talking pictures from the general public, Carl Laemmle is planning the use of a trailer at the finish of all Universal dialogued productions asking opinions. The trailer, which will be added next month, will be worded to the effect:

"This is a Universal talking picture. I am anxious to know how you like it. Write me your opinion, also how you like talking pictures."

Cinephone Will Open New Sound Studio On Coast

Plans for the establishment of a new sound recording studio in Hollywood were made this week by Powers Cinephone, and negotiations for the purchase of a suitable site were started immediately by the representatives of Pat Powers now located in Los Angeles.

William E. Garity, electrical expert and chief engineer of Powers Cinephone who has been associated with the entire devolopment of the Powers sound recording and reproducing devices will leave for Los Angeles on March 15th to supervise the installation of the recording apparatus in the new studio and to act as technical advisor to Walt Disney, who will install a Powers Cinephone Recorder in his Animated cartoon studio under a license signed last week.

RCA Photophone Opens Branches In Four Key Cities

Four new branch offices of RCA Photophone, Inc., have been opened in the midwest and west to enable the company to maintain closer contact with motion picture theatre owners. Installation and other problems will be settled directly through these offices.

The cities in which new branches have been installed are Chicago, in charge of C. F. Bamman; Denver, in charge of G. B. Cummings; San Francisco, in charge of Mortimer O. Smith, and Toledo, in charge of E. M. Smith. Other offices are to be opened in different cities in the near future.

"Rainbow Man" Synchronized By Sound-On-Film

The Sono-Art production of "The Rainbow Man" will be released as a sound-on-film feature, with recording done by the Western Electric system. The picture stars Eddie Dowling and is being made at the Metropolitan Sound Studios in Hollywood. Three sound engineers, H. W. Bergman, Robert Harper and Dodge Dunning are in charge of the recording, with Fred Newmeyer directing. George Crone has been engaged as film editor for the production.

Pacent Device For Film To Be Ready By June

Projectors To Be Equipped For $500 Cost Over Disc Prices

The Pacent sound-on-film attachment to the present disc reproducing device will be ready for installation in theatres by June 1, according to an announcement by Louis G. Pacent, president of the Pacent Reproducer Company. Projectors will be equipped for $500 a machine over the cost of the sound-on-disc reproducer.

Only recently the Pacent outfit was placed on the market and many installations have been made but for the present they permit only of the disc system of reproduction. Engineers have been busy for the past two years on the new development, however, and they have now perfected it to a point where the company is satisfied it will come up to and far exceed any requirement demanded for interchangeability. A number of the larger companies are now reported as servicing the Pacent disc machines.

Visible Sound, Audible Light Demonstrated

John B. Taylor, General Electric engineer demonstrated visible sound and audible light by a Photophone device at a dinner of the American Institute of Science in New York during the week. He utilized the photoelectric tube, electric pickup, amplifiers and sound reproducers in making light visible and sound audible.

A light beam moving about the room produces music when it hits a mirror target, the music stopping when the light leaves the target, or is intercepted. Taylor calls the process "narrow casting."

"Molly And Me" Talking Sequences Are Under Way

Tiffany-Stahl is busy with the talking and singing sequences of "Molly and Me," starring Belle Bennett, with Joseph E. Brown in the leading male role. The recording is being done in New York under the RCA Photophone system. Sound sequences are being directed by Albert Ray under the supervision of Rudolph Flothow. Alberta Vaughn is also in New York for her first appearance before the microphone.

Tom McKean Is Appointed Cinephone Representative

Tom McKean, president of Progressive Pictures, Inc., of St. Louis, is now representing Powers Cinephone in Missouri, Southern Illinois and Tennessee under an appointment made this week by E. J. Smith, vice-president in charge of sales of Power Cinephone. McKean will continue to make his headquarters in St. Louis.

Preview Emotions Are Now Clocked

Producers Using New "Mike" Device To Time Laughs, Etc.

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 7.—Preview experiments with timing laughs, waits, and emotional reactions in general, are now being made by various producers. Heretofore studios have had no definite method of ascertaining the value of lines or business for emotional reaction during the making of pictures. The latest stunt is a microphone connected with a tiny meter, which is used in the first two or three previews held before public audiences. Through the microphones, the meter registers the length of time audiences laugh after comedy lines or business; if spontaneous applause breaks out, the measure of the applause is secured; or—if any hooting or hissing takes place, just how long that emotional outburst runs is recorded.

While it is generally true that no two audiences react alike to business or dialogue, through several previews, a general average is ascertained. Oftimes too much time is allowed between lines or business for laughs which never come. Other times, dialogue following certain bits in pictures is lost entirely by the reaction of the audience.

The general average is turned over to the film and sound cutters. The picture is recut and reassembled for final preview and okay, with the average waits in, or the former waits in, or the former waits out. In this way, producers hope to overcome the most natural obstacle to spontaneity which sound pictures present.

Billie Dove To Sing In "Careers"

Billie Dove, First National star, will sing in her first dialogue picture, "Careers," which is now under way at First National-Vitaphone studios. A romantic duet is now being written for the star and Antonio Moreno, her leading man by Al Bryan and George W. Meyer, songwriters. These writers have also written a ballad for the same picture which will be sung by Carmel Myers. It is entitled "I Love You, I Hate You for Making a Fool of Me."

Vilma Banky's Voice

Samuel Goldwyn is making tests of Vilma Banky's singing voice, which has been found to be a very pleasing but untrained mezzo-soprano. The outcome of the tests will determine whether or not Miss Banky will sing "This Is Heaven," the theme song of her newest picture of the same name; Jack Yellen and Harry Akst are authors of the song, which was written specially for this production.

Stock Quotations Part Of Actor's Contract

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—A well known free-lance actor was recently called in for a big part by a major studio. On being told, in response to his query, that his dressing room did not have a telephone, he turned the part down.

Asked by one of the company officials as to why a telephone was so necessary, he told them that he transacted most of his stock business during his lunch hour. The executive laughed and exclaimed: "We'll do better than a telephone. In my office there is a stock ticker. I'll have a boy relay quotations to you every twenty minutes on whatever stocks you want."

The player took the role.

"Constant Wife"

Clive Brook will play the husband, and Paul Lukas the lover of Ruth Chatterton when she appears in the title role of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife" to be made into a talking film by Paramount.

Lena Malena

Lena Malena has returned to Hollywood after completing a featured part in the German production "The Burning Heart," which Paramount will release in this country.

"Pink Tights"

Clarence Badger will direct Clara Bow in her next starring picture for Paramount, "Pink Tights."

To Follow "The Canary"

Paramount is going strong for murder melodramas. With "Canary Murder Case" currently released; and "Studio Murder Mystery" now being completed; the company will shortly start production on "The Greene Murder Case," by S. S. Van Dine. Cast will include William Powell, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Brian, Paul Lukas and Eugene Palette. Bartlett McCormack is writing the dialogue and Frank Tuttle will direct.

La Rocque At Fox Lot

Rod La Rocque will be featured by Fox in "The One Woman Idea," to be directed by Berthold Viertel, Hungarian picture director, imported by Fox. Marceline Day will have supporting role.

Fox Borrows Dorothy Ward

Dorothy Ward, Pathe stock player, has been borrowed by Fox for one of the principal roles in "Joy Street," Raymond Cannon directing. Others in the cast are Charles Eaton, Lois Moran, Nick Stuart, Rex Bell, Sally Phipps, Florence Allen and Marie Alba.

"Help Yourself To Heaven"

Olive Borden will be starred in "Help Yourself to Heaven," the first RKO production under the new name. William Cowan, formerly with Pathe, is to direct.

Anne Nichols Buys Property

Anne Nichols, author and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," has purchased an eight-acre estate near Hollywood for $72,500. It is understood that Miss Nichols will make her summer home on the Coast, and is likely to dabble in picture production for one of the large producers while on her annual visit.

Sue Carol At Liberty

Sue Carol was set at liberty to sign with any company last week, when Superior Judge Engs denied the petition of the Douglas MacLean Productions to restrain her from selling her services to other film companies. The action was brought by the MacLean company early in February. Miss Carol's claim was that MacLean had failed to observe the terms of her contract which required thirty days' notice on renewal of options. Such notification she claimed, was never made.

Director Gets New Contract

Mervyn LeRoy has been given a new five year contract by First National Pictures, according to a dispatch from Hollywood. His first assignment under the new arrangement will be "Little Johnny Jones," an adaptation of the George M. Cohan musical comedy.

"A Most Immoral Lady"

Forrest Halsey, contract writer at the First National-Vitaphone studios, has just been assigned the task of writing the adaptation and script for the successful Alice Brady play, "A Most Immoral Lady," which is to be Corinne Griffith's forthcoming starring vehicle.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

THIS was supposed to have happened in the Columbia Studio . . . and even if it wasn't Harry Cohn or Sam Briskin it is still a good yarn and a true one . . . "A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in the malamute saloon" read a caption turned in by a title writer . . . Cohn or Briskin, or both . . . (supposedly) sent for the title writer . . . "What does that mean?" the writer was asked . . . "Why those are the first two lines of 'The Shooting of Dan McGrew,' any one will recognize them" . . . Yeh? . . . and why is it that we didn't?" . . . "Well, ask any one else . . . this just happens to be a rare instance . . ."

THE secretary was sent for . . . she was asked if she knew what "A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in the malamute saloon" was from———"never heard of it," she said . . . the title writer tore his hair in despair . . . Ask the first one who passes by" he pleaded . . . they opened the door and a film cutter passed and was called in. . . "Do you know the poem starting 'A bunch of the boys were whooping it up' . . . ?" he was asked . . . "Sure!" he replied to the title writer's delight . . . "It's 'The Face on the Barroom Floor'"

FOR seven years Sid Silver worked in a theatre box during Phil Baker's act . . . Sid is now with M-G-M writing songs and comedy . . . and arguing with studio officials because his office isn't big enough! . . .

Roach Publicity Unit

Eleanor Packer, for the past year with Pickford-Fairbanks' publicity department, has been signed to head a newly-established Hal Roach publicity unit, under the supervision of Pete Smith, with Metro-Goldwn-Mayer. Miss Packer will be esconsed on the Hal Roach lot, with Smith overseeing her activities. The Roach studio formerly employed its own department, headed by Ray Coffin. Coffin left when the studio shut down last December.

Columbia Signs Rogell

Al Rogell has been signed by Columbia to direct an all-talker, "The Flying Marine." Rogell has been with First National for the past four years, during which time he made the major portion of the Ken Maynards, and also directed several specials, among them "The Shepherd of the Hills."

Columbia's First "52"

The first 52-week contract ever issued to an actor by Columbia Pictures was signed with Ralph Graves last week. The contract calls for his services as an actor and director, with no lay-off period included. His first assignment under the new contract will be the leading role in "The Flying Marine," with Frank Capra directing.

Guild Sets Date

April 6 has been set as the date for the annual Catholic Motion Picture Guild's Gambol. It will be held in the Philharmonic Auditorium, Los Angeles. Charles Judels is assembling a monster show of stage and screen names for the performance.

Buying "Flaming Daughters"

"Flaming Daughters" has been purchased for production by Universal. It is a novel by Warner Fabian, who was responsible for the original of "Flaming Youth." Merna Kennedy is reported slated for the leading role.

With The Warners

ZaSu Pitts has been signed by the Warners. Her first will be "The Argyle Case," starring Thomas Meighan.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

By Charles E. Lewis

Let Us Be Practical

IT is all very well to rave about how we put over those great nationally known pictures, every one of which our patrons were sitting and waiting for. And it is great stuff to hear how Manager Flumph or Manager Ooph sold "this" and "that" picture to his ever faithful patrons. But let's stop kidding ourselves along for a while and be practical, even if it is only for the time it takes to read this bit of "raving."

Since 98 per cent of the theatres must buy their product in bunches (better known among the elite as block-booking) we must continue to run all those "punk" pictures and weak sisters that are wished on us whether we like them or not. Yes, we know about the guy who says he shelves and pays for the bum ones rather than play them and have his "devoted" patrons suffer. But he just talks for publication and has not heard about that "practise what you preach" expression.

So it all boils down to one thing—"How can we sell a rotten picture to the public?"

You can't lie to the customers. They will only go out sore as hell and knock the "shootin' gallery" all over the town.

We did know one manager who spent extra money to advertise that a certain picture was rotten, and did a landslide business. But you can't pull that gag too often.

It might be worth while to admit that the feature is weak but that you are strengthening the program with special added shorts or stage diversions, if such a procedure is feasible in your theatre.

Just grin and bear it.

But, above all,—

Let us be practical.

Some Club Gossip About This—That And Everything

I try to select the article and letters which may be of greatest interest and value to the members who watch this column from week to week, so if by any chance you have sent a letter at any time which did not get mention or publication on the CLUB pages, please bear with us.

In running through my folders I have found several letters which I have not been able to use up to the present time and so I will just make mention of them here and hold them for future use.

Harry A. Goren's most interesting letter about his merchant tie-up for the "needy kids" will claim early attention. And it will be worth while reading if you are anxious to know how to put these tie-ups over successfully.

Frank S. Mickley's message about "sound" would be a good way to tell you what they (the patrons) think about talkies up Pennsylvania way.

Harry A. Aumack's little story about "sound" from New Jersey is really a true expression of positive facts and we know by this time that Harry's little opinions are really worth reading.

Ed. J. Gangley's story about his "kiddies' party," backed up with newspaper clippings, shows, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that Ed. "put it over" in a big way up in Sayre, Pa. And we have heard some nice things about Ed. from some other members up his way.

Matthew F. Anysh has a knack of saying a lot with a very few words and this habit of his runs true to form in his letter about "sound." Matthew, however, is strong for a good silent picture any time, but says the talkies are doing the business right now.

Lew Preston's letter brings his reply to "sound" questions right to a quick summary. Lew never beats about the bush—"Sound," says Lew, "Will never replace the Silent." And Lew can feel the pulse of his patrons.

Fred Johnson, from Cambridge, Ohio, can always be considered a "good adviser," Fred is endowed with both experience and common sense and his standing in the south of Ohio and the country which surrounds it placed him high in all showmen's esteem.

W. H. Whyte, of the Rialto Theatre, in Hartford, Conn., gives every question plenty of good sober thought, so that when he sits down to answer one, you may rest assured that it will not be haphazard or snap judgment which he passes on for the enlightenment of his brother members.

L. A. Wallis, from down Texas way, "ropes" his queries in a true cowboy manner and shoots the answer in right square between the eyes. How's that for getting a touch of the west? But Wallis is an old reliable of the CLUB. Gossip about other CLUB members will appear in subsequent issues of the NEWS. Keep in touch with the boys through the CLUB.

Ben Levy Says—"If Theatre Is Not Wired Don't Growl"

We sort of like this method of introducing new members that is why we are always asking for their photos. In this instance Ben came across with both the photo and a fine letter. Ben says that if your theatre does not happen to be wired, that is no excuse to lay down and die. Rather, overcome such opposition with a well-run theatre, good projection, excellent service, good short subjects and naturally the finest in silent features. Altogether, we believe in Ben's logic, there is more than a fighting chance for the silent theatre, until the time will come when sound must be accepted in all theatres, or else we find what the public really wants. Levy knows the show-business, unless we miss our guess, and he is working for an "outfit" that appreciates faithful service and good common sense, so it would not surprise us to hear that he is climbing the ladder. More about Ben in a subsequent issue, and in the mean while, don't fail to keep us posted on what you are doing.

A "Safe" Campaign To Exploit "Alias Jimmy Valentine"

Manager Charles F. Shire, of the Rialto Theatre, in Lincoln, Nebr., hit upon an original and novel stunt when he arranged with a local safe dealer to place a steel safe in the lobby of his theatre. As you will note on the photo the caption on the top called attention to the picture and the stunt. They also showed the first two numbers of the three number combination, and on the inside of the safe five dollars in gold was placed in an envelope. This gold belonged to the first one who opened the safe.

This strikes us as being a good stunt and one worthy of a place in our memory so that it can be called into use when we play either "Jimmy Valentine" or any other good crook picture which will lend itself to such exploitation. Mr. Shire tells us that he believes this stunt was responsible in a large measure for the better than average box office receipts which resulted from the run of the picture. Whether it was or not, is of very little importance; the important point being that he used an idea that started comment among his patrons and any others who might happen across the safe placed in his outter lobby, and that counts for a lot anytime. Let's hear from you again, Charlie.

"Haunted House" Served Realistic By Mgr. E. Murphy

A lobby display, built from beaverboard and made as realistic as possible, was the method E. T. Murphy, of Catskill, N. Y., used to create interest in the "Haunted House" prior to the play dates. The same idea was employed in several book store windows and tied up with mystery and detective stories by the book stores. As Murphy tells the story—"to excite interest—we built this of cardboard, a rather dilapidated dwelling, painted the roof and walls and blinds appropriately, pasted orange tissue paper over the windows with weird silouettes behind. Ground pine made very realistic trees and shrubbery and finely cut crepe paper simulated grass. The interior was lighted with a flasher....." So on the face of it we rather suspect that Murphy produced a mighty fine piece of work and it must have caused plenty of comment from the customers. The point that he brings out, and with a good purpose, is that the entire idea was built from scraps and really cost nothing more than the effort required to make them up. Showing just once again what we can do if we put our minds to work in the right direction.

South Sea Island Sand Used By Both Euering and Levey

Building up interest in "White Shadows In The South Seas" via an advance envelope containing some sand plus a caption which read: "Love Sand From the South Sea Islands" was employed recently in two separate sections of the country. William Levey of the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, L. I., and Lee Euering of the Majestic Theatrer in Springfield, Ohio, both decided it was "different" enough to warrant a shot at, and both reported it O. K.

Talking about Levey and the Beacon brings to light the fact that it is an "All Sound" theatre now and doing a marvelous business, from the reports we get from out on Long Island. Levey, as we said once before has a rather attractive two color program that is a slight variation on the ordinary announcement type of house organs. While he only goes in for direct picture titles with just enough text to create interest, he keeps away from the editorial type of program completely. For its kind and its purpose, we recommend it to other members. Drop Bill a line direct to his theatre and he will gladly mail you a copy.

Dressed Up Fronts Coming Back Into Favor Once More

Years ago when exploitation was exploitation and when exhibitors were really exhibitors, the pet scheme to make a particular picture stand out, in the eyes of the home-towners, was to doll up the front of the house like Astor's pet mule. Those were the good old days which seem to be fading into a dim and misty past.

But it has been said that everything runs in cycles and it seems to be holding true with atmospheric theatre fronts. Here we offer, for your approval (and possible inspiration) the front of the Ritz Theatre, in Irwin, Pa., and you will note that with a little common sense and some mighty fine posters they have been able to exercise a real eye-arresting front for their lobby. The posters on "Moulin Rouge" lend themselves to such exploitation and the manager of the Ritz was quick to grasp the possibilities of such a flash. The result speaks for itself and certainly makes an ordinary drab front look full of life.

To those exhibitors who are not blessed with extravagant fronts and marquees we offer this suggestion for all it is worth. But even those who have elaborate fronts can work out something different through the use of cut-outs.

Proper Operation Will Keep Your Patrons In Town

Hardly a day passes but that our mail tells us that some exhibitor is worrying about the local folks going out of town for their entertainment. This is a subject that has been discussed very often in the columns of the CLUB pages and brings the issue to the front again.

The chief reason for people going out of your town for their theatre fare is because most "small town" theatres are run like "small town" theatres, and this is a deplorable condition when you stop to consider that you can offer them the same type of pictures, projection, service and what-not that they will find in the larger centers. Just sit yourself down and figure out what the difference is between good and bad operation tactics. PROJECTION? Up-to-date equipment is both more efficient and economical than the old type. SERVICE? A few inexpensive uniforms and caps and your staff immediately looks like Times Square. Teaching the staff to render "big city" service is just a matter of making them act courteous at all times and to stop slouching like corner hoodlums. MUSIC? Orchestra or organist can certainly be instructed how they should play their music. Work up theme songs, have individual members of the pit band give solos if they are capable. Let the organist use the slide song-fest idea. LOBBY? Make it attractive by proper lighting, neat displays, shadow-boxes, if possble, nice looking cut-outs, or any other thought which occurs to you to help liven it up. The lobby and front of your theatre is your show-room, make it just that and keep at it all the time.

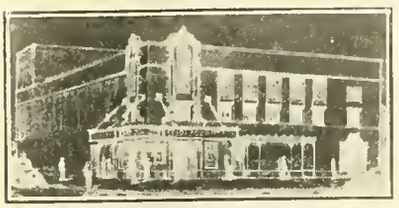
The MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB is constantly on the lookout for suggestions on theatre operation and would welcome the chance to publish your own ideas or tips on how to better the operation tactics of the theatre. Send your suggestions in now and we will gladly print them.

Thomas Kane's Big Airplane Tie-Up On "The Flying Fleet"

Thomas Kane, manager of the San Mateo Theatre, in California, sent us the attached newspaper ad. which is certainly effective and shows a perfect tie-up on Metro's "The Flying Fleet" with the Summitt Air-Craft Corp.

While we must admit that such tie-ups are not the easiest arrangement in the world to effect, chiefly because of lack of airports in most towns, this one is really above the average, and taking Kane's statement of the results, shows a most unusual amount of success. Tom tells us—"Although, we advertised giving away 1,000 free airplane rides, we finally wound up by giving away 1,900." Which shows a hundred per cent better than expected average. A full description of this great tie-up has been shipped to us from the coast by Mr. Kane, and we will expect to find much to rave about later. In the meantime, should you be fortunate enough to have a local airport, and still more fortunate enough to play as fine a picture as "The Flying Fleet," and I have personally seen this picture and vote it a perfect box office and audience production, then you have the means to effect the same kind of a tie-up as Kane did. He will be more than delighted to forward further details to any interested member. Write to him direct to the San Mateo Theatre in San Mateo, Calif., or if you prefer, write to me and I will send you the required information. Let's hear from you some more, Tom, we like such stories, and could you possibly spare me a photograph of yourself?



Glass Building A New Theatre In N. Platte, Neb.

When I recently wrote our old friend O. Fred Glass of the McCook Amusement Co., in McCook, Neb., asking why I had not heard from him for several months, his reply was the enclosed photo and a letter to advise the CLUB that he was busily engaged in building the new World Theatre in N. Platte, Neb.

Mr. Glass was one of the first members of the CLUB and always reliable when it come to passing on any information that might be of value or interest to his fellow members and now it is most pleasing to be able to announce that the McCook Corp. is adding another fine theatre to their present holdings.

The World Theatre will be modern in every respect and occupies a large piece of property in the center of N. Platte. It will seat close to 1300 people and will come under the direct supervision of Mr. Glass. We expect to publish more information about Glass and the World Theatre and will say that we sincerely hope they meet with all the success they so well deserve. The CLUB is always on the lookout to know what the various members are doing and to announce such activities to the other members. More about Glass later on.

Kimmel Appointed Resident Manager In Salisbury, N. C.

Henry T. Kimmel, who just recently joined the CLUB, has been apointed Resident Manager for all the Forsythe Amusement Co., houses in Salisbury, N. C. He has won this appointment because of his many years of experience and ability and we are more than proud that he is "one of the gang" in the CLUB.

We will introduce Mr. and Mrs. Kimmel on the accompanying picture and we poor northern "suckers" sure envy Henry and the Missus; they don't seem to be bothered by snow storms and other winter drawbacks. But then again, we can't have everything, so why complain? I'll have to think up a good excuse to have the boss send me on a trip through the south every winter. There's an idea, I'll go north in the summer and south in the winter. But I've got to be a darned good salesman to sell that idea. Hey, Hey!

Members of the CLUB or readers of the NEWS are invited to stop in at the CLUB offices and make the acquainttance of Mr. C. E. Lewis, Chairman and exhibitor member of the NEWS staff.

Mr. Lewis maintains this office at 729—7th Ave., Room 402, for the purpose of meeting and talking to exhibitors and managers.

Sound Films Create Preview Problem

THE coming of "sound" films "talkies" has created a new problem in sales previews. Now it seems that the various distributing companies cannot give sound previews in their small equipment-less projection rooms, and consequently the wired houses in Seattle are frequently utilized for trade showings. DeLuxe Theatres, Inc., often open their Egyptian Theatre noons to the film trade and similar activity is being scheduled for John Danz's downtown Colonial Theatre.

Lynn Peterson, former manager of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse and Music Box Theatres in Portland, Oregon, arrived here last week to assume the position of assistant manager of West Coast's Fifth Avenue Theatre. Ashland In St. Louis Reported For Sale

REPORT has it that the Ashland Theatre, 3520 North Newstead Avenue, St. Louis, will change hands very soon. It is understood that this 800-seat theatre and a nearby airdome of 1,000 seats are on the market.

St. Louis film stocks closed March 2 as follows: Skouras A $46 asked compared with a high for the year of $51.25, and St. Louis Amusement A at $20 bid against a high of $28 for this year.

The St. Louis Theatre, Grand and Delmar boulevards, operated by R-K-O interests, plans to install the new policy of sound pictures with vaudeville commencing March 24.

The grand opening of the Mastbaum Theatre, in Philadelphia, had a very much St. Louis atmosphere. There were present the brothers Skouras, Spyros, Charley and George and Bob Alton, Charles Previn, Stuart Barrie, Charles Dalh, William Goldman, Reeves Espy, Julius Curley and George Bowser.

Wally Vernon, master of ceremonies at the Granada Theatre, is sporting a new roadster.

With the state censorship and the anti-standing room sale bills dead, the latest advices from Jefferson City are the 10 per cent tax on amusements will probably die in the Educational Committee of the House. Governor Caulfield has sent word over to the Capitol that he will not sign any tax increase measures, but instead will insist on strict economy in all departments in an endeavor to solve some of the state's financial problems.

John Summers, negro footman of the New Grand Central Theatre, St. Louis, was held up by a negro bandit on Grand boulevard near Washington boulevard at 2 p. m. February 28 and robbed of $200.

Harry Schadiker has taken over the management of the Star, Orpheum and Broadway-Star theatres, in Hannibal, Mo., succeeding J. P. Price as general manager of the circuit.

Morris Engel, motion picture publicity man in the St. Louis territory, has been removed from the Jewish Hospital to the St. Louis Baptist Hospital at Franklin and Garrison avenues. He suffered a breakdown about four years ago and had been knocking about from one hospital to another ever since in a vain endeavor to win back his health.

The Griffith Amusement Company, of Guthrie, Okla., plans to remodel and enlarge its theatre.

Plans are being revised for R. E. Mills' new theatre in Chanute, Kans. The house will seat 600 persons.

Bids were opened March 1 by Fine Brothers, Evansville, Ind., for a new theatre to be erected at Washington and Kentucky avenues. The new house will cost about $200,000, and will be two-stories high on a site 60 by 125 feet.

Ritz Settles Troubles With Union Men

DIFFERENCE between the Ritz Theatre, Franklin, and its union employes, have been adjusted. A notice printed over the name of H. M. Kinsley, secretary of the union, published in connection with the theatre's newspaper advertisements on February 26, said: "Local No. 244 of The A. F. of M. is pleased to announce that the difficulty has been satisfactorily adjusted."

J. M. Blanchard, district representative of the Comerford theatres in Sunbury and vicinity, gave a talk in the Strand Theatre, that city, in connection with the regular shows on the night of March 1, in which he explained the intricacies of the mechanism of sound pictures. The Strand claimed to be the first theatre to introduce the explanation of sound pictures as a feature of entertainment.

RCA Photophone pictures were introduced for the first time in the Olympic Theatre, Altoona, on the night of February 16.

The only theatre in Wrightsville, York county, is to be razed to make way for the construction of the new bridge. It is the Imperial, managed by David S. Witmer.

Arthur Snyder, prominent motion picture exhibitor, of Pottstown, spent the month of February at Miami Beach, Florida.

Manager Walter Yost, of the Paramount Theatre, Mechanicsburg, recently granted use of the house to the Citizens Fire Company of that town.

The Tiffany-Stahl company is now represented in the Harrisburg territory by Mike Shulman. T. J. McDermitt has been transferred by Tiffany-Stahl to a part of New Jersey.

Frank E. Roberts on February 25 assumed the position of organist of the State Theatre, Johnstown, succeeding Harold Lyons who resigned.

It is reported that the Nineteenth Street Theatre, Allentown, recently closed, is shortly to be reopened under the management of Al Mainker, who now operates the Franklin Theatre, and who will also operate the new Capitol, as soon as its construction is completed. Sound equipment is now being installed in the Nineteenth and Capitol Theatres.

N. C. Theatre Opened After Renovations

AFTER having been completely renovated, the Bonita Theatre in Murphy, N. C., of which F. O. Bates is owner and manager, has reopened and is planning to present road show attractions. Two of the latest style Powers projectors have been installed, together with other new equipment. The Bonita was closed late in December as a result of the flu epidemic and Mr. Bates took advantage of the closing down to make many improvements in the house.

The Regent Theatre is now closed and is undergoing extensive renovations superintended by William H. Lee, architect. One of the features will be a modernistic lounge room, modeled on European standards. The policy of the Film Art Cinema under Mr. Gould's direction will be similar to that of the New York Film Guild Cinema.

Summerville Elected Toronto Alderman

W. A. SUMMERVILLE, proprietor of the Prince of Wales and Eastwood Theatres, Toronto, and an alderman of Toronto for the past eight years, was elected a member of the Civic Board of Control at Toronto by an overwhelming majority. Cont. Sommerville took his seat on February 27. The Toronto exhibitor was really elected on January 1, but was forced to run again when a technicality was raised.

Charlie Querrie, former sport celebrity of Canada, has just celebrated his eighth year as manager of the Palace Theatre, Toronto, a busy suburban house of the Famous Players chain.

Announcement is made that the Canadian Government has made arrangements for the presentation of its scenic and educational films in the universities of the United States on a 50-50 basis with United States pictures of similar type.

The mother of N. L. and Henry Nathanson, Toronto, died in St. Petersburg, Fla., and burial took place in Minneapolis, Minn., her home. N. L. Nathanson is managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., the largest and most powerful chain in Canada, and Henry Nathanson is Pathe general manager with Regal Films, Ltd., Toronto.
